POLICE RAISE SLUSH FUND, HOYNE SAYS

Detective Capt. O'Brien, License Officers, and Pat O'Malley Named.

Charges that a "slush fund" is being collected among members of the police department, saloonkeepers, divekeepers, and owners of shady hotels for the defense of the police officials indicted in connection with the police graft investigation were made yesterday by State's Attorney Hoyne.

The prosecutor also asserted he is in possession of reliable information that the backers of the accused men are mustering a corps of policemen to influence prospective jurors who will be called for selection at the trial of the policemen.

Gives Notice to Mayor.

Mr. Hoyne adopted publicity as a means of informing Mayor Thompson, the city council, and the city civil service commission of the activities designed to thwart justice. He suggested city officials would take whatever action they deemed necessary.

In the event of no other action, the state's attorney intimated a grand jury investigation will be instituted.

A large sum of money for the defense already has been collected, Mr. Hoyne said, but he does not know the exact amount.

Names Capt. P. D. O'Brien.

Capt. P. D. O'Brien, chief of detectives, was named by Mr. Hoyne as an intermediary in the handling of the money besides standing as sponsor for the payment of attorney's fees for Walter O'Brien, his nephew and former detective sergeant, who is under indictment for bribery and operating a confidence game.

Policeman William Cummings, assigned to license duty at the South Clark street station, was mentioned as collector at that station. Pat O'Malley, South Clark street saloonkeeper, was referred to as another go-between in the handling of the money, and William Luthardt, secretary to Chief of Police Healey, as being an aid in the preparations of a defense.

Other license officers assigned to the remaining stations were accused by the prosecutor of having made collections at their respective stations and among friends.

Tells of $700 in One Wad.

While Mr. Hoyne could specify no amount, he asserted that he knew of one instance where $700 had been turned over to Capt. O'Brien at one time.

"I have had occasion to say before that while I am not trying to interfere with the detective bureau or any officers of the police department, I would not permit, on the other hand, them to interfere with the state's attorney's office or its prosecutions," Mr. Hoyne said.

"I publicly call the attention of the mayor, the city council, and the civil service commission to the activity of members of the present police department in obstructing the prosecution of police officials now under indictment.

"The 'slush fund' collected from the police by William F. Stine and his conviction is still fresh in mind. Despite that warning and all said by this office a collection has been taken up in the police department to provide attorneys' fees and other expenses of the defense of accused policemen, the collections being done by license officers in the various stations.

Here's One Illustration.

"One illustration will suffice. Officer Cummings, license officer at the South Clark street station, was in charge of the collections in that district, and it was intimated to numerous policemen at that station that contributions should be forthcoming.

"Money collected by Cummings on the outside and the contributions of the policemen was turned over directly to Pat O'Malley, saloonkeeper. By O'Malley the money, or part of it, was turned over to Capt. P. D. O'Brien, head of the detective bureau. At that time Capt. O'Brien was at the South Clark street station. I also understand that the captain stands as guarantor for Attorney Northup for the latter's attorney's fees to defend ex-Sergt. Walter O'Brien, a nephew of Capt. O'Brien.

Back to Seer Trust Days.

"It will be remembered that the clairvoyants and the other con men who operated in Chicago extensively during the latter part of 1911 and 1912, operated in the South Clark street police district while

NO SUNDAY BAR AT BLACKSTONE

One Downtown Hotel Bows to Campaign; Drake Foresees Prohibition.

This will be "Dry Chicago" day in the bar of the Blackstone hotel as well as in scores of Chicago churches.

The Blackstone hotel management yesterday recorded itself as the first downtown bar owner to bow to the state law requiring the closing of saloons on Sunday. The action was precipitated by the letter of Attorney Arthur B. McCoid of the Chicago citizens' committee, addressed to the larger Chicago hotels, calling attention to the law and the penalties for its violation.

Drake Foresees Prohibition.

President Tracy C. Drake of the Drake Hotel company, owner of the Blackstone, yesterday telephoned the hotel's capitulation to Attorney McCoid, following a meeting of the board of directors.

"Prohibition is on its way in the United States," said Manager Drake to a TRIBUNE reporter. "The Blackstone hotel is prepared to meet it gracefully and not combatively. When the hotel was planned we recognized that prohibition was bound to come and planned our bar arrangements accordingly, so needed changes may be made easily when prohibition arrives. As a result we are in a position to be less hurt financially by the arrival of prohibition than any other hotel in the United States.

Wants to Obey Law.

"Sunday closing is merely a step on the way. We do not propose that in the campaign Mr. McCoid is conducting that the Blackstone hotel shall be the 'goat.'

"If a test case is wanted, somebody else is welcome to the job of going into court to defend Sunday opening. Should it be decided that the law is invalid, we will open again on Sunday."

"How about drinks with meals?" Mr. Drake was asked.

"That's like serving drinks in one's own home," he responded. "Drinks will be served upstairs, but the bar proper will be shut."

Other Hotels Balk.

"I am gratified by Mr. Drake's acceptance of the situation," Attorney McCoid commented. "It will have an excellent effect in stimulating observance of the law in the community. I am only sorry the Blackstone is the only hotel yet to accede to the warning contained in the letter, which also went to the Congress, the Palmer house, the La Salle, the Great Northern, and the Sherman.

"The La Salle wants to fight the law and I am willing. I have ten investigators who will be working tomorrow, and arrests at the La Salle will be just as good as anywhere else."

Manager E. J. Stevens of the Hotel La Salle said emphatically he will keep the La Salle's bar open on Sunday as long as the bars of other hotels are open. He had just been talking with the management of the Palmer house by telephone and had received assurance that the Palmer house will take a similar stand.

"The Hotel Owners' association will meet to take action as soon as I am arrested," Mr. Stevens said. "I am prepared to go to court. As long as other hotels keep their bars open we cannot afford to close ours. Our attitude is shared generally by other hotels in the association."

"Dry" Activities Today.

Mr. McCoid is to speak tonight at the South Auburn Congregational church, Seventy-seventh and Normal avenues, on "The Dark Side of Chicago."

The Dry Chicago federation, of which G. F. Rinehart is superintendent, announced the names of 106 speakers who will address audiences in Chicago this forenoon and this evening in the interest of the "Dry Chicago" movement.

SEE THROUGH SOLID WALLS BY NEW MARCONI INVENTION.

Originator of Wireless Telegraphy Tells of Apparatus Before Sailing for Italy from New York.

New York, May 22.—William Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph, made it known today before sailing for Italy that he has invented an apparatus by means of which it is possible for a person standing beside a solid partition, such as a brick wall, to look through the partition and observe what is happening on the other side, just as if there were no obstacle interposed to the vision.

Mr. Marconi is quoted as saying that the device has been perfected to the point where persons in a room can see persons in an adjoining room, looking through the wall, if the persons viewed are close to the wall, but that at a distance from the wall they become blurred.

U. S. AND BRITAIN BREAK ON TRADE

Advisers Cease Negotiations and America May Demand End of Interference.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—The development today of an open break between the trade advisers of the state department and of the British embassy suddenly brought to a head the question of adopting stronger measures in dealing with British interference with legitimate American trade.

It now appears not unlikely that the president and his advisers will decide to dispatch to London without delay the note, already drafted, which states that Washington cannot longer tolerate the high handed disregard of American sovereignty on the high seas and of arbitrary interference with neutral commerce generally. The outline of this note was published by THE TRIBUNE last Thursday.

Relations Are Broken Off.

The development today was the severance of diplomatic relations between Robert F. Rose of Chicago, the foreign trade adviser of the state department, and Sir Richard Crawford, the special commercial envoy sent from London to assist the British embassy in handling questions of the interference with American trade produced by the long range blockade.

Sir Richard Crawford is charged by the administration with having failed to carry out an agreement whereby American goods contracted for in Germany before the blockade became effective on March 1 were to be passed by the British authorities for shipment to the United States up to June 15.

In addition the British representatives and the London government are charged with seeking to place the United States in the position of acquiescing officially in the British control of American commerce with Germany.

Bryan's Statement of Case.

Secretary of State Bryan issued this statement of the action of the department:

"In view of differences which have arisen in the informal and unofficial conferences between Sir Richard Crawford, the commercial adviser of the British embassy, and Robert F. Rose and W. B. Fleming, the trade advisers of the department of state, who have been, in a personal capacity, representing the importers of the United States, Mr. Rose and Mr. Fleming have decided that they cannot continue these conferences until certain of the difficulties have been removed, and they have therefore made a full report of what has taken place to the department of state and will await its action."

Agreement Which Was Broken.

The administration protested to Great Britain against the order in council establishing the long range blockade on the

Board Refuses Permit as Condemned Man Writes "Stop It."

"The Frank Case," a photoplay dramatizing the incidents surrounding the murder of Mary Phagan and the trial of Leo M. Frank, cannot be shown in Chicago. Second Deputy Funkhouser yesterday announced his refusal to issue a permit after extraordinary efforts had been made by the promoters to obtain his approval. The second deputy viewed the picture for the second time in the morning.

When the film was first exhibited before the censorship board one of the censors wrote to Frank to ask his opinion. The reply was in part as follows:

"It appears that some fakers are trying to utilize the notoriety that the Frank case has been given in the newspapers to turn over an honest (?) penny.

"Stop It," Says Frank.

"You have the right curve. Stop that photoplay. We had one stopped last week in New York. The board of censors did the trick.

"It is of course unnecessary for me to tell you how deplorable it would be to have the tragic death of Mary Phagan and my unfortunate predicament capitalized."

None of the actual characters of the Frank case are shown in the picture, it is said. The scenes of the murder and trial are utilized, but the leading parts are taken by movie actors.

"The film is just a commercial proposition," said one of the censors. "No actual murder is staged, but nearly all the other incidents, including the riots around the courthouse, are depicted. No sympathy is created for Frank."

Basis for Rejection.

Maj. Funkhouser based his rejection on a clause in the ordinance prohibiting the issuance of permits for pictures tending "to create contempt or hatred for any class of law abiding citizens," and also on a state law making it unlawful "to exhibit persons . . . who have become conspicuous through some criminal act," etc.

GOVERNOR ELECT'S STAND.

Macon, Ga., May 22.—Gov.-Elect Harris in a statement here tonight declared that only Georgia's interests would be considered if the question of granting clemency to Leo M. Frank was brought before him. The governor elect's statement:

"You can just say for Nat Harris that if the matter of dealing executive clemency to the condemned man is to be considered by him that the entire outside world will not be taken into consideration one bit. It is entirely a Georgia matter, and if I am to consider the case I shall consider it altogether from a Georgia basis, with the interests of Georgia and the interest of Georgia persons at heart."

Mr. Harris will take the oath as governor on June 26.

DECREES LOCK DOORS AGAINST PEACE; NORTH OF ITALY NOW IN 'STATE OF WAR'

ROME, May 22, 11:30 P. M.—The following royal Italian decree was promulgated tonight:

> "From May 23 (Sunday) a state of war is declared in the provinces of Sondrio, Brescia, Verona, Vicenza, Bellano, Udine, Venezia, Treviso, Padua, Mantua, and Ferrara, and the islands and communes on the Adriatic coast, as well as in all the fortresses which may be declared in a state of resistance.
> "This proclamation is made by order of the ministers of war and marine."

[The provinces named in the declaration as in "a state of war" are those bordering on and neighboring the Austrian frontier—practically all of the states of Venezia and Lombarde, except that part of Lombarde about Milan, Como, and Pavia.]

The step is similar to the one taken by Germany preceding its formal entrance into the war. It places the frontier districts under supreme control of the military, which may order the civilian population to surrender their homes at once for military purposes.

Issuance of the decree followed several hours after publication of mobilization orders, calling the land and sea forces of Italy to the colors.

Another royal decree requisitioned all horses in the kingdom and vehicles of all kinds. All railway rolling stock was included in this order as a natural sequence of the mobilization decree. At a late hour there had been no interruption of regular train service, but it was announced that practically all trains would be in use for troop movements tomorrow.

Several hours before the decree commandeering vehicles was formally signed, it was, in effect, put into execution by the military authorities. Soldiers with lists of automobile owners made the rounds in Rome with the word that the motor cars were to be held in readiness for delivery to the government at a moment's notice.

A supplementary statement issued officially here at a late hour said that a "general mobilization order" would become effective tomorrow. Mobilization orders posted last night called out the troops of the first line. The royal decree to be promulgated today, it was reported, will call to the colors additional regiments, giving assurance that Italy will enter the war with more than 1,000,000 men.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 23, 5:10 a. m.—The Havas agency announces that all communications with Italy were cut at midnight.

BULLETIN.

ROME, via London, May 23, 4:01 a. m.—The Giornale d'Italia says that an Austrian patrol has crossed the frontier. The few Germans left in Rome have taken refuge in the Chinese legation.

According to this paper, the announcement has been made that Field Marshal von Hindenburg will take command of the Austro-German troops against Italy.

BULLETIN.

VERONA, Italy, May 23, 3 a. m.—The Austrian barracks at Roveredo, a town in the Tyrol with about 12,000 Italian inhabitants, was blown up yesterday. The police immediately placed under arrest many Italian citizens, although there was no evidence to show that the Italians were in any way responsible for the explosion.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

ROME, May 22, 11:15 p. m.—All Italy awaits the declaration of war against Austria-Hungary, already prepared by the Italian cabinet, submitted to King Victor Emmanuel, and approved by him.

The cabinet went into session today immediately after the king signed two decrees, one the act passed by both houses of parliament to confer extraordinary powers on the government "for the duration of the war" and the other ordering a general mobilization of the country's forces on land and sea.

Placed in State of War.

Later many provinces in the north of Italy and communes and islands in the Adriatic sea were decreed in a state of war and private automobiles, other vehicles, and horses were requisitioned for government use.

The cabinet after a lengthy session adjourned without making any public announcement. It was rumored that it had been determined to postpone a formal declaration of war until Sunday to permit several thousand Italians still in Austria and Germany to make their way safely across the border.

Practically all the Germans and Austrians who intend to leave Italy already have departed, but a number of Italy's subjects who refused to believe the situation actually serious are still in the two enemy countries.

AUSTRIA MAY DECLARE WAR.

The government's plans, it is admitted, may be upset by a sudden aggressive step at Vienna. News that Italy has published the mobilization decree may cause Austria to throw down the gauntlet with a formal declaration of war today.

Italy's declaration of war, when it is published, will be signed by King Victor Emmanuel and the members of the cabinet, and will explain how Italy has been driven to take up arms and will appeal to all citizens to do their duty in such a way that victory will be assured.

Another royal proclamation will be addressed to the army and to the navy, praying for their success.

Duc d'Avarna, the Italian ambassador to Austria-Hungary, is reported to have left Vienna late tonight. The foreign office would not confirm this report, but denied a rumor that Sig. Bolatti, the Italian ambassador to Germany, demanded his passports today.

ENVOY STILL IN ROME.

Despite persistent rumors that the German and Austro-Hungarian ambassadors have left Rome the two men are still at their embassies, although all preparations have been made for a hasty departure.

Baron von Macchio, Austro-Hungarian ambassador, was received today by Foreign Minister Sonnino. It is supposed he asked for his passports.

As he left he was reported to have shaken hands cordially with Baron Sonnino and other attaches of the office. The Austrian ambassador's face was lined with dejection as he stepped into his limousine and was whirled away.

CLASHES ON THE BORDER.

While there has been no official declaration of war, hostilities really have begun.

Thousands of Austrian troops are facing the soldiers of Italy along the frontier.

There have been clashes on the border at several points where the Italian Alpine troops pursued Austrian soldiers who had crossed the frontier.

The Italian consul general at Munich has been ordered to close the consulate and leave Munich with the consulate staff.

MARTIAL LAW IN TRIESTE.

Martial law has been proclaimed in Trieste. All the inhabitants have been ordered to hand over to the authorities arms, munitions, and explosives.

Nobody is allowed to appear in the streets after dark. The military authorities have taken over the telegraph, mail, and railroad systems.

Expulsion of Italians from Trieste, Pola, Goriza, and Gradisca by the thousands continues. They are not permitted to enter Italy, but are loaded into freight trains and sent to the interior of Austria or Hungary. These forced removals are resulting in much distress.

Reports from Trieste say there is much distress in that seaport. The city is virtually without bread, and even cornmeal for the "polenta" or porridge of the people is extremely scarce.

The military now is in absolute control of all railroads, an official decree to that effect being published by the Official Gazette. This condition went into effect last night. All regular passenger schedules will be canceled.

Troop trains were leaving Rome by the score last night. As fast as they can be transported a million troops are being rushed northward. The clamp came down firmly on all dispatches regarding troop movements, but it is known here that the military were in close touch with the situation.

Italy expects to astonish the world by the rapidity with which mobilization is completed and its first armies rushed against the Austrian frontier.

CALLS 3,500,000 MEN.

The mobilization order which was posted on the walls last night calls for the class from 1876 to 1896.

This means that about 3,500,000 men are called to the colors. The permanent Italian army consists of 491,00[illegible] men, the mobile militia 328,001. [illegible] territorial militia 2,281,802. [illegible] re 41,692 officers.

Gen. Cadorna, chief of staff, has made an announcement that no newspaper correspondents will be permitted to accompany the Italian armies. Taken in connection with Italy's well known strict methods of censorship, this is taken to mean that there will be little news of the actual operations except insofar as the Italian government wishes to make public.

SOCIALISTS JOIN WAR.

The official Socialists, who up to the last moment gave enthusiastic support to the idea of neutrality, have now announced that they are with the government. The party intends to issue a manifesto to the country explaining its position and calling upon all members to rally to the support of the king. This makes all Italy unanimous in favor of war.

Admiral Bettolo has telegraphed to M. Filipesca, president of the Italo-Roumanian league, saying that in the hour of war the thoughts of Italy will naturally turn to Roumania for active assistance. It is reported here on good authority that the mobilization of the Roumanian army has been ordered.

The vatican accepts war as inevitable. The papal consistory, which was to have been held this month to fill the vacancies in the college of cardinals, has been postponed sine die. A papal document calling on Italians to do their duty to the country and praying for speedy termination of hostilities is to be issued at once.

NATION WILD FOR WAR.

All Italy seems wild with the war spirit. Rome was rocked last night by the roaring cheers from the throats of 200,000 men and women who marched and countermarched past the government buildings and the royal palace waving the silken tri-colors and hysterically shouting for war.

Scores of private automobiles, part of them commandeered and others voluntarily turned over to the government, made their way with difficulty through the crowds. They bore dispatch bearers with messages from Italian commanders already at the front or carried officers speeding for the railway stations to join their regiments.

From Milan, Florence, Naples, Genoa, and Venice came reports of similar demonstrations. The interior towns heard rumors all day of frontier clashes and naval battles in the Adriatic and poured telegraphic inquiries into Rome.

Streets Crowded with People.

Yesterday's demonstration was a continuation of Friday night's enthusiasm, when veritable rivers of humanity poured through the streets to the quirinal to pay tribute to King Victor Emmanuel. Thousands were packed into the square.

The scene which was enacted when his majesty and the members of his family appeared upon a balcony overlooking the square has few parallels in the history of Rome. It was estimated that the crowd numbered several hundred thousand. The Roman hosts were carried away upon a floodtide of Latin enthusiasm when the monarch appeared.

The windows on a balcony of the quirinal palace were opened and a red damask covering was thrown over the parapet. This was a sign that the king was about to appear, and the impatience of the crowd increased. There were cries of "Long live the king," and "Long live the house of Savoy."

Cheers for Royal Family.

Finally the king and the queen and the royal children came out upon the balcony. His majesty was in the uniform of a general. The crown prince, dressed as a sailor boy, waved his cap to the multitude.

The excitement of the people arose almost to a delirium.

The king then did an unprecedented thing. He gave orders that the Italian flag be raised to the balcony. Then, amid the thundering cheers of the multitude, his majesty advanced to the national standard and folding it in his arms embraced it.

The royal family then retired within the palace. Later the king called a group of the aldermen inside and to them expressed his gratitude for the loyalty and patriotism of the Roman people.

Crowd Carries U. S. Flag.

After the demonstration before the Quirinal a great crowd, with an American flag carried at the head, went to the Del Drago palace, the residence of United States Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page. There were loud cheers for America and demands for revenge for the Lusitania victims.

Great excitement was caused by the report that Sig. Bollati, Italian ambassador at Berlin, had been assaulted while driving in the street. It was learned later, however, that the incident was not so serious as it was thought and that the police had begun a rigid investigation. Letters of regret were sent to Sig. Bollati by Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and Foreign Minister von Jagow.

Revenge for Berlin Incident.

In spite of disavowals by high German officials of the attack upon the Italian ambassador, Rome newspapers consider the incident a grave reflection upon Italian dignity.

The Idea Nazionale declares that the excuses of the German chancellor and foreign minister are insufficient and that the insult must be revenged.

The Tribune believes a fitting reply would be for the people of Rome to accompany the German ambassador to the station the day he leaves the capital and "return Latin civility for an act of German barbarism."

Austrians on Adige River.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 22.—The Journal publishes a dispatch from Rome announcing that the Austrians are concentrating large forces along the upper Adige river.

The Adige flows from the Tyrolese Alps into Lombardy and enters the Gulf of Venice.

Call Austrian Landsturm.

BUDAPEST, via London, May 22.—The official Gazette publishes a decree calling up the landsturm from 18 to 50 years of age for military examination. It will be decided later whether these classes are wanted for military service.

DISGUISED GERMAN AERO DROPS BOMBS UPON PARIS.

Three Missiles Cause Little Damage and Defending Machines Chase the Attacker Away.

PARIS, May 22.—German aviators flew over Paris at dusk this evening in an aeroplane disguised as a French machine. Because of the disguise the French air scouts allowed it to pass the frontier, believing that it was one of their own aeroplanes.

Flying high over the city, the German aviators dropped three bombs. One of the bombs fell in the Seine close to the Eiffel tower, another on outbuildings of the Bon Marché store, and the third in Rue St. Charles.

All three bombs were ineffective and virtually no damage was done. The German aeroplane was driven off by a French machine.

Dispatches from Soissons reported that a Zeppelin, escorted by two taubes, crossed the French lines headed for Paris. French air craft attacked the airship and after an exchange of shots the dirigible turned her nose about and returned to the German lines. The police issued warnings at 10 p. m. and the city was plunged in darkness.

Two Who Escaped to Milan Say Many Thousands Have Been Detained at Border.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, May 22.—Two Italian miners who worked for many years in the mines in Westphalia, Germany, arrived at Milan today, having managed to escape the vigilance of the guards during the night. These miners report that many thousands of Italians, who were returning home, have been detained on the Swiss-German frontier beyond Basel, the German authorities refusing to allow them to leave the country.

Austria Paints Italy as Traitor to the Alliance

VIENNA, May 22.—Baron Stephen Burian von Rajecz, the Austro-Hungarian minister for foreign affairs, today handed to the Italian ambassador a note expressing "painful surprise" at the decision of Italy to "put an end in such an abrupt manner to the treaty which was based on the community of our most important political interests; which has guaranteed security and peace to our states for so many years, and which has rendered Italy notorious services."

The note says the astonishment of Austria-Hungary is more than justified, as the Italian government repeatedly announced its wish to maintain and even to strengthen the bonds of alliance between the two countries.

Explains Serbian War Edict.

Baron Burian von Rajecz repeated that the object of the ultimatum to Serbia was purely and simply to protect the monarchy against the revolutionary machinations of Serbia and that this aim could in no way affect the interests of Italy.

When the conflict assumed a European character, Italy proclaimed its neutrality without "throwing out the slightest suggestion that this war, which was provoked by Russia and prepared for long beforehand, could be of a nature to deprive the triple alliance of its raison d'etre," and "made no communication which could justify the belief that it regarded the proceeding of Austria-Hungary as 'a flagrant violation, both in letter and in spirit, of the alliance and treaty.'"

Alliance Still Held.

The cabinets of Vienna and Berlin, even though deploring Italy's resolution to remain neutral, a resolution which in "our view was hardly compatible with the spirit of the treaty, nevertheless loyally admitted the view of the Italian government, and an exchange of views which then took place established unaltered the maintenance of the triple alliance."

Under article VII. of the treaty Italy presented claims which aimed to securing certain compensation in the event of Austria-Hungary obtaining advantages from the war, territorial or otherwise, in the Balkan peninsula.

Austria-Hungary accepted this standpoint and declared itself ready to submit the question to examination, at the same time pointing out that so long as the eventful advantages according to Austria-Hungary remained unknown it would be difficult to fix such compensation.

Holds Italy Acquiesced.

Baron Burian von Rajecz contended that Italy shared this view, as was shown in the declaration made by the late Marquis Antonio di San Giuliano, dated Aug. 25 last year, in which the then Italian foreign minister said that "it would be premature to speak of compensations."

Nevertheless, Baron Burian continues, Austria-Hungary always has been ready to begin conversations on the subject, and when Italy made its demands Austria-Hungary accepted even this as a basis for negotiations, although in its opinion article VII. of the treaty never referred to the territory of the treaty bound parties, but related purely and simply to the Balkan peninsula.

Says Austria Made Sacrifices.

While it was impossible to accede to all the demands Austria-Hungary, with a sincere desire to reach an understanding, made sacrifices which were only justified by a "desire to uphold the alliance existing for so many years to the common advantage of both countries."

Replying to the Italian objection that the concessions offered by Austria-Hungary were only to be realized at an indefinite time—namely, at the end of the war—Baron Burian says that Austria-Hungary was ready to offer all necessary guarantees for the purpose of preparing for this transfer and insure its "even being carried out at no distant date."

In conclusion the note says:

"The royal Italian government, in an arbitrary manner, has disburdened itself of all its obligations, and the Austro-Hungarian government declines responsibility for all the consequences that may arise from this procedure."

ITALIAN WOMEN TO WORK AT HOME FOR MEN AT FRONT

Mme. Montessori Says They Are Trained to Fill Places Left by Soldiers.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 22.—The Italian government has been training the women of Italy for months in preparation for the coming war, Mme. Marie Montessori the educator, said here today.

"For months the women in Italy have been taught to replace men, to do the things the men will abandon when they go to the front," Mme. Montessori said. "The women have been drilled and organized in their various duties and are prepared for any eventualities.

"They are not enthusiastic for the war, but accept it as inevitable and are probably better prepared for it than the women of any of the belligerents. Our women will be called to their new duties just as the soldiers will be called."

WARNS BRITAIN OF BIG SCANDAL WHICH IMPENDS

Garvin Says He Will Expose It If Necessary for Good of United Kingdom.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, May 22.—J. L. Garvin, editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, in a preparatory note to a five column article to be published tomorrow morning in the Sunday Observer dealing with the political crisis, hints at a still greater scandal in public affairs. This has not come to light and the writer says that, for various reasons, the full story of the extraordinary episode in the political history of the war cannot now be told.

"Elsewhere," he says, alluding to his article in the Pall Mall Gazette which first told of the cabinet crisis, "we laid stress on warning and it is necessary to repeat it. Our reserve in this matter is deliberate, but, to a certain extent, conditional.

Disclose More If Needed.

"If public duty requires further disclosure—and we profoundly hope it may be avoided—the duty must be faced and done, nor do we doubt that some one will be found capable and with the requisite courage.

"It would be far better," he continues, "to have one great outburst of scandal which would be dissipated by a loud explosion than to have illegitimate influences and intrigue sapping on the one hand the foundations of the duty and discipline of both services while, on the other hand, it is threatening the safety of every minister of state, no matter who he may be or what office he may fill."

Study Makeup of Cabinet.

The formation of the coaltition cabinet has taken definite shape, but no announcement will be made until after the Whitsun holidays, Premier Asquith, several of his late colleagues and the Unionists who are to assume office having left for the country after a series of conferences.

Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, whose quarrel with Baron Fisher, first sea lord, was largely responsible for the crisis, bade farewell today to the heads of various departments at the admiralty.

It is almost certain that David Lloyd George will remain chancellor of the exchequer and that Reginald McKenna, the Marquis of Crewe, A. J. Balfour, Andrew Bonar Law, J. Austen Chamberlain and the Marquis of Lansdowne will be included in the new ministry.

Want Northcliffe Punished.

The attempt to drive Lord Kitchener out of the war office, largely inspired by Lord Northcliffe through his London newspapers, has collapsed upon the heads of its instigators.

The collapse of the attacks, however, has not satisfied Lord Kitchener's supporters, who are demanding that the Daily Mail, the Times and the Evening News be prosecuted under the Defense of the Realm act.

"A fact which the nation and the new national government must face" the Star says, "is that at the most critical moment of the war, in which the very life of the British empire is at stake, our fate is made the plaything of sensational newspapers. The question which the nation and the new government have got to decide here and now is whether the Northcliffe dictatorship is to go on or is to be smashed.

"Lord Northcliffe must be crushed. There must be no more of this miserable cowardice which sacrifices the sacred purposes of the war to a frenzied fool who has got hold of a large stock of dynamite."

Former Ally Now Enemy.

The Morning Post, which for some time was regarded as an active ally of the Northcliffe newspapers in their assaults upon the war office and the admiralty, and which, indeed, went further than the Daily Mail ever did in assailing Winston Churchill, is now one of the bitterest assailants of Lord Northcliffe.

"Lord Northcliffe has never fully recovered," it said this morning, "from the shock of discovering that this war is not merely devised for the sake of the half penny and penny newspapers. At the beginning of the campaign his need of sensation had to be satisfied with nothing less than the destruction of the British army."

This refers to an incident of the Mons-Charleroi campaign, when the Times was rebuked by Premier Asquith on the floor of the house and its editors narrowly escaped being called to account for publishing a sensational story of the disastrous retreat of the British expeditionary force.

TERRIFIC FIGHT DUE IN THE WEST

French Says Heavy Cannon Duel Forecasts a Big German Attack.

GAINS BY THE BRITISH.

LONDON, May 22.—Official dispatches from Gen. French tonight forecast a big battle along the British front from Ypres south to a point west of La Bassee.

A violent artillery engagement opened last night and was proceeding today. The Germans began sweeping the British lines northeast of Festubert with shell fire, evidently planning to launch an infantry attack. The British guns roared a reply that held the enemy to his trenches, except at a few points where the Germans attempted to advance but were repulsed. The British have gained more ground south of Quinquerue.

Heavy Fire Near Arras.

The following official communication was issued by the war office in Paris tonight:

"In the sector to the north of Arras the enemy bombarded our positions violently, but our artillery replied successfully. We took several additional houses to the northern part of Ablain and made some prisoners.

"We have brought up short an attempt of the enemy to attack to the north of Neuville.

"Our troops completed yesterday evening the cleaning up of the trenches known as 'The White Way,' situated to the south of the Lorette heights. A large number of Germans were killed in the branch lines of these trenches. Others surrendered. All the spur of 'The White Way' is in our hands."

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, May 22.—German army headquarters today gave out a report on the progress of hostilities reading as follows:

"British and French attacks were repulsed yesterday to the southwest of Neuve Chapelle, where colored English troops were taken prisoner, and on the heights of Lorette. In some places the fighting is still going on.

"Southwest of Lille and in the Argonne the enemy made use of mines charged with poisonous gases."

DIPLOMATIC CRISIS PASSED BETWEEN U. S. AND GERMANY

Interchanges Between Washington and Berlin Reported to Have Adjusted Points of Difference.

BERLIN, May 22.—The diplomatic crisis between the United States and Germany passed today. An acute situation developed yesterday. But differences have been adjusted and tonight the fear of a rupture has been dissipated.

Confidential communications of the highest importance passed all week between Berlin and Washington. The most critical stage in these confidential exchanges was reached yesterday. Exactly what occurred obviously cannot be divulged. But what may be said to have been the real crisis was reached following the personal visit paid Ambassador Gerard yesterday by Herr von Jagow, the German foreign secretary, and the conferences a few hours later between the American ambassador and Under Secretary Zimmerman of the German foreign office.

The work of drafting the German reply to the American note went forward rapidly today. In all probability the reply will be delivered to Washington late Tuesday or Wednesday.

HIS LAST LETTER JESTS WITH WAR

British Lieutenant Writes of the "Inappropriate" Things Germans Do.

"The inappropriate Germans," by whose arms he was killed, formed the whimsical topic for the last letter written by Second Lieut. Cecil MacMillan Dyer of the Fourth English Rifle brigade, who fell in action on the western battle front April 8.

Lieut. Dyer was a grandson of Dr. Charles Volney Dyer, surgeon at Fort Dearborn in 1834. His father, Louis Dyer, was a native of Chicago, but later became a member of the faculty of Oxford university, where the lieutenant was born. Two of Lieut. Dyer's aunts now live in Chicago—Mrs. Adolf Helle of 524 Barry avenue and Mrs. Stella Dyer Loring, president of the Loring School for Girls at 4600 Ellis avenue.

Frost Bite in Both Feet.

"In my last bout in the trenches," Lieut. Dyer's final letter home said, "I have got a touch of frost bite in both feet—nothing serious, but it means going back for three weeks or so, the doctor says. Most annoying, as I was just getting nicely into the way of things.

"The first twenty-four hours we were in reserve, but we had a more risky job than if we had been actually in the trenches, as on three occasions in the night I took fatigue parties up to firing line with sandbags, brushwood, etc. As the trench is there only seventy yards from the Germans, and as one has to go bang across an open field we were pretty lucky to get only one hit.

Most "Inappropriate," He Says.

"Once, when we were pretty close, the Germans sent up a flare and I had to lie down flat in several feet of mud; most inappropriate things these Germans do!

"It makes it all the more annoying having to go 'back' (soldier talk for leaving the action front) when I've never felt better in my life, and honestly I'm quite enjoying things. We were frightfully bucked up with the shortbread which arrived last night, when we got back from the fire trench."

ROSTAND WIELDS LASH IN POEM ON BERNSTORFF.

Assails His "Hypocritical Grief" in Call at White House to Convey Condolence on Lusitania Case.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, May 22.—Edmond Rostand publishes a ninety-two line poem in the Figaro describing Bernstorff's call at the White House to present the kaiser's condolence for the American losses of the Lusitania. The poem gives two lines to Bernstorff and "his hypocritical grief," then two lines to the scene on the Irish coast when the Lusitania went down.

After Bernstorff is described dressed in deep mourning entering the White House there is a parenthetical clause on "Women's bruised breasts dashing against the cliffs."

One verse about President Wilson says that behind him stand Lincoln, virtue, Washington, and glory, but they are invisible to Bernstorff. The German ambassador is described as saying that those who sailed despite the German warning were aggressors, and then another parenthetical clause follows: "Over there a blonde maiden is washed upon the shore with her three sisters."

The poem contains a line about Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and his heroism in giving up his life belt to a woman.

ASSAILS U. S. IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, May 22.—The first organized demonstration against the United States was held here today under the auspices of the German Defense union. Resolutions were adopted protesting against America supplying the allies with arms and ammunition. Councilor Wagner was cheered for three minutes when he made a bitter attack against the American policies.

BRITISH TROOPS DIE IN WRECK

Triple Collision of Trains Causes Death of 164 Persons.

CARLISLE, England, May 23, 3 a. m.—The Caledonian railway officials early this morning announced, that about 164 persons were killed and 124 seriously injured in yesterday's triple collision at Gretna, near this city. Nearly 300 were less seriously injured.

Most of the victims were soldiers. Five hundred men of one regiment were on the troop train. When the roll was called after the wreck only fifty-two officers and men responded. Numbers of others, however, were engaged in caring for their wounded comrades.

The troop train collided first with a local from Carlisle, and before the occupants were able to get clear of the wreckage the express from London to Glasgow crashed into them. The result was terrifying. Locomotives and cars, shattered and splintered, were hurled about in confusion.

Fire started and spread with great rapidity through the wreckage.

Railway officials tonight said they were utterly unable to explain how the wreck occurred. The troop train, bound for Carlisle, was supposed to have been on a side track when it collided head on with the local train. Practically every member of both train crews was killed; hence there was no one to give warning to the London-Glasgow flyer.

TEUTONS CEASE HEAVY ATTACKS UPON PRZEMYSL

Berlin Admits Temporary Halt in Drive Against Russians in Galicia.

BERLIN, May 22.—The German war office this afternoon virtually confirmed reports that the Austro-German forces have temporarily ceased their violent attacks around Przemysl.

An official statement said there "were no important changes in the Galician fighting." In the Russian province of Kovno cavalry skirmishes have occurred, the statement continuing:

"To the east of Windau, in Courland, Russia, there have been cavalry engagements. At Shavli, in Kovno province, on the Dubysa river, Russian night attacks were repulsed. Two hundred Russians were taken prisoners."

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, May 22.—The Austro-German forces which threatened Przemysl now are on the defensive, according to an official statement issued by the Russian general staff tonight. During May 20 and 21 the Russians took the offensive on the left bank of the San river, drove the Teutons from the villages of Krawce, Biercza, Przyszow, and Kamerale, and repulsed a German counter attack near Nisko. On the right bank of the San the Germans were driven from the village of Ignace on the Luboczowka. South and east of Przemysl Austrian attacks between the Tysmienica and Stry rivers were repulsed.

Near Shavli in Courland the Russians continue pressing the Germans back on the left banks of the Windau and Wenta rivers. Further south, on the Narew river, in Poland, there is desultory fighting.

Austrian Official Statement.

VIENNA, May 22.—The Austro-German allies are gaining ground slowly in the great battle now in progress in central Galicia. Announcement was made at the war office today as follows:

"Fighting is proceeding in middle Galicia. The allied troops have maintained the territory gained against all Russian counter attacks. In slowly progressing attacks we are gaining further ground daily.

"Along the line of the Pruth river it is generally quiet. At Bojana, east of Czernowitz, in Bukowina, hostile attempts to reach the south bank of the river failed, with heavy losses."

Russians Gaining in Bukowina.

PARIS, May 22.—The right wing of the Austrian army in Bukowina is retreating toward the Carpathians, according to a Havas dispatch from Bucharest filed Thursday. The Austrian rear guard is reported to be making desperate efforts to cover the retreat and check the Russian offensive.

KING EMMANUEL'S COUSIN GIVES PALACE AS HOSPITAL.

Royal Italian Ladies Organize for Relief Work, Queen and Queen Dowager Heading List.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, May 22.—The Duke of Aosta, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel and elder brother of the Duke of the Abruzzi and the Duchess of Aosta, who was formerly Princess Helene of Orleans, have placed at the disposition of the Red Cross society their Cisterna palace at Turin as a hospital for injured soldiers. The Duchess of Aosta herself is a competent and experienced nurse.

A committee composed of all the Italian royal ladies, including the Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of the king, and headed by Queen Helena and Queen Dowager Margarita, is organizing for relief work, in which all Italian ladies will be affiliated.

POPE REFUSES MANY APPEALS TO LEAVE ROME

Strong Teutonic Pressure Is Brought to Bear on Him During Italian Crisis.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood Co.]

Benedict XV. has once more given evidence of the great statesmanship with which he is so justy credited by turning a deaf ear to the appeals which have reached him from Germany and Austria to quit Rome and seek temporary or permanent refuge in some neutral country, preferably Spain, on the declaration of war by Italy against Austria and its allies.

The influence which Berlin and Vienna have endeavored to bring to bear upon the pontiff to induce him to leave Italy has been of the most extraordinary and ingenious description. The pressure to win him over to German and Austrian views about the matter has come from all sorts of unexpected quarters.

But he has resisted every demand in that direction, and has announced his intention of remaining at the vatican no matter what happens, realizing that he would be guilty of a tremendous political mistake by abandoning Rome and by voluntarily going into exile.

Strong Pressure on Pope.

The diplomatic representatives of Germany and Austria on the banks of the Tiber, as well as the leaders of the Clerical parties in the dominions of Emperors William and Francis Joseph, also the many hundreds of German and Austrian ecclesiastics, of high and low degree, either visiting the Eternal City, or established there as permanent residents, have all added their entreaties to the appeals of the two rulers and their governments.

It was pointed out that in order to exercise his duties as supreme head of the church it was necessary that he should be located in some place where the devout of all nations could obtain free access to him and that neither Austrians nor Germans could hope to enjoy this advantage if he remained at Rome and their sovereigns were at war with Italy.

Even this failed to move Benedict XV., who, after taking counsel with his chief advisers, the members of the Sacred college, made up his mind to remain at his post in that city of Rome which for close upon 2,000 years has been identified with Christianity as the headquarters of Catholicism.

Holy Seat Moved Only Once.

Only once has the holy seat been established elsewhere than at Rome, namely, in the fourteenth century, when for a time the church was ruled from the city of Avignon, in the south of France. But those were among the darkest days of the papacy in all its history of nearly twenty centuries, and with that exception the capital has always remained on the banks of the Tiber, through foreign wars and invasions, through internal revolutions and civil strife, and changes of government of every description.

There is no reason, therefore, why the papacy should not weather the present storm, as it has lived through so many that have raged in the past.

This is by no means the first time that a pope has been invited even in modern times to seek refuge elsewhere than in Italy. For in 1870, at the time of the withdrawal of the French garrison from Rome, and its seizure by the Italian government, as the capital of the kingdom, the late W. E. Gladstone, then premier of Great Britain, offered a refuge to Pius IX. at Malta.

For in Don Cesare's "Official History of tha Conclave of 1878," which resulted in the elevation of Leo XIII. to the pontifical throne, it is recorded that twenty-four out of the thirty-two cardinals forming the conclave were in favor of holding the election abroad instead of at Rome, and of transferring the Holy Seat to some foreign country.

Negotiations were opened with the ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary accredited to the vatican. But not a single Catholic power could be found disposed to offer even a temperary hospitality to the papal court, far less to consent to a permanent establishment thereof within its borders.

Threat to Seize Vatican.

Premier Crispi, who was in office at the time of the death of Pius IX. and of the election of his successor, as soon as he heard of the disposition of the members of the sacred college to leave Rome, and to hold the conclave and establish the papacy in some foreign land, notified Cardinal Camerlengo, who has charge of the affairs of the church during the interim, and also the foreign ambassadors accredited to the quirinal, that if any attempt were made to put this project into execution, he would consider it to be his duty to take military possession of the vatican, and of all its inestimable treasures of art and history, so as to prevent their alienation.

This naturally raised the question as to whom the vatican and its contents really belonged. The popular impression is to the effect that they are owned, ex-officio, by the pope, as the duly elected head of the Roman Catholic church, the members of which in all parts of the globe have for centuries upon centuries past been contributing, not merely to its maintenance, but to the formation of those marvelous collections which make it the greatest storehouse of priceless and unique treasures of art and letters in the world. The Italian authorities, however, contend that the vatican with all its statuary, its paintings, its mosaics, its libraries, and manuscripts, its tapestries, its masterpieces of the goldsmith's and of the jeweler's art, belong, not to the pope, nor to the Catholic church, but to the Italian nation.

Ownership Issue Up in 1903.

This issue, raised at the time of the papal conclave of 1878, was brought forward again in the late fall of 1903, immediately after the fire which had taken place at the vatican. The Italian government, in condemning the absence in the papal palace of any modern appliances for extinguishing fire, took occasion to point out that in its eyes the pontiff was not the owner but the mere custodian of a great museum belonging to the nation, and intimated in the most plain and unvarnished manner to Pius X. that if he did not fulfill his duties as caretaker more efficiently and provide in a more satisfactory manner for the safety of Italy's "great patrimony of art and history" the state would be obliged to step in and to undertake this duty itself.

PARIS REGAINING NORMAL GAYETY IN SPITE OF WAR

BY CAROLYN WILSON.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 10.—For nine months no one has said the words, "Gay Paree," after the fashion of comic opera.

Every one who has been here, every one who has written about the city of lights, has accentuated its sorrow, contrasted its somberness with its former brilliancy, remarked on its deadness.

You have become so accustomed to noting the contrasts that it is with a feeling of surprise that you are suddenly conscious one spring morning that there are a thousand things happening this day in Paris which you would like to see and can't for lack of time to take them all in.

Secretly, unostentatiously, a normal cheerful life has been stealing back into the city. But always so gradually that you never realized until this morning that museums are open, theaters are playing in every corner of the city; that there are two splendid concerts on this afternoon, and some lectures that you would like awfully to hear if only you hadn't promised to go and see the azaleas at Auteuil.

Sign of Firm Courage.

Paris is full of things to do. It is a good sign. It shows that the courage is firm, the heart high. Grief is not going to be allowed to numb; sacrifices shall not paralyze.

If you were here perhaps you would go to the Place des Invalides to see Gen. Gallieni reviewing two made-over regiments of "terribletorials," as they call them here, about to march out again, complete.

It is a bright, sunny day, too hot for April, and the men look warm and uncomfortable under their heavy coats. The sun catches on their bayonets and shimmers and shivers in thousands of glittering reflections.

They fill the square in solid formation, and the general comes forward to pin on fourteen decorations. This time it is a man leaving again for the front, next is an aviator who has had wonderful luck and success, and then a lad who hobbles on crutches—both legs are gone at the knees.

Gallieni leans forward and takes the boy in his arms. He pins the shining cross on his breast and kisses the man on both cheeks.

"May the love and gratitude of your country make up to you for what you have borne," he says, tears in his eyes.

All Blurred for Moment.

And for a moment all the sun reflecting bayonets are blurred in one mass of light to you, too.

And you feel this same tightening in your throat, this same overwhelming love, these same tears a little later when they swing off down the broad boulevard, just lines and lines of little men, in loose fitting uniforms, shoulders bowed a bit under their pack, many unshaven, but with an easy stride, a rhythmic unity, head up, heart high—an élan which is indescribable.

No one who has ever seen the French soldier in this war will ever laugh at him again—laugh at his ridiculous uniform, his unmilitary bearing. It is perhaps the very contrast between his outward appearance and the tender, gay, impetuous courage of his soul that endears him to you.

And when they have gone far away down the boulevard to beat of drum and high febrile note of clarion you take the Metro out to Auteuil to see the most gorgeous flaming mass of color you have ever seen in your life.

And when you come back to town, if it is not already too late, perhaps you go to the Luxembourg museum, which is open again, and you look particularly at the wonderful gift which Frank Brangwyn has made to France—about fifty of his loveliest etchings and three splendid paintings.

And in the evening you look through the list of theaters. There are two operas, about twelve serious plays, ten revues and musical comedies, and one or two concerts.

It is a pretty good choice, isn't it? And you begin to see that Paris isn't as dead as you thought it was.

Cafe's Open; Prices Normal.

The cafés are all open, charging their before the war prices. Maxim's and Larue's and Paillard's all have their steady clientèle.

I heard an amusing thing the other night at Larue's. You know the height of all shame these days is to admit that you went to Bordeaux when the Germans came near Paris. And much care is taken to hide the fact of those two months of absence. But the other night a man, provoked at the cost of the delicacies at Larue's, called the maitre d'hotel and said to him:

"It is outrageous charging such prices in war time. Why, at Bordeaux we could eat double this for half the price."

"Ah! Is that so, monsieur?" answered the man with a smile. "I didn't know. I have never been there."

U. S. AND BRITAIN IN OPEN BREAK OVER BLOCKADE

Trade Advisers End Relations and America May Demand End of Interference.

ground that it violated international law in shutting off legitimate trade with Germany. Thereafter Mr. Rose and Sir Richard Crawford perfected an arrangement whereby American cotton shippers could send to Germany up to March 31 any cargoes contracted for before March 1 and importers could obtain up to June 15 German goods similarly purchased before March 1.

In undertaking these negotiations Mr. Rose explicitly stated that he did not seek concessions in the blockade operation from the British for the reason that the United States does not admit the legality of the blockade and the consequent right of the British government to regulate American commerce with Germany, and that he was representing American importers and exporters in a strictly unofficial capacity.

Interference Not Sanctioned.

Notwithstanding this understanding, Sir Richard Crawford addressed a letter to the state department on May 19 in which he treated the modifications of the blockade in respect to American shipments to and from Germany as officially sanctioned by the United States government in recognition of the rights of Great Britain to supervise the trade of this country with Germany.

This attitude on the part of the British embassy startled the state department, which discerned a covert attempt on the part of the British to put the United States in the position of abdicating its attitude of denial of the validity of the blockade. Thereupon it was decided to discontinue the unofficial negotiations between the trade advisers of the two countries.

Sir Richard Crawford's letter of May 19 will be answered by the department in a manner that will leave no doubt that the United States has not yielded its denial of the legality of the blockade.

It is unlikely that there will be any further negotiations to induce Great Britain to postpone the operation of the blockade in regard to certain shipments. What the trade advisers of the state department really did was to induce the British not to enforce the blockade strictly in regard to imports and exports contracted for before March 1. Thereby they saved American cotton shippers more than $10,000,000 on cotton which was on the docks ready to be loaded for shipment to Germany when the blockade order went into effect. American importers also were able to get supplies of which they were in great need.

It was learned at the British embassy today that the London government is seizing all cargoes of lard from Chicago and other packing centers. The British contend that the containers are not filled with lard, but only have a surface coating concealing meats for the German army.

Ulster Army to England.

LONDON, May 22.—The transportation of the Ulster division of 20,000 men of Lord Kitchener's new army to England will begin this week, according to private dispatches just received.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SINKS BOAT OFF COAST OF IRELAND

Sailing Vessel Destroyed Within Sixty Miles of Lusitania's Grave —Crew Taken Off.

BEREHAVEN, Ireland, May 22.—The British sailing ship Glenholm was sunk yesterday evening by a German submarine at a point fifteen miles off this port. The members of its crew have been landed here.

The Glenholm was on its way from Chile to Liverpool with a cargo of nitrate. The submarine intercepted the ship and signaled the crew to abandon it. The ship then was sunk, the submarine firing thirty-nine rounds from its gun before it went down.

Berehaven, or Castletow Barhaven, is on the southern coast of Ireland, on the north shore of Bantry bay. The point where the Glenholm was sunk is roughly not more than sixty miles from Old Head of Kinsale, where the Lusitania went down. German submarines consequently still are active in this vicinity.

ROOSEVELT WINS SUIT FOR LIBEL FILED BY BARNES

Syracuse Jury Decides That Charges of Corrupt Rule and Bossism Were True.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 22.—The jury in the trial of William Barnes' suit for libel against Theodore Roosevelt today returned a verdict in favor of the defendant after considering for more than eleven hours the question of placing all the costs of the action upon the plaintiff.

It was the decision of the jury that everything Col. Roosevelt charged was true and that therefore the plaintiff, not having been libeled, was entitled to no damages.

It was announced by counsel for Mr. Barnes that an appeal from the verdict would be taken.

Members of Jury Polled.

Before the jury came in the spectators in the crowded courtroom were warned that any demonstration would be met with severe punishment.

The foreman of the jury, Warren W. Summers, announced that the verdict was for the defendant, and then the jury was polled. Ten jurors answered "For the defendant," then the clerk hesitated, called the name of Edward Burns, and waited. Burns, a Republican, stood up in his seat and in a deep voice said: "For the defendant." Juror No. 12 gave the same answer.

Several persons in the courtroom stood up and waved their hands, but there was no outburst of applause.

After the announcement of the verdict attorneys for Mr. Barnes objected to its receipt. The objection was overruled, the jury was thanked by Justice Andrews for its services, and it then filed out into the jury room.

Colonel Thanks the Jurors.

Col. Roosevelt broke off shaking hands with his counsel and several newspaper men whom he has known several years and hurried to the jury room. There he thanked the jury and shook hands with each member and said:

"In my whole life I shall work in the interest of the public, and none of you gentlemen shall ever have the chance to say that I have done otherwise."

The colonel was then photographed with the jury.

"I am more moved by this verdict than it is possible to express," he said. "None of you, I assure you, will ever have cause to regret your action. I am especially gratified that such a verdict came from a jury composed of men of every political faith."

Col. Roosevelt then said that his attorney, John M. Bowers, had prepared a statement which met with his approval. Following is the statement:

"The victory that Mr. Roosevelt has won is a victory for good government. The issue put to the jury was whether machine government or government by the people should prevail, and the latter has prevailed. The article in the suit was held by the court to be libelous in two aspects:

"First—Because it charged a corrupt political alliance between William Barnes, the Republican leader of the state, and Charles F. Murphy, the Democratic leader of the state, in relation to the state government.

"Second—Because the article charged that the plaintiff had worked through a corrupt alliance between crooked business and crooked politics. The jury were further instructed that they must give a verdict in favor of the plaintiff unless they found that the defendant established to their satisfaction by a fair preponderance of evidence that both charges were true. This burden was successfully borne by Mr. Roosevelt.

Shows Value of System.

"The verdict certainly assures us that the Anglo-Saxon system of determining questions between litigants is rightly lodged in the hands of a jury of twelve men.

"Moreover, it determines that jurors holding political views opposed to those held by a party will not be swayed thereby in determining the questions submitted to them.

"My associates and I have fully appreciated the responsibility we assumed in advising the course to be taken in defending the action, and it is a source of great satisfaction that the result achieved has justified our advice."

"Colonel Has Come Back."

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—"Roosevelt has come back."

This was the verdict on the verdict at Syracuse unanimously delivered here today by Progressives and those progressive Republicans who hope to see Theodore Roosevelt nominated for president next year.

Roosevelt admirers indulged in rejoicing like until the exultation of Miriam when she sang of the horse and his rider that were thrown into the sea.

Regular Republicans received the news of the verdict in silence.

Make Way for the Maharajah and the Ranee!

MAHARAJAH OF KARPURTHALA, HIS YOUNGEST WIFE, AND SON PRINCE KARINJIT SINGH

BEND ON YOUR KNEES SURE! COMING WITH $7,000,000!

Ranee and Her Indian Potentate Due to Arrive at Blackstone Bedecked in Jewels.

Make way for his royal highness, the maharajah of Kapurthala, who will honor Chicago with his second visit tomorrow.

Fresh from a brief stay in New York, where he was lionized by society, the maharajah, or Sir Jagatjit Singh Bahadur, as he is listed in the British peerage, will arrive with his suite in a private car this morning and will go direct to the Blackstone hotel, where reservations for eight have been made. The potentate plans to leave tonight.

The maharajah is traveling light this trip with only one of his four wives, his youngest son, the Prince Karimjit Singh, a small retinue of Hindoo servants, and two dray loads of baggage.

He visited the world's fair in Chicago in 1893 and had a couple of wives then despite the fact he was only 20 years old. He has annexed two since then, the latest being the maharanee, who accompanies him, formerly the beautiful Senorita Anita Delgado, Spanish dancer, whom he first saw in the Kursaal in Madrid while attending the wedding of King Alfonso.

His income alone is said to be far in excess of $1,000,000 a year. He has showered his youngest wife—known abroad as his "traveling wife"—with $7,000,000 worth of jewels, the rarest and most costly that India could disgorge.

It is said the father of the Ranee, Señor Delgado, a chestnut vender in Malaga did not know of the potentate's social standing when he first began paying attentions to his daughter and was about to employ the usual measures of an outraged Spanish parent, when the Maharajah appeased his wrath by a settlement of some $30,000.

The party will remain in the United States for about two months. At present the maharajah is bound for the Pacific coast to see the exposition.

WOMEN FURIOUS AT PESTERING OF THE PRESIDENT

Mrs. Belmont's Actions Elicit Statement from Mrs. J. W. Morrisson.

The suffragists of Chicago—and they are believed to represent suffrage opinion of the country—are indignant, even furious, at the actions of Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont and some of her co-agitators in nagging President Wilson. The Belmont policy of heckling the president while he was in New York at the naval parade has brought forth condemnation.

Mrs. James W. Morrisson, 719 Rush street, yesterday expressed the feelings of the local suffragists. Mrs. Morrisson is president of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association, and is a daughter of William Dudley Foulke of Indiana, reform advocate and publicist.

Statement by Mrs. Morrisson.

In a statement made to THE TRIBUNE last night Mrs. Morrisson said:

"In justice to the suffrage organization I have the honor to represent and, I believe, the vast majority of suffragists throughout the country, I cannot let the days go by without a very earnest protest against the outrageous heckling of President Wilson by the Congressional union.

"It is difficult adequately to characterize such an action. Even the English militants, who at least have the excuse that they cannot get a hearing in any regular and lawabiding way, stopped all their activities at the outbreak of the war, and for American suffragists who have had many and patient hearings from the president to resort to such methods at a time like this shows inexcusable lack of patriotism. But the protests that pour into the national headquarters show that most suffragists would abandon their work altogether rather than be guilty of such a thing.

Never Factor in Illinois.

"The Congressional union has never been a factor in Illinois, and most people here are either unaware of its existence or confuse it with the congressional committee of the National American Woman Suffrage association. Miss Paul, its founder and head, and a friend of and coworker with Mrs. Pankhurst, was at one time congressional chairman of the National, and organized the union as a convenient means of carrying on the work in congress, but she refused to submit to the control of the National, and her organization finally split off altogether, considering the National's methods too conservative to be effective.

"Last fall they initiated the policy of attacking Democratic congressmen who were up for reëlection, even if they had been friends of suffrage, because the Democrats in congress did not make suffrage a party measure and now their chief financial backer and member of their executive board, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, started the heckling of the president and has announced that this will be the union's policy from now on, and in this she is backed by Miss Paul.

Thinks Action Disapproved.

"I believe that many, even of their advisory council, disapprove this action, but the point I wish to make very clear is that the Congressional union does not represent the suffragists of America. It is essentially a Washington organization, and while it has begun to organize in other states in an avowed effort to disrupt the National, this work has so far been negligible.

"The National American Woman Suffrage association is and has always been resolutely opposed to such tactics and the vast majority of American suffragists are profoundly humiliated by such an occurrence as that of last Tuesday."

Full Details of Visits Among the Rich Not to Be Disclosed by Leopold Neumann.

The results of the "reverse English" sociological studies of Leopold Neumann, chief organizer for the United Societies, will be reported today at a meeting of the societies in the North Side Turner hall.

But Mr. Neumann, who originally planned to tell all he learned about the night life of the upper crust while he was masquerading as "Dr. Hugo Meyer," a supposedly gay and wealthy surgeon from Vienna, is not now expected to make public any details more intimate than those published in THE TRIBUNE'S chronicles of his adventures.

At least, Adolph D. Weiner, chairman of the societies' political action committee, said the proper time has not yet arrived for full disclosures.

"Mr. Neumann will tell only the general story of what he saw among the tea rooms and drawing rooms of the smart set," he said. "The details will be brought in when we must produce them in our fight on class discrimination against the poor."

"TRIBUNE" WANT AD BABIES PLEASED WITH NEW HOME.

Melvera and Helen Harrauff, Adopted by Couple in Princeton, Ill., Visit Newspaper Office.

Melvera and Helen Harrauff, THE TRIBUNE want ad babies, made their first visit to Chicago yesterday as members of the Harrauff family of Princeton, Ill., and they visited THE TRIBUNE office, which was instrumental in finding them a home.

Just a year ago the father of the two girls, who were then 6 and 4 years old, inserted an advertisement in THE TRIBUNE asking for a home for the children. Their mother was dead, and he was deaf and unable to give the children proper training. Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Harrauff noticed the advertisement, came to Chicago, and adopted them.

"They are beautiful children," said Mr. Harrauff, "and you never saw brighter ones. Melvera hasn't missed a day at school and her lowest mark has been 90. We couldn't get along without them."

"I like my dresses and my new hat," said Helen.

24 BILLS PASSED BY LEGISLATURE; 1,465 BROUGHT UP

Adjournment Probably Will Be on Friday, June 11, Instead of June 4.

Springfield, Ill., May 22.—At the end of the twentieth calendar week of the Forty-ninth general assembly a total of 1,465 bills have been introduced in the senate and house, 950 of the number having originated in the lower branch and 515 in the senate. Of this total just twenty-four have passed both branches and have been laid before Gov. Dunne for his approval or veto.

The understanding among the lawmakers when they departed for their homes for the week and recess was that the work of the session will come to a close Friday night, June 11.

Can't Quit by June 4.

It is not believed that the appropriation bills and other important measures can be disposed of in time to quit work by June 4, which was the date aimed at several weeks ago, but the additional week should see everything necessary disposed of.

Chairman Smejkal of the house appropriations committee will have the big omnibus appropriation bill ready to introduce in the house early next week. It has always required two weeks to dispose of this measure.

It is expected that progress upon Gov. Dunne's waterway bill will keep pace with the omnibus bill, and that both will be finally disposed of in the senate by the end of the first week in June.

Aside from the two foot and mouth appropriation bills, little significance attaches to the twenty-four bills already handed to Gov. Dunne by the legislators.

Measures Passed by Legislature.

Following are the appropriation measures which already have passed both houses and have been approved by the governor:

By Senator Canaday—Appropriating $75,000 to pay employés of the general assembly.

By Canaday—Appropriating $15,000 for the incidental expense of the secretary of state's department.

By Smejkal—Making a deficiency appropriation of $12,823.12 for the secretary of state's department.

By house appropriations committee—Appropriating $983,487 to reimburse live stock owners to the extent of one-half their losses incurred through the slaughter of animals on account of the foot and mouth contagion. The federal government will pay the other half.

By Smejkal—Making a deficiency appropriation of $15,000 for the legislative reference bureau.

Other Measures Now Laws.

Other measures which have passed both houses and have been approved by Gov. Dunne are:

By Representative Smejkal—Providing that the net value of benefit certificates of fraternal beneficiary societies shall be exempt from taxation.

By Igoe—Creating six additional circuit judgeships in Cook county.

By Senator Denvir—Authorizing west park commissioners of Chicago to issue bonds not to exceed $1,000,000 for park improvement purposes.

By Atwood—Authorizing school officers to issue warrants in anticipation of taxes.

By Buxton—Authorizing county boards to make appropriations not exceeding $250 a year to aid county poultry exhibitions.

By Scanlan—Legalizing annexations to cities where assessments for city purposes have been made and paid.

By Gregory—Changing a term of the Circuit court of Moultrie county.

SHIP STRANDED; CREW SAVED

Marshfield, Ore., May 22.—Fourteen members of the crew of the steamer Claremont, which struck on the south jetty of Coos bay today, had been removed with a breeches buoy early tonight. It was believed that only one man remained to be rescued. The vessel was hammering badly and probably will be a total loss.

EDITOR WANTS TO KNOW "WHY"

Writes to Find Out Reason for Standards Set for Engineers.

SCHOOL TESTS CAUSE.

Editor W. W. De Berard has something on his mind which will make the state civil service commission and the Illinois public utilities commission collectively sit up and take notice when he lets it off. Along with other Chicago engineers he thinks probably there might be some "shenanigan" work going on for the "insiders," and he is going to have something to say about his ideas in next week's issue of the Engineering Record.

The talk started last week when notices of civil service examinations for four engineers to serve under the public utilities commission were scattered in Chicago under the signature of W. R. Robinson, secretary of the civil service commission.

Engineering circles have been pondering over the requirements ever since. The high salaried positions call for a high school education only, while the moderate salaried positions called for highly trained applicants with college training, together with experience in the operation, construction, and design of mechanical equipment.

Pending the composition of the editorial Editor De Berard has written the following letter to Secretary Robinson at Springfield:

"I have looked over the requirements for each of these positions, and it seems peculiar that the high salaried positions should require a high school education only, while the other two require graduation from an engineering college. Is there not some mistake about these requirements, or is the matter open to debate at all?

"I have in mind to prepare an editorial on the subject and would like to have you give me some information as to the requirements for such technical positions and standards in commissions in other states. Surely you ought to have some definite reasons for lowering the standards for the high salaried positions."

AMERICAN FLAG DAY MEN PLAN ROUSING CELEBRATION

Patriotic addresses, flag drills by school children, and plans for celebrating the birthday of the national emblem on June 14 will ocupy the American Flag Day association tomorrow at its annual convention in Memorial hall.

A feature of the afternoon session will be brief speeches by personal representatives of the governors of eleven states. Dr. B. J. Cigrand, president of the association, will represent Gov. Dunne; and personal letters from twenty-two governors will be read in support of the flag day celebration. Harry Miller, representing Mayor Thompson, will deliver an address on "Chicago and Patriotism," and Horatio Waite of the United States navy will speak on "The Flag and the Navy."

The evening session, to which the public is invited, will be devoted to the entertainment by school children.

DEMOCRATIC CHIEFS URGE EXTRA CONGRESS SESSION.

Congressman Kitchin and Senator Lewis Favor Convening Before December—War Situation Serious

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—Suggestions that congress should be called into extra session not later than Oct. 1 are coming from more quarters daily.

Today Representative Kitchin of North Carolina, majority leader of the house, and Senator Lewis of Illinois, majority whip of the senate, both asserted their belief in the necessity for the convening of congress earlier than December.

Both men regard the situation produced by the European war as serious. Both agree that congress should be called into extra session to deal with that situation, especially with the revenue problems which have been created. Within the next few days each will see President Wilson and express his views to the president.

Senator Lewis said he believed congress should convene Oct. 1.

$500 IN GOLD
FOR THE 33 BEST ANSWERS!
Competition Open to All. Costs Nothing to Enter.
We Want the Benefit of Your Suggestions and Ideas.

We are developing a wonderful subdivision, restricted to half-acre and quarter-acre residence lots. The property is known as PORTIA MANOR. We are developing it along high class lines. We want to take advantage of every practical suggestion calculated to make it an attractive home-place for discriminating people. We are erecting on it a number of model 4 and 5 room residences, for instance. We are experimenting with the laying out and development of five model half-acre parcels of our own. We want to be able to present this unique and charming property in a tempting manner—when we finally complete our plans and place it on the market a few weeks hence.

* * * * *

We will pay liberally for suggestions—practical suggestions. That is our reason for inaugurating this Cash Prize Contest. We want to make it worth while to home-loving people to give the subject serious thought and intelligent consideration. It is a big and pleasant subject on which to think and write. We don't want flowery essays. We do want ideas and common-sense suggestions that thrifty and discriminating home-owners can put into practical operation at low cost. What would you do with a half acre in PORTIA MANOR? Write us a letter of not over One Thousand words, based on the facts.

* * * * *

Spelling and penmanship will not matter; we want your ideas. But in order to write intelligently, you will require full information. Our question is not "What Would You Do with an Ordinary Half Acre?" but is "What Would You Do with a Half Acre at PORTIA MANOR?"

Naturally one must take into consideration all the facts in the case before he or she can give us a helpful, a prize-winning answer. The answer must necessarily depend upon the character of soil at PORTIA MANOR, the location and transportation facilities, the price of property, etc.

No public announcement has yet been made of PORTIA MANOR'S location; none will be made until we are ready to announce the opening sale, a few weeks hence. But full facts are contained in a circular which we have published for the purpose.

First, get this circular. Then, if you intend to write a really intelligent article, go out and see the property. It takes but 28 minutes to make the trip to PORTIA MANOR and there are 51 trains daily. A brief personal inspection of this charming property will inspire you. Your imagination will be fired. You will find yourself actually eager to sit down and write. Then just put down on paper, in plain, simple, everyday words, what you've pictured in your mind.

Have you a knack for designing houses?—we would be glad to have your suggestions and plans for a four or five room house. But remember, it must be a typical PORTIA MANOR style of house and must be designed to be built at a cost of not less than $1,500 and not more than $3,000. Are you familiar with chicken-raising?—devoted to gardening?—fond of tennis?—a half acre is a large plot of ground, you know, and can be devoted to many purposes. What would you do with this half acre? No two persons' ideas are alike, and each will unconsciously express his or her own personality in the plans and papers submitted in this contest.

We want the benefit of the best opinions to be had.

4.—All letters and papers must be in our hands not later than June 20th, and should be mailed to "Contest Editor," this address. Tell your story in 1,000 words or less.

5.—All contributions will be passed on by the following judges, who will render their decisions on the merits of the different articles based upon the practical usefulness of the information to this firm and to the future purchasers in PORTIA MANOR.

6.—The judges are:
(1) Fred'k H. Bartlett, head of the firm.
(2) H. B. Leachman, Sales Mgr., Chicago Car Adv. Co.

SHERMAN FORCES MAY NOT ACCEPT AID OF THOMPSON

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., May 22.—[Special.]—Important political developments, looking toward the Illinois 1916 campaign, have marked the legislative week in Springfield. Those nearest the surface may be enumerated as follows:

Mayor Thompson of Chicago received the straight from headquarters information that Senator Sherman's presidential boom does not need or want the leadership of the new city administration so long as the latter's political destinies are controlled by Fred Lundin or any of the recognized factors in the old Lincoln-Lorimer league.

Len Small of Kankakee will be a candidate for state treasurer, and not for governor, barring the single chance that Col. Frank O. Lowden may not be a candidate for governor, a possibility that has been suggested repeatedly within the last forty-eight hours.

Progress reported upon an offensive and defensive alliance between the Sherman forces downstate, the Deneen organization in Cook county, and the Brundage element in Chicago, which, if formed, would prevail through the senatorial campaign of 1918.

Failure of plans said to have been made in the Wisconsin woods last week to whip together a full state Republican primary slate, headed by Col. Lowden.

On the Democratic side of the fence, tacit agreement that President Wilson will have the Illinois delegates next year without a fight in the presidential preference primary in April, but that there will be the usual battle for control of the delegation, which will elect a national committeeman to succeed Charles Boeschenstein, a contest which may be intensified by the moves to nominate Senator Lewis for vice president.

Sherman Avoids Mayor.

It is learned on the highest authority that Senator Sherman's closest advisers talked plainly to Mayor Thompson concerning the presidential situation. Senator Sherman went to Chicago and didn't talk personally to the mayor, although a conference is said to have been greatly desired by the mayor.

The mayor was informed that the Brundage element, holding the balance of power in the Cook county Republican organization, will enter no alliance with the city hall contingent under its present political leadership, and that the effect of a Thompson-Lowden-Lundin alliance would be to drive the Brundage forces from support of Lowden.

He was told further, it is understood, that Senator Sherman has no desire or intention to request his down state friends to support any candidate for governor in the primary campaign.

The possibility that Mr. Brundage is under consideration for appointment by the mayor as special traction counsel for the city has been suggested as something of a factor in the foregoing situation.

Probable Slate Makeup.

From what has been whispered by Republicans who were in conferences which began last Saturday night and are still in progress, the effect directed from Chicago was to put together a slate which looked something like this:

Governor—FRANK O. LOWDEN of Ogle.

Lieutenant governor—JOHN G. OGLESBY of Logan.

State treasurer—LEN SMALL of Kankakee.

State auditor—DAVID E. SHANAHAN of Cook.

Attorney general—SAMUEL A. ETTELSON of Cook.

Congressmen at large—B. M. CHIPERFIELD of Fulton and MEDILL McCORMICK of Cook.

Failure to get anywhere with an agreement on this slate is said to have been due to the failure to consult with the men named on it, and the advice of others on the list is strongly in opposition to any slate making at this time.

The presumption has been permitted to obtain that the city hall, on such an arrangement as suggested, reserved the right to pick the organization candidate for United States senator in 1918 to succeed Senator Lewis.

Plan Deneen-Sherman Alliance.

Action toward reviving the old Deneen-Sherman alliances started as soon as the word got around as to what was doing. The supposition is that Sherman would get the Illinois delegation next spring with comparatively little trouble, except what might be made by the old congressional crowd and some of the Republican organization men who live in the Hyde Park district represented by Congressman Mann.

Mr. Small, it is understood, is one of those consulted this week, who was disinclined to be a part of a slate made at this time. His position, from what is learned, is that he, as a candidate for governer four years ago and as a candidate for state treasurer in 1904, is sufficiently well known through the state to run on his own responsibility. Friends of his from the Kankakee territory said that, while he is not absolutely out of the governorship reckoning, his mind is made up to run for treasurer.

Strong influences have been brought to bear upon former Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby to become a candidate for governor, but it is now understood that he prefers to make the race for the office he held for four years.

Shanahan to Have Place.

Speaker Shanahan is certain to be a candidate for one of the state ticket places. He has not announced his intentions. The slatemakers wanted to list him for state auditor. It is believed he prefers to go out for secretary of state.

Congressman at Large B. M. Chiperfield is in the running for attorney general, according to reports. The slate constructors had him lined up for renomination to congress with Representative Medill McCormick of Chicago as his running mate. This suggestion, it is believed, is voluntary with the slatemakers.

Fined for Annoying Woman.

James McCann, who says he lives near Fifty-seventh street and Maryland avenue, was fined $100 and costs by Judge Gemmill yesterday. Mrs. G. W. Price, 6448 Stony Island avenue, testified McCann had been annoying her for several days by his actions on the street in front of her home, and Detective Sergeants Evans and Neilson hid themselves in some shrubbery in Jackson park, across the street from Mrs. Price's home, and caught him.

REVOLVERS END TWO CAREERS

Man, Just Out of Bridewell, Flees Policeman; Clerk Shoots Boy Robber.

BOTH DIE SAME TIME.

Death early yesterday ended the careers of two Chicagoans who "went wrong." Both had attempted to escape from men who know how to handle a revolver. Both died at almost the same moment. One was a man of 32, the other a boy of 17.

The man, Nicholas Finley, was enjoying his first day of freedom after an eleven months' term in the bridewell for larceny. He had gone straight to his home, at 910 West Fiftieth street, but he had had lots of sleep in jail and was in no great hurry about going to bed.

Meets an Old Pal.

One o'clock in the morning found him loitering about the neighborhood with William Keating, a "pal." Policeman John Curran remembered Chief Healey's cleanup orders and decided the two should be picked up.

Finley didn't like the idea. On the way to the patrol box at South Halsted street and West Forty-ninth place he broke and ran. Curran shouted a warning, fired two shots into the ground, and then took aim. The bullet struck Fiinley in the back of the head.

Case of the Boy.

The boy, Edward Haberichter, tried to get away from Roswell Reid, a clerk, on Thursday night after Edward and a companion had robbed Clinton R. Sherman's drug store, at 711 West Sixty-ninth street. Reid had chased them down Union avenue, firing several shots, one of which struck Haberichter in the left side.

The boy's companion helped him to board a street car, but the two were arrested in a physician's office near by. Haberichter died at St. Bernard's hospital. At an inquest later in the day Reid was exonerated.

Wounded Man Confesses.

Facing death from a bullet hole in his abdomen, Louis Dura of 1815 South State street confessed in the bridewell, the police say, that he was shot when he and two companions attempted to rob Dr. Herman Runyan's drug store at 5137 West Grand avenue early in the day. Dr. Runyan told the police he fired several shots from the window of his bedroom above he store when he heard men attempting to force the lock.

PLANS FOR DIXIE HIGHWAY DECIDED ON BY COMMISSION.

Chicago and Miami, Fla., to Be Terminals of Lakes to Gulf Route—Two Branches Designated.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22.—The Dixie highway, from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, was given definite form here today when the commissioners from seven states adopted the route of the highway. Chicago was selected as the northern terminus and Miami as the southern.

The commission designated a west and an east route on various rival links of the thoroughfare between Indianapolis and Miami, but a plan was adopted late today looking toward connecting the north portion of the two lines with a road along the eastern and western shores of Lake Michigan and connecting the south portion with a road from Miami along the west coast of Florida, thus making a continuing loop of the highway. This schema was suggested by Commissioner Carl G. Fisher of Indianapolis, who proposed extending the road from Chicago to South Bend, Ind., thence north to Mackinaw, and south via Bay City to Detroit. The western route follows:

Chicago, Momence, Wateska, Hoopestown, Danville (Ill.), Covington, Crawfordsville, Indianapolis, Martinsville, Bloomington, Bedford, (Ind.), Louisville (Ky.), Nashville, Chattanooga (Tenn.), Atlanta, Macon (Ga.), Tallahassee, Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Palm Beach, Miami (Fla.).

A resolution was adopted providing that the various links must be completed within a year.

The World's Largest Institution Treating DRINK OR DRUG USERS
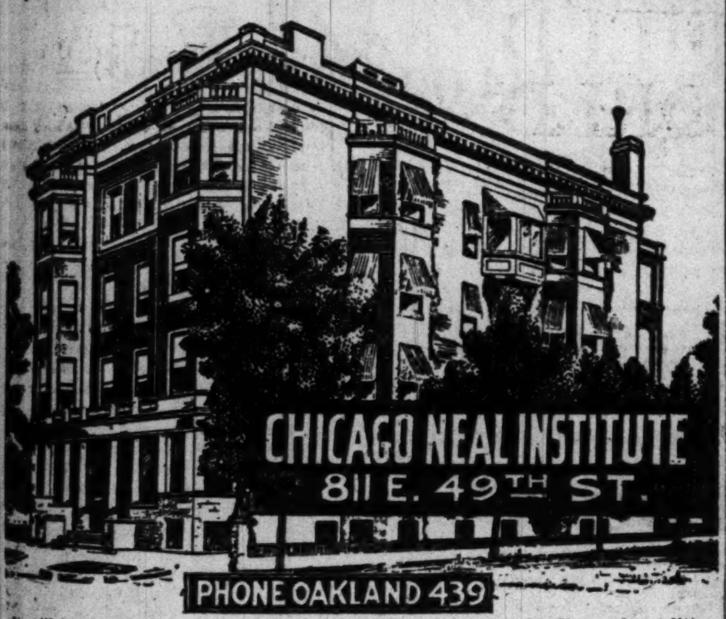
By Modern, Scientific and Humane Methods



It will be demonstrated by a visit and inspection of building shown above, and its location in the RESTFUL QUIET of the beautiful Drexel Boulevard residential district of Chicago, that Neal Institutes are high class in every respect. They are maintained upon a basis of privacy, accommodations, "service" and results that appeals to the high class man to secure the benefits of the Neal Treatment before he becomes a "down-and-outer"—to PREVENT him from becoming a drunkard, dope fiend and human derelict. Already thousands of such men have found that a PERMANENT CURE by "Neal Way" is quicker, easier and less expensive than their former "habit" of frequently seeking the TEMPORARY relief of Mineral Springs and baths.

After the wise man investigates and finds that the CAUSE of his continued indulgence is in fact a DISEASED condition, he consults one of our experienced physicians and goes to a Neal Institute to have the diseased condition OVERCOME, the same as he goes to a specialist or hospital when afflicted with any other serious human ailment.

There are those "AMONG US" who formerly were not only our equals, but frequently our superiors, who have been considered almost "beyond all earthly help." Such men can be rescued by the "Neal Way." What greater charity or grander work can any individual, company or corporation do than to be the means of restoring a DISEASED MAN to his home, family and society as a useful, healthy, sober and prosperous man? We will make a special proposition to those paying for the treatment of worthy persons unable to pay.

We invite all interested to call or address the head Neal Institute No. 811-T, East 49th Street, Chicago (Oakland 439), or Springfield, Ill., for full information with address of nearest one of

60 Neal Institutes in Principal Cities

SOCIAL WORKER VANISHES AFTER ROMANCE CRASH

Grace Bond Coney Despondent Over a Blighted Love Affair.

A year ago Miss Grace Bond Coney, university graduate and talented musician, gave up ease, family, and friends in New York to seek self-expression as a settlement worker in the slums of Chicago, where life is crude, and only the fit survive.

Early in May she was discharged from the Eli Bates settlement and on May 9 she disappeared from her rooming house at 1004 North La Salle street.

A scrap of typewritten paper on which was written the following verse from Omar Khayyam was the only thing she left at the La Salle street address:

Up from earth's bosom, through the seventh gate,
I rose, and on the throne of Saturn sate,
And many a knot unraveled by the road;
But not the master knot of human fate.

Disappointed in Love.

A letter written by Miss Coney May 9 to her sister in New York, in which she said that she was despondent because of her failure and disappointed in a love affair with C. H. Dawson, another settlement worker, was the last communication which the family ever received from her.

In the letter Mis Coney intimated she would end her life and former fellow workers at the Northwestern University settlement said she had often declared she would commit suicide if she could not find a niche in the world that she could fill usefully.

Dawson Denies Love Affair.

Yesterday morning there appeared in THE TRIBUNE the following personal advertisement:

PERSONAL—G. B. C.: IT IS URGENT for both parties that you communicate immediately. C. H. D.

C. H. D. is C. H. Dawson, settlement worker, with whom Miss Coney was in love. Mr. Dawson refused any interview except to deny to the police that there had been a love affair between himself and Miss Coney.

Miss Coney's father, E. A. Coney, New York night manager of the Postal Telegraph and Cable company, reached Chicago yesterday and asked the detective bureau to help in the search for his daughter. He does not know whether she has taken her own life or is working somewhere under cover, to make good before communicating again with the family.

Miss Morrison, one of the workers at the Northwestern university settlement where Miss Coney formerly was employed, declared she believed the girl was out working somewhere and would communicate with her family as soon as she satisfied herself she had made good.

"She was intensely proud, and of an introspective, self-critical nature, magnifying her failures to great proportions, and brooding over her inability to get on," Miss Morrison said. "She often said she would end her life, and spoke of the lake as the 'motherly lake,' when talking of suicide."

Miss Morrison declared she had never observed what she would call a love affair between Miss Coney and Mr. Dawson, although she said they were much together in their work and took many dances together at the Saturday night dances in the settlement.

Scout Suicide Theory.

Detective Sergeants Harrington and Hanrahan who were assigned to investigate Miss Coney's disappearance, are unwilling to accept the theory of suicide. They realize there are wide possibilities of the girl having been murdered or being held against her will where she could not write to her people.

They have definite knowledge that Miss Coney inserted an advertisement for a position as a maid, and later answered an ad for a nurse inserted by Dr. Mary Pogue at 30 North Michigan avenue. She was refused this place because of her small stature.

Mr. Coney declared he would reserve his opinion as to the fate of his daughter.

"She wanted for nothing at home, but was dissatisfied with ease and acutely conscious of her duty to the world. She wanted to make her own way and chose settlement work as her field, although she was an accomplished musician."

Missing Girl in Love Mystery.

LAY FINAL PLANS FOR MEETING TO BOOST CHICAGO

Sponsors for "I Will" Gathering Next Thursday Complete Arrangements.

Final plans were made at a luncheon at the Chicago Athletic association yesterday for the Chicago "booster" mass meeting at the Auditorium theater next Thursday evening. William Nelson Pelouze is chairman of the committee having the gathering in charge.

Tells of Hopes for City.

To indicate the objects sought, the "civic pride" committee issued a statement setting forth the scope of the contemplated prosperity campaign. It says, in part:

"At this meeting speakers of authority will discuss ways and means to arouse business and industrial activity with a view to a more prosperous and greater Chicago. It is fitting that Chicago should be the advance agent for the rest of the nation by stimulating industrial activity within its confines."

M. V. L. PROTESTS ELECTION BILLS

Says Plan to Name All Aldermen at Once Would Imperil Efficiency.

ADVISES LEGISLATORS.

Vigorous protest was registered yesterday by the Municipal Voters' league against the proposed plan to substitute for the present system of electing half the city council every year a system whereby all seventy aldermen will be elected every two years.

Resolutions condemning this provision of the two election bills pending before the legislature were passed by the executive committee and forwarded to Springfield. It also records a protest against making the city elections in even numbered years on the same dates as the primaries for national, state, and county officers.

An excerpt of the resolution follows:

"The present high standard of council efficiency is due primarily to the fact that experienced men, familiar with the city's intricate business affairs, are continued in office from year to year on their individual merits.

"Under the proposed plan there would be grave danger that political landslides or mayoralty elections would sweep out experienced men and replace them with a group of inexperienced men.

"The election of the two aldermen from each ward at the same time would lower the standard of the council personnel by dividing the attention of the voters and affording opportunities for deals and combinations.

"The amendment fixing the date of the aldermanic election in even numbered years on the same day as the primary for national, state, and county officers would subject the aldermanic elections in those years to partisan considerations and involve them in factional fights, and the interest in the aldermanic candidates would inevitably suffer by reason of the overshadowing interest in the contests in state and national campaigns."

WOMAN KILLED BY DOCTOR'S CAR ON BOULEVARD

Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson Steps from Behind Trolley in Front of Motor.

Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson of 2909 Logan boulevard was instantly killed last night by the automobile of Dr. M. J. Latimer of 3153 Fullerton avenue while attempting to cross California avenue at Logan boulevard. She was 67 years old.

The accident was unavoidable, according to Dr. Latimer and witnesses. Mrs. Anderson walked from behind a north bound car directly into the path of Dr. Latimer's automobile, which was south bound. Two wheels passed over her.

Identification of the body was made through a memorandum book found in a handbag she carried. She lived with Mrs. Osmund Vinje, an adopted daughter, who is the wife of a dentist. Dr. Vinje identified the body.

Miss Helen Connery, 22 year old daughter of James Connery of 2933 Washington boulevard, was injured about the head and face and perhaps internally during the day when her electric automobile collided with a street car at Twenty-fifth street and Indiana avenue. She was taken to Mercy hospital, where it was said her condition is serious.

She is a niece of Francis Connery, former city clerk, and John T. Connery, president of the Miami Coal company, of which her father is secretary.

Miss Connery was driving the automobile east on Twenty-fifth street, according to the police. The Indiana avenue car was north bound. Miss Connery did not stop at the crossing, it is said. The car crashed into the rear of the electric, throwing the machine to the curbstone.

$5,450 Per Day Spent To Fortify Goodyear Tires

The other day we cited our experts to certain well-known tires. And we asked, What could Goodyear save by building tires like these?

$1,635,000 a Year

The answer was, "Based on current production, our saving would be $1,635,000 per year." That means $5,450 per day.

But the saving would probably cost our users a million dollars monthly. And the cost to Goodyear soon would be the rulership of Tiredom.

One Must Choose

Here's the choice that confronts us day after day: Shall we skimp Goodyear tires in ways that can't be seen, and increase our profit $1,635,000 a year? Or shall we pay that price to give our users a better tire than others?

Our answer is this:

Goodyear Fortified tires, for many years, have embodied five costly, exclusive features. These are five great protections found in no other tire.

We spend on experts $100,000 yearly to find new betterments to add.

In the past year alone we have added improvements which cost us exceeding $500,000 a year.

Those are the facts; believe them.

We never exaggerate, never misrepresent.

Price Reductions

Now note another side.

Despite this ceaseless improvement, Goodyear prices are constantly coming down. Our last big reduciion—on February 1st—made three in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

Yet not a feature is missing, not an item is skimped. And this year we are spending a half-million dollars on newly-adopted betterments.

That's one result of our mammoth output, our new equipment and our modern methods.

When we spend such sums to build tires better than rivals, don't you think it worth while to get Goodyears?

Most men do. Goodyear tires are selling now much faster than we can build them.

Any dealer will supply you.

MAYOR DECLARES JUNE 7 TO 12 FLY WAR WEEK

Will Lend Every Aid in Power of City to Annihilate Summer Pests.

FLY PREVENTION WEEK. June 7-12 inclusive. Authorized by Mayor William Hale Thompson.

Mayor William Hale Thompson returned to Chicago yesterday with congratulations for the originators of the city-wide fly prevention campaign announced by the Clean Chicago federation.

In response to the desire of the fly preventers and fly swatters, Mayor Thompson announced he will proclaim the week of June 7 to 12 inclusive "fly week" and will lend every aid in the power of the city to cut down next summer's death rate by killing the fly before the fly develops far enough to kill babies and babies' fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters.

Sees Record Possible.

"This is one of the greatest campaigns of practical good ever started in Chicago," was the mayor's enthusiastic commendation. "I am with it heart and soul. Too much cannot be said in praise of the life saving value of the work. If we all pull together in this fly campaign, I believe we can establish a record for healthfulness in Chicago that will be an eye opener and will result in a lot of people celebrating Christmas this year who, were it not for the fly campaign, might spend Christmas under the sod. I will proclaim the week of June 7 'fly week' with distinct pleasure, and all departments of the city government will coöperate in making it a success."

"Lectures in the schools? Certainly!" was the response of Supt. of Schools Ella Flagg Young when asked about the part the schools will play in the campaign. "The work necessitates lectures."

Divide City Into Ten Districts.

The plan to use the schools embraces the division of the city into ten districts, with one school as the central station in each district. Through the coöperation of W. Scott Matthews, state pure food commissioner; D. K. Matthews, assistant state entomologist; the Chicago Medical society, and the International Harvester company, it has been assured that a formidable staff of lecturers will be on hand to supplement the work of the public school teachers who will give the bulk of the lectures.

President Clark of the Chicago Medical society sent letters to the branches of the medical society asking for volunteer lecturers to join in the campaign.

The Boy Scouts and the Camp Fire Girls also are to be enlisted.

Grown Up Have Place.

The campaign is not to be confined to the children, although they will take the leading part. Flies kill grownups as well as children, and adults—especially dealers in food—will be encouraged to join the campaign by taking special measures to safeguard foods from contamination by flies.

A special poster calling attention to "Fly Week" is to be prepared.

State Food Commissioner Matthews already has coöperated actively in the movement by issuing a bulletin on flies in which he asks that reports be made to him of any person or persons guilty of permitting conditions which encourage the breeding of flies. Such a report will be followed by an official visit to the establishment of the offender. In bulletin No. 29, which can be had for the asking on application at the offices of the commission, 1627 Manhattan building, Commissioner Matthews gives some advice.

Here Is Commissioner's Advice.

This is what the commissioner says:

"Notify the food commissioner of any grocery, meat market, dairy, soda fountain, restaurant, or hotel failing to properly screen all foodstuffs from flies.

"All food products which are eaten raw should be particularly looked after.

"In screening buildings, see that screens fit tightly.

"Galvanized and copper screens are cheaper in the end.

"Screen all places where food is manufactured, stored, or offered for sale.

"All places where foods are handled should be kept conspicuously clean at all times.

"Allow no decaying material upon premises.

"Garbage cans should be kept tightly closed and all refuse materials should be deposited in them."

STATE JOINS IN WITH 'TRIBUNE' TO OUST MOSQUITO

E. M. Schalk Named Field Agent for Campaign In and Near Chicago.

The state of Illinois has entered into active coöperation with THE TRIBUNE'S anti-mosquito campaign.

Dr. S. A. Forbes, state entomologist, has appointed E. M. Schalck, 1722 North Mozart street, Chicago, special field agent to make a survey of mosquito breeding conditions in Chicago and near by territory, including the north shore suburbs. D. K. McMillan of 5057 Balmoral avenue, assistant state entomologist, also will lend his efforts toward the eradication of the pest.

Mr. Schalck's telephone number is Humboldt 2414 and that of Mr. McMillan is Irving 5040. By applying either to Mr. McMillan or to Mr. Schalck any community organization interested in the eradication of mosquitoes can obtain a survey of its neighborhood and expert advice for dealing with mosquitoes with the minimum of expense and energy.

Hopes for Boy Scout Aid.

The state representatives hope for special coöperation from Boy Scout patrols and from schools.

"I am making a survey of Chicago and vicinity with a view to mapping the spots where mosquitoes originate," explained Mr. Schalck yesterday.

"I want requests for surveys to come from organizations rather than individuals for the reason that from an organization there is more likely to be comprehensive backing resulting in improvement.

Rain Redoubles Task.

"The continuously rainy weather of the last week has doubled the amount of mosquito prevention work that we considered necessary two weeks ago," said Mr. McMillan. "The rains have created more breeding places for mosquitoes than we had any idea of. All the ditches and hollows are filled and every outdoor receptacle that would catch and hold water has been filled. Especially are conditions ripe for breeding a record crop of biting mosquitoes on the outskirts of Chicago, where drainage is deficient.

"Bad conditions also obtain close to the downtown district. The Field museum site last year had water standing on it, with the result that mosquitoes pestered occupants of near by clubs and hotels. This year we have received warning that conditions again are bad at the site.

"The advice we give people for fighting mosquitoes is the advice of Dr. W. A Evans of THE TRIBUNE. If the heeding of the advice will be as good as the advice itself we can look for a changed community as far as mosquitoes are concerned. But action must be prompt."

ILLINOIS BOARD UPHOLDS CRITIC

State Chiefs Say Changes Sought by Grubbs Are Right.

CITES PLEAS AS MADE.

Springfield, Ill., May 22.—[Special.]—That the criticisms contained in the federal report on health conditions in Illinois and summarized in THE TRIBUNE today from Washington are well founded, and that the recommendations made are in harmony with those repeatedly made and published by the present state board of health, was the statement made today by Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, secretary of the board.

In its report to Gov. Dunne made in December, and in its recommendations to the efficiency and economy committee of the general assembly submitted in September of last year the state board set forth the conditions described by Dr. S. D. Grubbs' report to the federal public health service and recommended those changes in organization and administration which Dr. Grubbs now advises.

The existing conditions and the plan of reorganization of health work were laid before the state medical society at its session at Springfield last week in an address on "Pressing Health Needs in Illinois" by Dr. Drake.

A plan for reorganization of the state board of health in accord with federal recommendations is before the general assembly in senate bill 240, this bill carrying out the recommendations made by the board itself in divorcing the functions of medical registration from purely public health work and in dividing the department into several distinct bureaus.

The measure also divides the state into several sanitary districts for educational and public health purposes and merges the public health functions of other existing state departments with those of the state board of health.

While senate bill 240 fails, in some of its details, to meet the approval of the medical profession, it crystallizes the recommendations of the state board of health which anticipated the federal report by several months.

In view of the possible failure of the reorganization plans of the efficiency and economy committee to pass the general assembly, the state board of health, in its annual report to the governor last December, submitted eighteen distinct recommendations for legislation embracing coördination of existing state health agencies, the division of the state into sanitary districts, supervision by the board over dairies and milk supplies, the sweeping extension of public health education, new laws relative to vital statistics, etc.

"As far as I can learn their details from the reports already published," Dr. Drake said, "the Illinois state board of health agrees with the criticisms made in Dr. Grubbs' report to the public health service. In view of the fact that the board has so fully and so frequently published its opinions on these matters during the last year, it is perhaps more exact to say that the federal report is in full accord with the expressed opinions of the state board of health."

HUDSON $1550 F. O. B. Detroit

$1,000,000 a Week Now Being Paid for Hudsons

We are selling HUDSONS to users nowadays just twice as fast as we build them. The winter surplus is fast disappearing. Then there is bound to be, as last year, weeks of waiting for this favorite car.

Not Hudson's Fault

Last summer we were at one time 4,000 cars oversold. But this type of car was new then, and nobody dreamed that such welcome awaited it. We shipped 1,000 cars by express then to help out waiting buyers.

Since then we have trebled our output. All last winter we built more than we sold, to be ready for spring demand. Even yet we have cars to deliver. So any disappointments will not be HUDSON'S fault. No First Choice car of any type has ever promptly met the spring demand.

13,000 Salesmen

There are this year 13,000 owners of this latest HUDSON type. They are experienced motorists, mostly. And they are saying, in every city and hamlet, "At last, my ideal car."

They are the sellers of HUDSONS. They are telling what this lightness means to them. They report on tire bills cut in two, of fuel cost lessened by half.

They tell how this car, under every condition, has proved itself utterly faultless. And they are saying to friends who are tired of mistakes, "Buy only the HUDSON Light Six."

The New Class Car

If you want a Light Six—today's popular type—your first choice will be this HUDSON. It is the original of this type. It is a four-year evolution, refined to the limit.

It is designed by Howard E. Coffin, who created this type, and who stands at the top in designing. It is built by HUDSON standards. It has proved itself to 13,000, on millions of miles of road.

You who want the best—who refuse to take risks—who know that one error may cost you hundreds of dollars—will want the HUDSON in the Light Six type.

Won't you find this out before this over-demand compels us to start our usual waiting list?

EXCITIN' ROBBERY OF SAPPHIRE KING AGITATES POLICE

But When Schuettler Gets "$50,000 Case" Sleuths Find They Are Victims.

Policeman John Gibbons has surveyed the world phlegmatically from the Canal street entrance of the Union station for lo, these many years, but he had a shock last night.

He had just noted with idle interest that the big lobby seemed unusually deserted when a man turned from the ticket window, strolled across the tiled floor, and brought up at Gibbons' side.

"Well," he said, genially. "I've just lost my satchel."

"So!" sympathized the officer. "Anything valuable in it?"

"O a few uncut stones—about $50,000 worth. You see, there were 1,000 uncut rubies, and——"

Meagher and Schuettler.

Two plain clothes men came on the run and the victim of circumstances was escorted to the Desplaines street police station, where Desk Sergt. Garret Brennan invited him to go on with the story. Before he was fairly started Brennan interrupted to call Capt. Meagher and First Deputy Schuettler on the phone. Schuettler said he would take personal charge of the hunt for the thieves and directed that detectives be sent out in a hurry.

"I wish you wouldn't interrupt," said the victim gravely when he again had the sergeant's attention. "Here is my card. I am William J. Owens of Port Falls, Idaho. Out there they know me as the Sapphire King.

"You see, I was buying a ticket for Colorado and had just set my bag down on the floor. When I looked around again it was gone. I couldn't say exactly what was in it, but I should say approximately that there were between 800 and 1,000 carats of rock rubies and about 100,000 carats of sapphires.

Just Saw John D. Jr.

"I have just been in New York, where I saw John D. Rockefeller Jr."

"You don't seem to mind your loss particularly," observed Brennan.

"Well, I don't," said Owens. "I've got a million tons out there, you see. And I've got this."

He displayed a small black satchel.

"They didn't get this," he explained proudly. "Here is all the dough I have in the world—a loaf of bread. Ha! That's one on you, sergeant!"

The satchel was stocked with a frugal supply of summer sausage, mustard, and knives and forks bearing the name of a West Madison street place of refreshment.

"A number of gentlemen know me over there," said Owen. "Come along and I'll introduce you."

Louis Jacobson, one of the proprietors of Jacobson Bros.' saloon, turned over a "ruby" to Detective Sergeant Patrick Duggan, who dropped in at a jeweler's. The jeweler said it wasn't worth the trouble of bringing it in.

POLICE COLLECT BIG SLUSH FUND?

GRAFT CASE DEFENSE.

Capt. O'Brien was head of that station, and that his nephew, Walter O'Brien, was assigned by Capt. Halpin, under indictment, to detect and prosecute clairvoyants.

"William Luthardt, recently reappointed secretary to the chief of police, was also secretary to the chief of police during the time that these con men were operating in the South Clark street district, and during that time Capt. Halpin, pursuant to letters from the state's attorney, was supposed to have them under investigation.

Luthardt Aids Defense?

"Mr. Luthardt has been conferring with Attorney Northup and other counsel for the policemen in and about the preparation of their defense. And I am reliably informed that the attorneys for the police and the defenders of the men under indictment are using and planning to use members of the police department in running down and influencing prospective jurors.

"It is perfectly well understood by the state that, as is usual in cases where there is no valid defense, the defense will consist of abuse and malicious criticisms of the public prosecutor and his assistants. The preliminary newspaper attacks along this line have already been begun.

"The foregoing, I think, is sufficient for the proper officials to take what action they think necessary at this time. Grand jury investigation, if necessary, can follow in due time.

No Interest in Bureau.

"I suppose that those guilty will now assert that I am making these matters public because I am interested in some police official who may wish to come to the detective bureau.

"I do not now care, nor have I ever cared, who is head of the detective bureau, as long as the incumbent will do police work and not seek to obstruct justice. I have no personal interest in any member of the police department.

"I wish to say, however, that I have been assured by the new superintendent of police of his full coöperation and support, and have no reason to doubt his sincerity of purpose."

Healey Ready to Act.

When told of Mr. Hoyne's statement, Chief of Police Healey said that if the state's attorney will furnish him with any evidence against police officers or employés of the police department which he can use for civil service action he will be glad to use it.

"I have no control over any individual of the police department donating any money to be used for the defense of the indicted policemen," the chief said, "but if any of the men have solicited money from private individuals and the state's attorney will furnish me such evidence, I will surely take civil service action against them.

Defends Capt. O'Brien.

"As for Capt. P. D. O'Brien being accused, I want to say that I personally selected him for the head of the detective bureau for his honesty and capability. I believe him to be the man who is the most capable for that important position. He has said nothing to me, as yet, about the accusations made against him."

Chief Healey said he selected Luthardt as his secretary because he knew him for the last twenty years, and in that time he never found an occasion to doubt his honesty.

O'Brien Defies Hoyne.

Capt. O'Brien said he would defy Mr. Hoyne to prove he had received any money from a slush fund or that he had any knowledge of such a fund being collected.

"I have dug down into my own pocket and given my nephew, Walter O'Brien, probably about $450 to help him in his efficiency bureau business," said Capt. O'Brien. "He is my nephew and I know nothing of the charges pending against him. I helped him out as I would any of my relatives. He has a father and a mother to help support. I have given him some money, I believe, since this trouble came up, but I have never given Mr. Northup any money, nor have I seen him. What money I gave Walter came from my own pocket and I defy Mr. Hoyne to prove otherwise.

"I fail to see any crime in the fact that one policeman should give or lend another money when he is in trouble. I never have heard of a slush fund. When Walter was assigned to the clairvoyants I had nothing to do with that. He was working under Halpin. I never heard any complaints about my nephew until these charges were made against him.

"I thought there would be something of this kind come up when I went to the detective bureau. Goodness knows, I didn't want the job."

Northup Makes Denial.

Attorney John E. Northup made a detailed denial.

"I have never talked with Mr. P. D. O'Brien about this case or anything in connection with it in my life," he said. "He has not guaranteed any payment of money whatever.

"I have never talked with Mr. Luthardt that I know of in my life. He has never communicated with me, directly or indirectly; neither has any other police officer, about this case or about the so-called police graft cases.

"The charges made by Mr. Hoyne of various kinds plainly indicate his want of evidence against the police officials and the hope that the prejudice which he may instill in the public mind will take the place of evidence.

"These men are as much entitled to a fair deal as the crooks and criminals who are living on the public bounty and the gracious favor of Mr. Hoyne."

PETIT MAY GO ON JUDGES' TICKET OF DEMOCRATS

And if He Is Named Mayor Thompson Predicts His Election.

That Judge Adelor J. Petit, denied a chance of reëlection on the Republican ticket, may yet be named on the Democratic ticket was indicated yesterday, according to Democratic leaders, in the action of the managing committee in postponing until tomorrow the filling of the vacancy caused by the resignation of N. L. Piotrowski.

The indorsement of Judge Petit by Mayor Thompson, regardless of what ticket he might run on, which was made in an interview given by the mayor earlier in the day, was communicated to the Democratic managers as they were about to go into conference. At that time there was a movement on foot to name Judge La Buy of the Seventeenth ward to fill the vacancy and give further recognition to the Polish voters.

Make Nonpartisan Claim.

The postponement was at once determined on with the idea, it was reliably reported, of ascertaining just what the city hall forces might be relied upon to do in the event of Judge Petit being given the place.

By so doing, it was urged by some of the leaders, the nonpartisan idea could be made prominent and the Democrats could appear before the voters as standing for the nonpartisan principle, in so far as the sitting judges are concerned, at least.

This was the politics of the situation, and several of the leaders were of the opinion that Petit might be named eventually.

If such action is taken, it was stated semi-officially, the city hall forces would combine with the Democrats in support of the sitting judges on the Democratic ticket.

House to House Canvass.

Regardless of what action may be taken with respect to this vacancy, both Republican and Democratic managing committees decided to abandon the usual style of campaign and concentrate all their efforts on a house-to-house canvass to get the vote to the polls, in addition to circulating as far as possible brief biographical sketches of the candidates.

While a few ward meetings will be held at which the candidates will be introduced, all efforts are to be bent in the direction of getting the vote to the polls.

The Democratic managing committee gave a dinner at the Briggs house to the committee from the country towns districts of the county and all the speeches were to the effect that the entire work should be centered around the combined effort to get out the vote on June 7 and discard meanwhile the usual spellbinding system.

The Republican managers, at the close of a meeting at the Otis building headquarters, announced they would try to reach the voters in a house to house canvass.

Foresees Republican Victory.

John C. Cannon, acting chairman of the G. O. P. committee, issued an appeal to the workers to see every voter. He predicted a Republican vote in the county of 75 per cent of the normal vote, which, he said, would give the entire Republican ticket an overwhelming victory.

The Republican campaign text book was issued yesterday. It contains a sketch of the several candidates and a foreword that lays especial stress on the reuniting of the Republican and Progressive parties.

Mayor Thompson told some of his friends that if the Democrats named Petit he was ready to predict his election. In explaining his refusal to speak for the Republican ticket last Thursday night, the mayor said that had he been present he would have urged the election of all the sitting judges, Democrats as well as Republicans, and that it was just as well that he didn't attend.

Nathan Wilbur Helm, for years principal of the Evanston academy, who recently resigned, is to take charge of a new department in the clothing firm of Hart, Schaffner & Marx. JOSEPH LANG, OLD TIME MINSTREL MAN, IS DEAD.

JOE LANG

Joseph Lang, almost the last of the old time minstrels, died yesterday after an illness lasting more than three years. His wife was at his bedside.

Joe Lang, as he was known, played with the old San Francisco minstrels in New York. He managed the Adelphi theater in Buffalo for eight years after 1884, and then came on to Chicago, where he took over the old Halsted Street theater, at Halsted and Congress streets. A few years later he took emy of Music charge of the Academy of Music, which burned down last winter. While he was still on the stage he created the part of Sy Prime in Denman Thompson's first production of "The Old Homestead."

"Joe took me to the theater just one night a week, when he would give me a box for any of my friends," Mrs. Lang said last night. "But I never stayed in the theater after the show. I got to know a great many of the showmen because Joe used to bring them home with him. But I don't believe he ever introduced me to a performer in a theater."

One of the Langs' prized possessions is a gold watch, the gift of Grover Cleveland. When the future president was sheriff in Buffalo, Joe Lang took part in a benefit performance. At the end of a number, so the story goes, the sheriff came in from the wings pushing a wheelbarrow filled with flowers for Lang. At that time he presented the watch.

CHICAGO MICHIGAN ALUMNI SHOWS SIGNS OF BUSY YEAR.

Two Scholarships, Job Bureau, and Other Features Talked Of at Annual Dinner—Movies Are Shown.

Two scholarships, an employment bureau to aid Michigan graduates, medals for excellence in oratory, a monthly alumni magazine, an annual performance of the student comic opera, football smokers in the fall, midsummer reunions and ball games, and an annual dinner are among the activities of the 1,650 members of the Chicago Alumni Association of the University of Michigan, who held their twenty-eighth annual dinner last evening at the Hotel La Salle.

Among the features were moving pictures of Ann Arbor showing the campus, athletic contests, and student life, and addresses by President Harry B. Hutchins, Dean Henry M. Bates of the law department, Prof. Sadler of the engineering department, and Prof. Reeves and Prof. Turner of the literary department. Frank Reed responded for the alumni. John Maxcy Zane, '83, acted as toastmaster.

The venerable president emeritus, Dr. James B. Angell, was expected to be present, but was unable to come.

Officers elected for the term of 1915-'16 are: President, Homer E. Tinsman, '83; vice president, Hiram S. Cody, '08; secretary, Maurice Toulme, '12; assistant secretary, Ralph M. Snyder, '14; treasurer, Mellen C. Martin, '11; assistant treasurer, Adrian L. Hoover.

Girl Accuses 70 Men.

SCHOOL DEFICIT $100,000 A MONTH

Board Spending at Rate of Million a Year More than Income Justifies.

ISSUE UP TOMORROW.

During the first four months of the year the board of education has spent $100,000 a month more than its income for the year justifies. The statement of expenditures to May 1 will be given to the finance committee at its meeting tomorrow.

The board has spent $5,052,825 in the four months, or $1,263,206 a month. The expense during ten months of the year is about the same, so that at the same rate the board will spend $12,632,000 during the ten months during which school is in session. The expense during July and August is expected to be about $500,000, making a total at the present rate of $13,132,000.

It is estimated that the year's revenue will be $12,174,000 for educational purposes, leaving a deficit of approximately $1,000,000. There is little chance that the budget will be adopted before the end of June and practically all the economizing will have to come during the last six months of school, or the last four months during which the schools are in session. Last year the budget was passed June 24.

Saxon Records Are Many

The Saxon Company and the Saxon cars have to their credit a line of records that are unprecedented in all the history of the automobile industry. Here are just a few of them.

Saxon Company has increased its factory facilities 500 per cent in a year.

Saxon Company sold more cars the first year than any other automobile company ever did in its first year.

Saxon Company has built better cars for less money than anyone else in the business.

Saxon holds the world's economy record—34.53 miles per gallon of gasoline in 200 mile non-stop run in more than 100 different cities.

Saxon was the first car to cross the continent on a continuous trip over the Lincoln Highway — 3389 miles in 30 days.

Saxon was first in America to use small bore high speed motor, cantilever springs and other features now being adopted by high priced cars.

The whole simple truth is this: Saxon cars are good; they are right. They are stylish in appearance; steady and comfortable on the road, and modern throughout in design. That's why they make good everywhere. That's why they have so many records in performance, in sales and in production.

"The perfection of art consists in concealing art."

Every housekeeper, whether she is a novice or an expert, artistic or otherwise, is always anxious to improve her abode.

None, no matter how artistic or expert she becomes in the choice and arrangement of home comforts, is ever completely satisfied.

She is always seeking to improve; to locate faults, and, within the limitations of her purse, rearrange the latest one discovered.

As a rule, the more proficient a woman becomes, the deeper student on the subject she is, and the greater pleasure she has in her study.

It is with the hope of offering suggestions, which may help the novice as well as the expert, to improve their home furnishings, and get the largest percentage of art out of a given situation, that the house of Revell & Co. is freely and ever ready to extend its help.

FRAUD AND DECEIT MARK HISTORY OF AUTOMATIC

Phone Company Born Fifteen Years Ago Amid Stories of Council Bribery.

VAST LOSSES ARE INCURRED.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The story of the Automatic Telephone company, whose franchise has been ordered forfeited by the city council, is one of fraud, deceit, delay, disappointment and financial loss.

It is fair to say that the people who now control the company and whose money is largely invested in its securities have not been charged with fraud. The worst that has been charged against them is delay and evasion. And, so far, the disappointment and the largest part of the financial loss has been their lot.

More than fifteen years ago a small temporary inclosure was erected on the sidewalk in front of the saloon of Powers & O'Brien near La Salle street. Pedestrians who happened to be downtown late at night occasionally saw a wagon back up to this little shed and get a load of dirt. For months that went on. Then official curiosity was aroused and rumors began to circulate that something queer was going on.

Story of Bribery.

There had been stories before that the franchise of the Illinois Telephone and Telegraph company had been passed through the city council in February, 1899, by bribery. These stories now became circumstantial. It was told, variously, that a fund of $100,000 or of $50,000 had been paid certain gray wolf aldermen to get their votes. This money, it was charged, had been distributed in a saloon in which aldermen were interested.

Under the ordinance as originally passed the company was given the right simply to build conduits under the streets to carry telephone and telegraph wires. Presently it was charged that instead of mere conduits regular tunnels were being constructed. An investigation was ordered by the city council and the commissioner of public works made a report which was received and placed on file by the council.

Printed Reports Altered.

A few months later it was found that the printed reports of the council proceedings had been altered so as to read that the report had been "approved" by the city council before being placed on file. After investigation by the state's attorney indictments charging forgery of public records were returned against Albert G. Wheeler, the president of the tunnel company; William Loeffler, former city clerk; Edward Novak, former alderman; Edward Ehrhorn, deputy city clerk, and an employé of the city printer. When the case came to trial it was taken from the jury and the defendants dismissed by Judge Chetlain, who presided at the trial. The court acted on purely technical grounds, finding the indictments defective in certain particulars. That decision also resulted in a scandal.

Meanwhile, in July, 1903, a second ordinance was passed by the council giving the Illinois Telephone and Telegraph company the right to transport freight through its tunnels and allowing it to dig tunnels under the city streets and alleys and the Chicago river not larger than 12 feet 9 inches wide and 14 feet in height.

Enlist Eastern Capital.

Armed with this ordinance and with the forged or changed report of the council proceedings the officers of the company were able to enlist eastern capital in their enterprise and the work of construction was pushed.

It was not until 1906 that the late E. H. Harriman, then overlord of the railroad world and always looking for new worlds to conquer, became interested in the Illinois Tunnel company. As always, his plans were on a great scale. His idea was that the tunnels might be used to collect and deliver all the freight in the great central district of Chicago. They were to be made practically a part of the railroad terminals of the city.

At about the same time J. Ogden Armour also became a large investor in the company. He and the Harriman estate between them are now said to own about [illegible] per cent of its securities. There are in addition about 3,500 others firms and individuals who own either stocks or bonds.

Freight Business Pushed.

For a time the freight business of the tunnel corporation was pushed, while the automatic telephone service, though in operation, somewhat languished. But it presently became apparent that there were great difficulties in the way of making the tunnel system anything like a general distributor of freight.

Before freight could be delivered to or received from the electric trains in the tunnels it was necessary for a business house to construct at its own expense an elevator leading to its shipping and receiving rooms. The cost of such an elevator, estimated at $25,000, and the cost of operating it made the plan out of the question for any except the largest firms, even though the charges of the tunnel company for its service were paid by the railroads. There were also other obstacles in the way.

In Hands of Receivers.

At any rate, in 1909 the whole outfit went into the hands of receivers. Under their direction it was finally decided that, in order to comply with the provisions of its ordinance, an automatic telephone system serving at least 20,000 subscribers should be built.

The old telephone plant, which, including interest, had cost about $1,200,000, was scrapped and charged off as a total loss. Under the direction of the receivers and of the new company, which, after reorganization, succeeded them, an entirely new automatic telephone plant was constructed, which, it is stated, represents an investment of $6,000,000, between 1910 and 1915.

The company claims that it now has plant and equipment ready to serve at least 34,000 subscribers. In the effort to get sufficient subscribers to at least comply with the ordinance provision that it must be actually serving 20,000, it claims that it has employed a large force of solicitors, keeping 100 at work for months at a time and spending in all $350,000 in solicitors' salaries.

Unable to Get Number.

Its position is that after expending millions of dollars in an honest and determined effort to comply with the provisions of its ordinance it finds itself, because of conditions which cannot be overcome, unable to get and to keep the required number. Altogether it claims that its present investment in the telephone business, including interest to the amount of $1,100,000, is about $9,000,000.

It is asking that the city council allow it to sell its telephone plant and equipment to the Chicago Telephone company at the price of $6,000,000, of which sum one-third is to be paid by the parent Bell Telephone company, the plant to be operated by the Chicago company under the provisions of its own ordinance. In other words, none of the franchise rights of the automatic, except that of using the conduits under the streets to carry its wires, are to pass to the Chicago company by the proposed sale. In answer to the charge that this would add $4,000,000 to the unproductive capital stock of the Chicago company, on which the telephone subscribers would be required to pay interest, it is stated that the rights to use the tunnels and conduits already constructed would be worth to the Chicago company all that is asked for the property.

Bell Would Get Patents.

In addition, it is reported that the sale would carry with it the ownership of certain automatic telephone patents which would make the monopoly of the Bell company more certain.

It also is suggested that the city council has a third possible procedure open before it. In case it reconsiders its action ordering the franchise forfeited and the plant seized, or if the order is vetoed and fails to pass over the veto, the council may simply refuse to allow the sale to the Chicago company and let things go as they are.

Since there is a stated loss of more than $125,000 a year in the operation of the plant at present, it would then be a question of how long its owners would care to stand the loss.

To all this the men who favor the council order reply that since the situation is so complicated and since opinions differ as to the proper procedure, it may as well be settled permanently by the courts—where, of course, it would go, if the order is allowed to stand.

YALE PRIZE TO GLENCOE BOY

Archibald McLeish Wins Honor for Best Poem by Undergraduate.

Archibald McLeish, son of Andrew McLeish of Glencoe, Ill., was awarded the annual Cook prize for the best poem by an undergraduate at Yale yesterday. He is an athlete of prominence, having played end and half back on the Yale eleven for the last two years. Some of his verses were published in a recent number of the Yale Review.

LOSS OF SHIP CRAZES MATE

Hans Thormadsen Unable to Bear with Loss to Little Ones Oversea.

When the full rigged schooner Aggie, flying the Norwegian flag, slipped out of San Francisco bay one day last month the mind of the first mate, Hans Thormadsen, was filled with a chaotic golden dream. Everything was aureate—the Golden gate fading astern, the cargo of golden grain in the hold, the golden reward the cargo would bring in a certain European market, and the share of the profits for Hans Thormadsen, part owner.

The chance Thormadsen had been waiting for was his. The 10,000 kroner that had been lying year after year in the Christiania Centralbanken had finally found an investment which promised tenfold returns. A hundred thousand kroner, or even fifty thousand, would enable him to live ashore, to supervise the education of his three motherless sons, and to bring them up as gentlemen.

A Sailor's Ambition.

That was Thormadsen's ambition, to live ashore with the boys. He wanted them to learn to know his face, to recognize his voice as they recognize his handwriting.

So much for the first part of the story. There was a sequel in Chicago yesterday. Twenty men got off a train from San Francisco and went to the office of the Norwegian consul. One of them, a blond, bearded giant, seemed out of his head.

From the consul's office the party proceeded to a rooming house at 1162 North Clark street. Later the East Chicago avenue police were called to the rooming house. They found there the big man with the blond beard holding off a crowd of men of his own race with a chair leg.

When the man had been subdued and transferred to a cell to await examination by a city physician his companions supplied the brief information required for the police record. The physician pronounced him unbalanced and he was taken to the detention hospital.

Flounders in Storm.

The man was Hans Thormadsen. He was about 40 years old and hailed from Langeland, Denmark, where he had three sons. He was a widower.

On May 3—Cap'n Anskor Olson told the story—she was wearing away nor' by nor' east off the Santa Rosa islands in the Pacific ocean when the Aggie ran into a gale. hSe floundered and sank. After days in an open boat at sea, and adventures which have no place in this record, the crew was picked up by a freighter and taken to San Francisco.

On the way across the continent to New York the first mate suddenly went insane. Cap'n Olson didn't know why. Maybe it was because of the upsetting of the plans he had made for giving up the sea to live ashore and bring his little ones up like gentlemen.

HUMOR HERE OF REVERSE BRAND

A "baseball pool" operator of some strange species fell into the clutches of the police yesterday. His captors have not quite decided whether his malady is an ingrowing sense of humor or an overdeveloped spirit of bravado.

Detective Sergeant Mathias M. Barden, under whose direction a squad of twelve plainclothes men has been gunning for the baseball gamblers since THE TRIBUNE called attention to their activities, swooped down on Louis Wandrie's saloon at 4000 Lincoln avenue and arrested Marion McMeans. He was found behind the cigar counter getting ready to settle with patrons who held lucky numbers in a pool on the week's baseball scores.

"Tribune" Scores Misused.

And on McMeans' counter the raiders found a pile of surplus pool tickets bearing the legend, neatly and prominently lettered across the bottom, "CHICAGO TRIBUNE Official Scorer."

That, the cigar man explained, simply meant the baseball scores as published in THE TRIBUNE have been used as the pool's authority in paying off the winners. Under the circumstances he declined to see anything to laugh at, but his captors showed an annoying tendency to chuckle as they led him away.

Yields Good Returns.

The pool at the Wandrie establishment is classed as among the "small fry," but it has been yielding very respectable returns. On the weekly list the scores of one team in each of the three major leagues are pooled, and prizes of $50, $25, $15, and $10 are paid for the four winning numbers. Tickets are 50 cents each.

There has also been a daily pool with two prizes of $5 and $2.50 respectively.

"We know of the existence of several baseball pools which have not been touched," Sergt. Barden said, "but they have pulled in their horns and we can't get evidence on them. We are combing the town thoroughly, however. We've been at work eight days now, and we've got the game pretty well suppressed."

Escapes from Hospital; Found.

Fifteen year old Anna Peterson, 10029 Escanaba avenue, who escaped from the Illinois Charitable Eye and Ear infirmary, 904 West Adams street, was found at Ninety-second street and Houston avenue yesterday. The girl, who has diseased eyes, attempted to end her life by swallowing poison April 7 in the Pennsylvania railroad station in South Chicago.

Laughing Babies in Fairyland of Color Open May Festival

Laughing babies wonder eyed at all the fuss, tumbling clowns leading a smashing, crashing band, playing "My Country 'Tis of Thee," and the executive committee of the May festival paraded around Bismarck garden yesterday at 2 o'clock as the opening ceremony of the charity carnival.

They started at a signal from William Boldenweck, president of the executive committee. Flags were flung to the breeze and the fun was on. After the parade the cabaret show started. Between the acts those who cared to, danced.

Pretty girls were everywhere—in the booths and out. They sold all sorts of things for charity and served coffee and chocolate.

Stork on the Chimney.

You may watch the fun from any sort of atmosphere you wish, for the garden has been turned into a fairyland of old world scenes and places. You may dine in Alt Nuremberg, while a stork perched on the chimney of a nearby thatched roof watches you.

Here in the market place is a reproduction of the "Bratwurst Glöckle," a lean-to restaurant in the shade of a towering cathedral in Nuremberg, known to globe trotters all over the world. Across the court a Hungarian orchestra is scraping away on fiddles and a czimbalom, which appears to be a zither as big as a piano. Dark eyed waitresses in tight laced bodices of brilliant hues scurry to and fro.

In Tyrolean Alps.

At the other end of the garden fairyland you may make a trip up the Tyrolean Alps, or watch the barekneed singers with clusters of edelweiss, or what appear to be shaving brushes, in their hats climb up the dizzy height of 40 feet and yodel the songs of the fatherland.

Outside the old Dutch mill, whose arms swing solemnly round and round, shrieks of laughter may attract you to where an old fashioned Punch and Judy show is in progress. Only a step away we come face to face with the law, for here very real looking judges are dispensing justice and imposing fines for wearing a long face or otherwise offending the will of the May queen.

After a glimpse of this you can take a few steps and gaze in wonder at the sky line of Constantinople with its funny little minarets and domes. Perhaps you will care to take a whirl at Monte Carlo, maybe you would like to see the boogey man house that Hansel and Gretel of the fairy tale found when they got lost in the woods.

Then, too, the baby show started. It will be a feature every afternoon during the festival. There are 300 entries and Henry T. Carr, the chairman of the baby show committee, has found it impossible to show all the kiddies at once.

Therefore only section A was on exhibition. There were twenty-seven babies in this list.

When the votes were counted last night it was found the Zitzewitz family juveniles had carried off the baby show honors for the opening day. Atbric Zitzewitz of 1415 Leland avenue won first prize with 253 votes. His cousin, Robert W. Zitzewitz, was second with 180 votes. Little Miss Ella B. McComb had 149 votes and won third prize.

This afternoon section B will have on its best bib and tucker for the admiring throng to vote for in the Palais de Danse. In this list are:

"Baby" Schnur of 1935 Burling street.
Marie Bellfuss of 1444 Diversey parkway.
George Glass of 2242 North Kildare avenue.
Emil Glass of 2242 North Kildare avenue.

All Sorts of Exhibits.

Twenty automobile truck loads of exhibits have been placed in the garden by 300 women under the direction of Mrs. Carl Buehl and her various committees. There is about everything that can be imagined. There are dogs and ponies with carts, pianos and statuary, famous paintings and an automobile, candy by the ton, silver sets, suits of clothes, evening gown, and autographed photographs of famous generals and the crowned heads of Europe.

The festival is for ten days, closing one week from Monday night, and the committee divides the proceeds equally between local hospitals and the war suffers in Europe.

Members of Committee.

This committee is:

William Boldenweck, president; Otto C. Schneider, vice president; Henry P. Runkel, managing director; A. C. E. Schmidt, secretary; Oscar F. Mayer, treasurer; Ferdinand Walther, chairman finance committee.

The woman's auxiliary is:

Mrs. Carl Buehl, chairman; Mrs. Clara Rechtmeyer and Mrs. Berthold, vice chairmen; Mrs. L. H. Abele and Mrs. Emil Eitel, secretaries.

A captive balloon will make flights every day and searchlights will flash into the sky throughout the night so that the location of the garden may be seen from any spot in Chicago.

NO QUARTER, CRY OF CARPENTERS

Break Up Contractors' Association, Policy of the Union Leaders.

The Carpenters' District council announced a new line of action in respect to the strike of 16,000 members last night.

Conciliation is out of the question from now on, was the message which the delegates carried back to the locals after the meeting. There was considerable rejoicing that the rank and file had turned down the offer of the Carpenter Contractors' association of 2½ cents an hour increase for the last half of a proposed three year agreement.

"We have the strike won now," shouted an official of one of the locals from the floor. "Let's hold out for 70 cents an hour and start a campaign to break up the Carpenter Contractors' association. A lot of their members want to break away and if we urge them we can effect individual agreements.

"With 12,000 men at work and 1,400 independent contractors signed we are ready to proceed during the summer without an agreement with the Carpenter Contractors' association."

Peace Efforts to Continue.

The defiance of the carpenters was not received kindly by the contractors, who are beginning to feel that in their association the handling of the strike situation was bungled once or twice. Efforts to bring about a settlement between the Carpenter Contractors' association and the carpenters will not be given up, despite the attitude of the district council last night.

The Building Construction Employers' association has been appealed to, and tomorrow will start negotiations to bring about a settlement.

It is known that a better offer than has been made heretofore will be submitted.

Replies Sent State Board.

The state board of arbitration received answers to letters which were sent to the two factions Friday offering its services as an arbiter. The Carpenter Contractors' association announced that a definite reply would be forwarded to the state body following the general meeting Wednesday. The carpenters' replied that they were willing to submit their case to the state board.

The Carpenter Contractors' association met with the mill owners' organization and made an effort to get it to refuse to make an agreement with the millworkers until after the carpenters' strike has been settled.

If the millowners refuse to sign an agreement the carpenter contractors insist that the carpenters will be defeated.

President L. A. Busby of the surface lines stated that the new working conditions which the company will offer to the men will be ready to present to the committee representing the employés tomorrow. There is considerable improvement over the present conditions, it was reported.

MEXICO, LAND OF TEARS, BEGS FOR WAR'S END

DUVAL WEST'S FINDING

BY ANONYMA.

Vera Cruz, May 12.—Since the men in charge of the American embassy in Mexico City received their passports from Huerta last April Washington has sent several representatives to Mexico to study conditions. Duval West, the latest, has just left Vera Cruz for Washington on his return trip.

Mr. West goes back with prehaps a better knowledge of real conditions than any other man sent down on this difficult mission, for he visited while in Mexico all three of the big leaders—Carranza, Villa, and Zapata.

Mr. West is a San Antonio lawyer, familiar with Mexico and its ways. He is fond of Mexico and has made a study of the country in normal times. He is also accustomed to the Mexican people. His taciturnity respecting his impressions surpassed even John Lind's, who was known as the "Dumb Man" during his stay here.

West Visits Angeles.

Some months ago Mr. West crossed the northern border and visited Monterey, then under control of Gen. Angeles. If we can judge by his interviews given to some of the Texas papers on his return, his impressions of Angeles were very favorable. From Monterey the next trip was to Guadalajara to see Gen. Villa, who had just taken that place.

Of Gen. Villa little was said except that he was a "hard hombre." More was said about what Villa planned for the future (or said he planned)—to see Angeles president, himself minister of war, and when the country was at peace to retire to his little ranch and plant beans.

This, however, has been well known for a long time—at least about Angeles being Villa's candidate for president, while all the leaders have the same ardent desire to go home and plant beans—after awhile.

All through the north traveling was very bad. The railroads were in bad condition and the entire trip was made in box cars. Instead of being able to go on through (Mr. Lind said the railroads were in fine condition) Mr. West had to return to Texas and travel via New Orleans and Havana to reach Mr. Carranza, first chief of the Constitutionalist army (affectionately called by many "First Chief") and "Encargado" of the executive power in Vera Cruz.

West's Visit to Carranza.

Here little if anything was said by Mr. West, except when he expressed a regret concerning the paper money, the most plentiful article at present in Vera Cruz. He said it would later be the cause of much trouble if the issues were not soon stopped.

Citizens of Vera Cruz are hoping that the filthy condition of the town, the scarcity of food, and the fierce anti-foreign sentiment of the Constitutionalists did not escape him, but there is no way of telling whether he noticed any of these things.

When a town is the seat of government of a prospective ruler, cleanliness should be a powerful factor in that ruler's favor. If everything in his capital is filthy, when occupied only five months, the chances are the country also will be filthy when under his control. The present insanitary state of affairs, especially after the fastidiously clean American military government, is causing uneasiness among the townspeople.

West Goes to Capital.

Mr. West, after a short stay in Vera Cruz, decided to go to Mexico City. So a special train was provided on April 5—the special car in which the party was to travel being very dirty. No ice was furnished, but Americans got ice and started the porter cleaning the car before the train pulled out, so the oversight was not noticed. With Mr. West went his secretary, Cortlandt B. Woods, and Consul General Arnold Shanklin.

The trip over the tornup part of the track (sixty-seven kilometers from Mexico City) was made in automobiles sent by the conventionist government. When in Mexico City, Mr. West was much entertained by the government and American colony, and every man, woman, and child who came in touch with the personal representative had a tale of woe and told it, regardless of time or place.

Members of Mr. West's party seemed to be favorably impressed with Roque Gonzalez Garza, "Encargado" of the executive power in Mexico City. Roque Gonzalez Garza is a frontier man from the state of Coahuila. When Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez's term as president expired he took Gutierrez's place and is the legal authority appointed by the Aguascalientes convention to govern Mexico for the time being.

This government is Zapatista and Villista and conditions must have been a fascinating study at the time of Mr. West's trip. Even so, Zapata would not come to Mexico City to receive Mr. West, who must needs take a train to his headquarters to meet the "Atilla of the south" (so-called in Mexico). Under present conditions this trip takes almost a day.

Gen. Zapata received the party after they waited half an hour. The headquarters were in a dirty little town right in the heart of the Zapatista country and many of the big sugar haciendas were passed on the road. All these not totally destroyed were being worked after a fashion by the Zapatistas. About thirty yards from the railroad was the stronghold of the now world known southern leader.

The entrance to the room where his "royal highness" sat was a stable and a paved patio; a small room, it had one window bad ventilation, and scarcely any light. When the shades of evening fell two candles were brought in, one in an old beer bottle and one in a gin bottle. The party partook of some slight refreshment and after a few hours' stay returned to Mexico City.

Two Incidental Facts.

Two facts are interesting to note—the great man received the party with his hat on, removing it only after every one was seated; the other fact is: While a chef from Sylvanis, Mexico's most elegant restaurant, and a well stocked buffet was provided for the travelers, nothing at all was provided for the guard, not even for the staff of the minister of war, and the poor fellows of the escolta had to go hungry or forage where they could no the whole trip.

This is a typical occurrence in Mexico and is to be regretted in the new factions. The fact is that absolutely no attention is paid to the feeding of the soldiers.

On the trip among others were Mr. West, Mr. Palafox, minister of foreign relations; Gen. Alfredo Serratos, minister of war; Gen. Cal y Mavor, Serratos' staff; Mr. West's secretary, and Henry Rice, an employé of the American government at the Brazilian legation in Mexico City.

Terrible Conditions Told.

The following is an extract written by a Mexican concerning the present situation, a letter which came through from Mexico to an American friend, giving an insight into the desperate state of affairs now prevailing, and it is not an exaggeration:

"You could never understand the situation of this nation, because you are well lodged and lack nothing. You have everything, the best of food and drink. Bandits do not assault you as they do us. If you could see all the families that are in misery and dishonored you would be horrified."

Pictures are sent us of destruction all over the country. From Mexico City they are plentiful as there are good photographers there. Pictures of Mexico City's country club, owned by foreigners, principally Americans, and Mr. McManus' house, in the suburbs, give evidences of Zapatism.

After Mr. McManus had been laid out for burial, the American flag being draped around his bier, the Zapatistas reëntered the house and kicked the body around, also insulting the flag. Pictures of Santa Brigida church and Josefinos convent show Carranzista excesses as the troops left Mexico City.

Mexico, the Land of Sorrow.

And so life in Mexico goes on, one long round of sorrow, degradation, and misery, desolation everywhere. No one living over the border is able to realize how unbearable conditions are, with no moral or civilized power in the world interested enough to take a hand and stop it. Truly we are a "nation of egotists," as a prominent Mexican said to me not long ago.

During Mr. West's stay in Mexico many Mexicans expressed a wish for intervention and hoped to see it soon. Mr. West returned to Vera Cruz, tired out after a troublesome trip. He left for New York the same day.

We are wishing we could be present at his interview with Mr. Wilson, as we would like to know a few of his impressions. He was a most capable selection, and certainly did his best.

He reminds one in this respect of J. R. Silliman, who uses his office unknown to any one to do much good and alleviate many unhappy cases. Mr. Silliman is also an excellent selection, having spent nearly twenty years in northern Mexico among the men who are now the nucleus of the Carranzista party. We are grateful to our government for such representatives as Mr. West and Mr. Silliman.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND SUED.

Mining Engineer Alleged to Have Wrongfully Got Possession of $1,437,500 Stock of Corporation.

Baltimore, Md., May 22.—John Hays Hammond, the noted mining engineer, is named defendant in two suits for an aggregate of $1,437,500 damages filed in the Superior court today by Addison G. Dubois and Willard D. Doremus of Washington. It is alleged that Mr. Hammond obtained possession in an irregular manner of certificates of stock of the General Cotton Securities company, a Delaware corporation, valued at the amount of the suit and refused to return the stock to its owners.

LEADERS DISPUTE OVER TESTIMONY BY ROCKEFELLER

Weinstock and Walsh Differ and Open Clash Comes at Industrial Hearing.

Washington, D. C., May 22.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller Jr. today completed his testmony before the federal industrial relations commission concerning his responsibility in the Colorado strike.

Rockefeller again asserted that if necessary to protect either life or his property he believed in the use of force to repel force. He said he could not inform the commission intelligently as to whether the charge that the Colorado Fuel and Iron company controls politics in Colorado is true or not. He expressed the hope that it was not. He said he believed that the strikers were the first to use force in the mine war.

The feature of the day's hearing was not so much Rockefeller's testimony as the effort of Commissioner Weinstock, representing the capitalists on the commission, to discredit Chairman Walsh. This effort went astray because of Commissioner Weinstock's unfamiliarity with the work of the commission of which he is a member.

Members of Committee Clash.

When Chairman Walsh concluded his examination of Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Weinstock read into the record a letter which he wrote the millionaire this morning. In this letter he said that he understood it to be the custom of the commission to submit to all witnesses a list of the main questions they were expected to answer. He expressed his surprise that such a list had not been submitted to Mr. Rockefeller. However, he had a few he desired to ask personally.

Mr. Walsh interrupted the commissioner to tell him he was laboring under a misapprehension, due to the fact that he did not give more attention to the work of the body. The chairman stated that only a few witnesses had had questions submitted to them, and then the questions were put only for the purpose of controlling the scope of the inquiry. With respect to Mr. Rockefeller, however, the chairman stated that while specific questions were not put to him in advance of his appearance, he was advised as to the nature of the inquiry which was to be made.

Mr. Rockefeller admitted he knew about the general lines the inquiry would follow and that he came prepared to answer such questions as he could.

Views on Open Shop.

Walsh referred to the deportation of Mother Jones, which he characterized as a violation of constitutional rights. He asked if Mr. Rockefeller would see that if the officers were guilty of condoning such violations they were punished. Mr. Rockefeller said that in regulating the officers he would "take such steps as he himself considered necessary, proper and expedient."

Walsh read a letter to Rockefeller from Bowers last April, in which appeared the expression, "Now for an aggressive warfare for the open shop," and asked if Rockefeller's idea of an open shop was one where all union men were barred.

"That is not my idea of an open shop," Rockefeller answered. "My idea of the open ship is where men are employed whether they are members of unions or not, on the basis of their own merit."

At the close of the testimony Mother Jones said:

"Good will certainly come out of it. That young man will go to Colorado. He will see conditions as they exist. And he will remedy them. I feel certain of it."

Testimony by Ivy Lee.

Ivy L. Lee, publicity agent for the Rockefeller interests, who followed Mr. Rockefeller, declined to answer questions as to whether he wrote public statements appearing under Mr. Rockefeller's name, and Chairman Walsh said that the commission would take up later the question of compelling him to reply.

Mr. Lee was asked to explain the suggestion that Gov. Ammons of Colorado write a letter to President Wilson and governors of the states to clear up facts regarding the strike. Lee said that Maj. Edward J. Boughton of Colorado had conferred in New York with Mr. Greene, formerly director of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Boughton, he said, was sent to New York by Gov. Ammons, who was anxious to get the facts more adequately before the public. Lee said he suggested to Boughton, through Greene, that the governor write a letter to President Wilson and the governors setting forth the situation as he saw it. Boughton suggested that Lee give a memorandum suggesting what kind of a letter would do good.

"Good to whom?" asked Walsh.

"Good for the general cause," said Lee.

VILLA ARMY OF 30,000 ATTACKS GEN. OBREGON.

El Paso, Tex., May 22.—Following up the advantage of two days ago in a battle at Cierro de la Cruz, Guanajuato, in which his men defeated the Obregon vanguard, Gen. Villa sent his entire army against the Obregon positions surrounding Irapuato today and a battle is now going on.

Reports coming from the battlefield late today showed that Gen. Villa's army of 30,000 men were still pounding away at Obregon posititons and expected that they would give way within a few hours.

Buys $2,000,000 Steel Cars.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 22.—The Pennsylvania railroad company announced today that it had placed orders for 189 all steel passenger and baggage cars, to cost approximately $2,000,000. The cars are to replace wooden equipment.

ELECTRIC SIGN TRAP FOR BIRDS

Storm Tossed Warblers Are Lured to Death on Skyscraper's Top.

ONE GOES TO HOSPITAL.

A small yellow warbler, bound from the sunny south to what it hoped would prove a sunny north, found itself struggling against a terrific gale as it fought northward. Suddenly out of the darkness appeared a light. Instinctively the bird flew toward the glare. The light became brighter and brighter, then blinding. The tiny bird struck it and fell, landing on the roof of the Consumers' building, at South State and Quincy streets.

Yesterday morning a lineman went to inspect the great sixty foot electric sign on the roof of the skyscraper. He found the roof covered with fifty or sixty birds—scarlet tanagers, thrushes, bluejays, robins, wild canaries, woodpeckers, and the little yellow warbler. Some were dead, some stunned, but the majority flew away at the lineman's appearance.

The warbler, although alive, was barely able to move, and the lineman took the bird to a bird store at 114 North State street. In the evening the small invalid apparently was feeling much better. Today the bird probably will be taken to the lake front and set free.

It is believed that the migrating birds were attracted by the electric sign on the Consumers building and, thinking they saw a refuge from the storm, flew toward the light. Many were blinded by the glare and flew against the sign, while others perched in the shelter of the eaves and waited for the storm to pass.

DEPUTY SEARCHES HOUSE BUT FAILS TO FIND KITTEN.

Omar, "$50,000 Tortoise Shell Persian Cat," Not Found on Writ of Replevin.

Omar, "the $50,000 tortoise shell Persian kitten," was not at home to a deputy sheriff yesterday when he called at the residence, 6220 Kenwood avenue. The deputy sheriff's search of the house availed nothing.

The deputy held a writ of replevin obtained in the Superior court by Miss Isabella Patton of 7350 Kenwood avenue. Two weeks ago Miss Patton obtained a similar writ in the Municipal court, but the deputy bailiff assigned to serve it, it is said, took Mrs. Murphy's denial of the cat's presence at its face value and didn't insist on ransacking the house.

Miss Patton says Omar is one of two kittens born to Wee McGregor of Miss Patton's cattery, and Peggy, who is owned by Fred Sleuter, a salesman roomer at Mrs. Murphy's home. Miss Patton says Sleuter agreed in advance that she should have the choice of the offspring, but forgot his contract when the kittens were born and he found that one of them was a perfect male tortoise shell Persian.

HELP OF CHURCH ASSURED WILSON BY PRESBYTERY

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Rochester, N. Y., May 22.—[Special.]—A message to President Wilson from the general assembly of the Presbyterian church was adopted this morning with the solemnity of prayer and by a rising vote. The message was prepared and its adoption moved by the Rev. Cleland B. McAfee of Chicago.

The reading was greeted by hand clapping, but a hush came over the assembly when Dr. Stevenson, the moderator, called on those who favored the motion to stand as an act of respect for the chief executive of the nation while Dr. McAfee offered prayer.

Text of the Message.

The message was then ordered signed by the moderator and stated clerk of the assembly and sent to the president. It reads:

To the president of the United States, Washington, D. C.: The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in session at Rochester, N. Y., assures you herewith of its fellowship and prayer in these times of heavy responsibility. We recognize your peculiar relation to the church which we represent, but we rejoice in your true relation to all those who love our one Lord.

We have observed ith gratitude to God the wisdom and tact which have marked your leadership of the nation during the trying days already past, and we earnestly expect that these gifts of the divine grace will be granted in all fullness in the days that are to come, and that God will sustain and guide you in the important matters with which you must deal. We pray that our nation may be led in those ways of righteousness and peace which will make it more and more a power of the world.

J. ROSS STEVENSON, Moderator.
WILLIAM H. ROBERTS, Stated Clerk.

Seminary Report Postponed.

Consideration of the report on Union Theological seminary of New York, which was on the docket for today, was postponed. It was made the order of the day for Monday.

California was given an unenviable reputation in regard to its morals and religion, and especially in its lack of law regulating the Sabbath in the report on Sabbath observance.

"I come from a state," the Rev. Dr. [illegible] of San Jose said, "of which I am not proud when its attitude towards religion is considered. It is said to be a land of big trees, big pumpkins, and big lies. It is a fair land if it were not that it had on it the trail of the beast. We made a vigorous effort to get a rest day established by law, but were defeated. It is the only state which does not have some form of Sunday law. Formerly the churches were taxed for the opportunity of doing good. We hope Christian people will come in force to attend the Sunday congress next October."

Condemns Sunday Diversions.

The resolutions, which were passed without dissent, condemned unsparingly Sunday sports, games, and moving picture shows, and urged the Saturday half holiday, the granting of opportunity for servants to attend church, the omitting of recitations in colleges on Monday so as to prevent study on the Sabbath, and the observance of the Sabbath by all government employers and employés.

In the section on Sunday baseball Robert B. Ward, president of the Brooklyn Federal league baseball club, was praised for opposing games on the Sabbath.

Approval was given for the observance of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the American Bible society and the ninetieth anniversary of the founding of the American Tract society. The American Bible society circulated last year 6,370,465 copies of the Bible and during the ninety-nine years it has distributed 100,890,356 volumes.

Report on Prison Reform.

A drastic report on prison reform which was adopted without dissent described contract prison labor as white slavery and declared that imprisonment of an offender because he was unable to pay his fine while freeing those who could pay was simply the continuance of the imprisonment for debt plan supposed to be long ago discarded. The report commends the honor system of the treatment of prisoners as conducted by Warden Tynan of Colorado.

JUNE 3 DATE SET FOR WINTERBOTHAM WEDDING.

Ceremony Will Take Place at St. Thomas' Church in New York City.

June 3 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Katherine Winterbotham, daughter of Mrs. John Russell Winterbotham of [illegible] Lake Shore drive, to Thompson Buchanan, playwright and author of New York City. The wedding will be celebrated in the chapel of St. Thomas' church, New York, and will be followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Ernest Poole of 130 East Sixty-seventh street.

Miss Winterbotham's engagement was announced last Sunday, and at that time her mother, who was in New York, was expected to return to Chicago, but it is understood now that she will remain over for the wedding.

Miss Genevieve Mott of Highland Park has gone east for her cousin's wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. C. Church of Great Barrington, Mass., announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Ruth, to Delano de Windt of Winnetka. The announcement was made Saturday evening at a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Church at their home in Great Barrington. Delano de Windt, now a member of the junior class at Williams college, is the youngest son of Heyliger A. de Windt. This engagement is the result of a friendship that began five or six years ago when Delano de Windt was preparing for college at the Berkshire school, not far from Great Barrington.

Dedicate Playground Today.

[illegible] playground will be dedicated at 2:30 this afternoon. Members of the special park commission and school board will be present. The grounds are at Seminary and Wolfram streets.

SUBMARINE MISHAP MARS U. S. FLEET MANEUVERS.

Newport, R. I., May 22.—Another mishap to the submarine flotilla guarding the Atlantic coast during the war game of the Atlantic fleet was reported tonight when word reached this city that the submarine K-6 was aground on the east side of No Man's Land. The tender Fulton was standing by. The K-6 struck during a dense fog in a heavy southwest wind and rough sea.

Capt. Roger Welles, acting commandant of the Narragansett bay naval station, sent a message saying that the Fulton reported the submarine ashore on a sandy shelf, and probably undamaged. The naval tug Uncas was dispatched from here.

SHANAHAN TELLS TEACHERS HE IS SURE OF TAX LAW

Predicts Passage of Act Which Will Mean $1,500,000 to the Schools.

Speaker David E. Shanahan told the members of the Chicago Teachers' league at the Hotel La Salle yesterday that the bill in the state legislature increasing the tax rate for schools in Chicago and adding $1,500,000 to the annual revenue is practically certain to be passed by Tuesday evening.

He was stopped in the middle of his talk by an attack of illness and had to be assisted from the room.

Senator Morton Hull took Speaker Shanahan's place, and urged the teachers to give their advice to the legislature on the numerous matters pertaining to school legislation.

Hopes for Pension Body.

Senator Hull said he believed a pension commission would be appointed by the governor, which would obtain the enactment of a model pension law which will control the pensions of all organizations which go to the legislature for pension legislation.

Chicago Teachers' day was celebrated at the Chicago Normal college under the auspices of the Chicago Normal Alumni association.

Mrs. Young Talks.

Supt. Ella Flagg Young made her annual Teachers' day address. Over 800 children from various schools took part in the exercises. An exhibit of articles made by school children was opened and will continue during this week. Between 2,000 and 3,000 teachers were present.

Queen Victoria was credited with the solidarity of the British empire at the annual Victoria day luncheon of the Prince of Wales chapter of the Daughters of the British empire at the Auditorium hotel. Mrs. George Cooke Adams, Harry E. Brittain of London, Bishop W. E. Toll, Charles L. Mahony, and Dr. Leon Van der Essen spoke.

SUSPENDS LAW FOR JUSTICE.

Landis to Get Counterfeiter Job and Food for His Family of Four.

Judge Landis yesterday refused to impose sentence on Joseph Wilk of 4610 South Honore street, an iron molder, when the prisoner was arraigned on a plea of guilty to a charge of counterfeiting.

"I am guilty, but I had to do something to get my wife and babies something to eat," Wilk pleaded. "I have been out of work since last fall. I have tried to get work at anything, but nobody will give me a job."

"I will continue this case indefinitely," Judge Landis said.

Then he took Wilk into chambers and had a long talk with him. Wilk's wife and three little children also were taken into chambers. Judge Landis promised to get the man a job. When it was learned Wilk's landlord had ordered the family evicted a collection was taken up. The collection yielded enough to pay the rent for a month and to supply the family with a liberal amount of groceries.

War Hits Canning Industry.

The European war has caused a loss of trade to the canning industry of the country, according to F. A. Gorrell of Washington, secretary of the National Canners' association, at an executive committee meeting of the association in the Hotel La Salle yesterday.

GOODRICH SAFETY TREAD

Only 5% PLUS for the Best "Non-Skid"

Made as always,—the same reliable Construction, the same dependable Service without anything whatever taken out of Quality, no matter what reductions in List-Price are ever made.

THERE are 57, or more, Varieties of Non-Skid Tires.

Some of these actually prevent Skidding, even in Wet Weather and on slippery pavements.

Many of them wear out the Cotton Fabric of the Tire long before its time, through the excessive heat which thick Treads develop in the Rubber, between layers, by friction.

And practically all of them that make serious claims to Non-Skid efficiency cost you 10% to 30% more than Plain Tread Tires of same brand and material.

The Makers of Non Skids say it Costs them this 10% to 30% more to take the Skids off their Plain Tires (or the same thing said the other way about). WE do it for 5%.

Here's how, and why!

FORTY-FIVE years of Rubber working (in what is now the World's largest Rubber Factory) has taught us a few Kinks and Short-cuts that are not common to the Trade.

One of these now comes to the help of your Pocket-book.

Through the simple process of Thinking Hard (and being Candid with ourselves) we have found a Short-Cut to make the best Safety-Treads ever put on a Tire cost us only about 5% more than it costs us to make the Plain Tread of similar quality.

By testing out these Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires on a large number of Taxicabs (where they could be competitively observed and carefully checked up at the end of each day's use) and by comparing their actual performance with that of our own, and other Plain Treads, of much higher price, we have had this fact forced upon us—

—Viz.:

—That there is SURPRISINGLY more Mileage in Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires than in our own, or any other, make of Plain-Tread Tires.

So MUCH more Mileage, for only 5% more Cost, looked so good to us that we decided to give Car Owners the benefit.

Here's what we now offer you!

The best Non-Skid Safety Tread ever put on the market, at ONLY 5% HIGHER PRICE than our own best Plain Tread.

Note following comparative prices. "A," "B," "C" and "D" represent four Widely-Sold Non-Skid Tires:

Size	Goodrich Safety Tread	OTHER MAKES "A"	OTHER MAKES "B"	OTHER MAKES "C"	OTHER MAKES "D"
30x3	$ 9.45	$10.55	$10.95	$16.35	$18.10

"Traction-Wave" Breaker

Observe the Foxy-Fingers of the Goodrich Safety Tread. Made in series, so the transverse space between each two sets will act as a working Hinge, in Tire Travel. These "Hinges" then break up the "Traction-Wave" area into its most harmless form, HEAVILY increasing MILEAGE for only 5% increase in Rubber and Cost to you.

NO Vibration, no "Tread Separation," due to isolated Projections—no clumsy, Resilience-killing stiffness.

But, instead, a practical hinge between each series of Grips, which breaks up the "Traction-Wave" in the Tire, and thereby adds enormously to Mileage, at only 5% more Cost.

We could well justify an increased charge for this Feature, equal to the increased Mileage which results from it.

But we don't take advantage of that.

Just as we have never taken anything out of the well-established quality of Goodrich Tires, when lowering their Fair-List Price to you.

Will you appreciate the Good-Faith behind this Policy?

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

A RECORD OF LIFE CONSERVATION.

The year 1914 stands preëminent as the year of the fewest fatal railway accidents, under conditions at all comparable. "By reason of two contributing causes, neither directly traceable to legislative or regulative activity, however," the compiler of the statistics hastens to assure us. "These causes," he continues, "were the rescission in freight traffic, greatly reducing the units of risk, and the "Safety First" movement pushed with great energy and success by the operating officials of the roads."

But without any reference to the probable effect of the general education of the public by all lines of industry or the actual efforts of the railway employés and the various safeguards urged by state and federal bodies, the operating officials of the railroads deserve the highest commendation for their vigorous and effective campaign against the useless imperiling of life and limb. During the last year more than 35,000,000,000 passengers were carried the standard distance of one mile with only seventy-one train accident fatalities, reducing the number by 70 per cent in one year and 43 per cent as compared with 1912. The report further shows a decrease from 336 in 1913 to 223 in 1914 in the number of passengers killed from one cause or another; a reduction from 3,386 to 2,892 in the number of employés and, including trespassers and nontrespassers, a total reduction for the year of 662 killed by the railways. Of the 443 roads reporting to the bureau 315 of them, operating a mileage almost equal to that of the railroads of Germany, France, Austria-Hungary, and the United Kingdom, showed clean records for the entire year in fatal train accidents. Of these, 104 roads have operated for five consecutive years without a single fatality to passengers, and 128 roads, with a mileage nearly equal to that of Germany, have operated four years consecutively without such an accident.

The most convincing and encouraging element of the exhibit is the gradual reduction in accidents and fatalities extending over a series of years. In 1914 one passenger was killed for every 494,778,436 carried one mile; in 1913 there was one fatality to every 244,306,362, and in 1912, 293,953,272.

Less than 6 per cent of the accidents can be reached by safety appliances, it is said, the remaining 94 per cent resulting from individual fault, mischance, or recklessness, which can be corrected only by rigid observance of rules. That is why there is so much ahead for the "Humanity First" exponents. Trespassing laws must be made stricter and must be enforced, heavier and better tested rails must be laid, wooden cars must be scrapped, the block signal system extended everywhere, and an automatic train stop adopted.

In the meantime the humanitarians, whether they be operating officials, railroad employés, or lawmakers, must be encouraged to redouble their practicable efforts and made to realize the sincerity of the public's appreciation. Their record is already a splendid memorial.

SELLING MORE BOOKS.

Although Andrew Lang used to say that man was not born to read—and he had books in mind in making this gloomy statement—the American publishers and booksellers believe that man may be induced to read by more systematic and intelligent advertising and salesmanship. It is indisputable that not one person in ten buys books in accordance with his ability to do so and his educational or intellectual pretensions. What can be done to lift up and rescue the submerged nine?

At the recent annual meeting in New York of the American publishers this was the chief topic under discussion. "Sell more books" was the slogan; the only question was as to method.

To the making of many books for all tastes, ages, classes and varieties of readers there is no end. The potential readers are here also, on every side; how are supply and effective demand to be brought together?

Many interesting suggestions were elicited at the meeting. The most promising was that of more constant coöperation between publishers and booksellers, large and small. Does the national trust act stand in the way of such coöperation? Hardly. And why should not several publishers coöperate in opening attractive little book stores in towns and villages where no such isles of refuge exist today? Why should not young men and women be trained for the liberal profession of book selling? It is a painful fact that many clerks who sell books are more fitted by nature and lack of training to sell soap. A driver of fat oxen, according to Dr. Johnson, need not himself be fat, but a seller of books should be "bookish" and alert, should be able to drop hints and fruitful remarks about new writers, new offerings, handy classical volumes in special editions, and so on.

More books can be sold by taking thought. It is a pleasant reflection that our publishers and book dealers are beginning to take thought about adding cubits to our educational stature. Books will not give us mental power, but they will give us information and raw material for thought. In our democratic scheme they are essential, for without the information and the stimulus to thought which books provide we cannot have public opinion, while without public opinion we cannot have free institutions.

The old fashioned library, a repository of books for the bookish, has become a dynamic institution which tries to bring books to the people, to invite, encourage, and even direct reading. Private enterprise when it takes up this work for profit is nevertheless doing a public service. A book shop is an educational institution, and everything which makes it effective is directly important to the community.

QUIS CUSTODIET IPSOS CUSTODES?

It never had been suggested in the hearing of D. Junius Juvenalis that the disciplining, correction, policing, and guarding of the world should be left to an international force. It was the idea of Juvenal, his contemporaries, predecessors, and successors that if the world were anywhere in disorder a Roman centurion should attend to it. But his phrase might have been made as an inquiry regarding the universal police force which pacifists propose shall keep the world in order after all the nations have laid down their arms.

Quis custodiet ipsos custodes? "Who shall guard the guardians themselves?"

The international police force would be the only body of men in the world constituted as an army. How large it would be we leave for pacifist description. With Kurds breaking loose in Armenia, Yaquis and half-breeds in Mexico, blacks in Haiti, Fuzzy Wuzzies in the Sudan, tribesmen in North Africa, Moros in the Philippines, White Wolfs in the Chinese hill country, etc., etc., circumstances taken into consideration along with the predisposition to violence which occasionally finds itself expressed among peoples who flatter themselves that they are civilized, we would think that the force would have to be considerable.

The work in Mexico, it is estimated expertly, would require at least 200,000 men, and, to make a guess based on the known area to be policed the world over, one would say that 2,000,000 soldiers, as a minimum, would be required.

The pacifists may have in mind a force about as large as the Texas rangers, or, at most, about the size of the Canadian mounted police. We fear that it would be found impractical to maintain peace with so few policemen.

The international army would be the only army in the world. Its commander, the international chief of police, a man without a country so far as his devotion in service was concerned and commanding men without a country, would have at his disposal the only instrument of effective force in the world.

The world disarmed would be in the custody of the men armed. There would be no munitions of war to be obtained by any other body of men. The citizens of the various nations in this large and generally quiet family would know nothing of cannon or rifles. The international police force would be the Prætorian guard, and such a guard!

The Prætorians, ruling Rome, had at least to account to the legions from the provinces when the latter went into the emperor making business themselves. But this international Prætorian guard would answer to itself and for itself.

We must assume, with the pacifists, that the chiefs of police, probably men who retained a discreditable liking for the profession of arms—otherwise each and every one would have found some means of avoiding the work—would be in unbroken succession men of the highest altruistic bent, incapable of formulating one selfish idea with regard to power or being made victims of an inordinate ambition.

We know that this assumption rests upon the theory that human nature having struggled along on about the same plane from the beginning of things until now, has, presto, been made utterly and totally different. The possibility of a man in power yielding to the temptations of it and the appetite for more of it has never been denied by experience, but we deny it by hope.

If we did not deny it we should be obliged to concede that some time there might arise in the position of international chief of police a gentleman with ability, ambition, and control over men that Napoleon had and he might, with devoted soldiers, all, to be sure, international policemen, give the world a taste of empire that would make Augustus, Trajan, and the Antonines think themselves mere beadles in small parishes.

This we assume would be impossible. We do not know who would have custody of our custodians, but we presume that their consciences would be our guard. With all the fat and unprotected world at the feet of the chief of police we know that he and his successors would be guided wholly by the greater good. It never has been so consistently before, but by some process all things are to be changed.

We hear the point raised that in the purely nationalistic existence which we now lead, without the custody of an international force, it is possible for a military chief to set up military authority. That is true. It has happened. But a nationalist army faces a people to which it is bound by ties of blood, from which it has come and, moreover, a people who have not put the thought of self-defense out of their thoughts and purposes, who have not put the obtaining of arms out of their reach and who have retained the idea that theirs is the supreme authority based on power.

The international military power would have opportunity and no restraints, but we assume that no wicked man ever would gain control of the international soldiers.

Who would have custody of our custodians? Their own better natures, of course.

THE LESSON FOR US.

[From the Charleston News and Courier.]

Whatever else comes of the Lusitania tragedy there must result from it a quickened realization on the part of the American people of the necessity of being always prepared for possible war. In the face of the stark realities which now confront us, the sophistries of the extreme pacifists who oppose any increase of our naval and military strength are exposed in all their hollowness.

The central and fundamental fallacy of the pacifist doctrine can now deceive us no longer. It is the theory that if the United States sincerely desires to remain at peace with all nations and if it pursues a policy of fairness towards all and aggression towards none, it will always be able to remain at peace. In this hour, if never before, the American people realize how false is this theory. Sincerely desirous of remaining at peace with all the European nations, pursuing a policy of fairness towards all of them and aggression towards none, this country finds itself today, in spite of the most honest and earnest and diligent efforts to preserve the strictest neutrality, reading a long death list of Americans, men, women, and children, killed by a foreign power.

The lesson should sink deep into our consciousness. To love peace is not enough to assure us of peace. We have loved peace and striven for peace with all our hearts and yet the question in every mind today is, "Does it mean war?" One truth that we shall surely learn from the Lusitania horror and the crisis which it has created is the truth that this country's safety depends solely and simply upon its ability to defend itself by physical force against any other country with which it may unwillingly be forced into conflict.

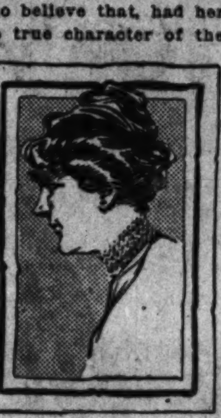
NOW that Dona Eleonora Cenci, Princess of Vicovaro, has passed away at an advanced old age in Rome, her half-American daughter Dona Beatrice, remains the old surviving member of the family to bear its historic name and honors.

The late princess, who was a daughter of Lorillard Spencer and of his wife, Sarah Griswold, both of New York, married as far back as in 1870 Don Virginio Cenci, seventh prince of Vicovaro and grand chamberlain to the late King Victor Emmanuel II. She soon contracted a warm friendship with the then crown princess of Italy, afterward Queen Marguerite, and was appointed by her to be one of her dames du palais and ladies in waiting, being the first American woman to receive an official position of this kind at any of the courts of Europe. These dignities she retained until her death the other day, as well as the favor of her royal mistress.

There was but one child born to the marriage, Dona Beatrice, now 38 years of age, and, as she is the last of her line, it may be safely taken for granted that in the event of her marriage the Italian crown will, in accordance with its usual custom, authorize her husband to assume her name, her titles, and her arms, so as to prevent the name of Cenci from becoming extinct.

The late Prince and Princess Vicovaro gave the name of Beatrice to their only child in remembrance of that Beatrice Cenci who in the latter part of the sixteenth century met her death on the scaffold. Her fate has been made the theme of innumerable poems, novels, and dramas, one of the most famous of the latter being the tragedy of the poet Shelley, which is regarded as one of his masterpieces. The halo of martyrdom, of romance, with which she was surrounded for some 300 years has, however, been to a great extent dispelled and shattered by inexorable modern historical research.

Pope Clement VIII., hitherto portrayed as cruel, is now shown to have acted with a good deal of leniency toward the Cencis, although he had every reason to abhor them, and, while he could not see his way to remit the punishment of Beatrice and her elder brother for their crime of parricide, yet he pardoned the youngest brother, Bernardino, on account of his youth. It is from Bernardino that the half American Dona Beatrice Cenci of today, is descended in a direct line.



There is every reason to believe that, had her father been aware of the true character of the sixteenth century Dona Beatrice, he would certainly never have given her name to his only child, who is a great heiress, having inherited not only her mother's property in America and in Switzerland but also her father's castle of Vicovaro, in the province of Rome, and the celebrated Cenci palace in the Eternal city.

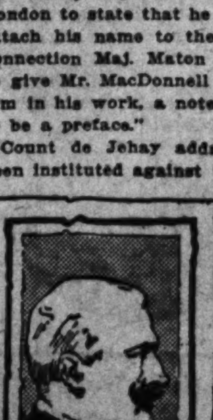
The historical revelations regarding the heroine of Shelley's tragedy, especially those on the score of her age at the time of her torture and execution at Rome, prove conclusively that the celebrated Beatrice Cenci portrait cannot possibly be authentic. It could not have been painted by Guido Reni, as he came to Rome four years after the death of Beatrice; nor by Paul Veronese, as he died ten or fifteen years earlier. Indeed, it is nothing but the picture of a pretty woman by an unknown painter.

There has been quite a little unpleasantness about the book which John de Courcy MacDonnell has just published in London and in America under the title of "The Life of His Majesty, Albert, King of the Belgians."

The book contains a dedication "To Her Royal Highness, Princess Marie José of Belgium," only daughter of the king, and also professes to have an "Introduction by Maj. Maton, Military Attaché of the Belgian Legation in London." There is also a note to the effect that the work has been submitted to King Albert through the intervention of Count F. de Jehay, formerly Belgian minister plenipotentiary at Luxemburg, and that his Belgian majesty had given his approbation to the book.

Count Jehay has now written a letter, which I have before me at the present moment, in which he takes strong and vigorous exceptions to these statements on the part of the author.

He declares "Mr. John de Courcy MacDonnell has not received authorization to dedicate his book to her royal highness, Prince Marie José. I do not deny that Mr. MacDonnell asked me to submit proofs of his book to the secretary of his majesty. But it was published before the receipt of the necessary corrections. I am also requested by Maj. Maton of the Belgian legation in London to state that he never gave permission to attach his name to the introduction. The only connection Maj. Maton had with the book was to give Mr. MacDonnell one short note, to assist him in his work, a note which was not intended to be a preface."



Count de Jehay adds that proceedings have been instituted against the publishers in London of the book, and that an order has been granted by the court restraining them from selling or otherwise disposing of any copies containing the statements to which the count takes exception in his above letter.

This naturally has the effect of robbing the "Life of King Albert" of much of the authority and importance which it seemed to possess as the work officially sanctioned by the king and by Belgian officials in his service.

Sultan Mohammed of Turkey has assuredly selected a strange time to assume, just at present, in addition to his many other titles, that of "the Conqueror." The official designations which he already possesses include, in addition to some three score territorial titles, those of "King of Kings," "Bestower of Crowns upon the Princes of the World," "Father of All the Sovereigns of the Earth," and "Shadow of God Upon Earth."

He now makes his headquarters at the Dolma Bagche. It is situated on the shore of the Beshiktsh suburb of Constantinople, and is a beautiful collection of white marble buildings dating back about fifty or seventy years.

FIRST AID OUTFITS FOR SCHOOLS.

W. C. B. writes: "Will you please discuss first aid outfits for schools, taking up respectively outfits for: [1] A one room country school, ten to forty children; [2] a consolidated country school in which manual training and domestic science are taught, sixty to 120 children; [3] city elementary schools, 100 to 1,000 children; [4] high schools in which manual training, domestic science, chemistry, and physics are taught, 120 to 1,500 children; [5] manual training and trade schools in which there are woodworking shops, cooking rooms, forge and machine shops, printing shops, etc.? Some definite recommendations would be helpful."

IN making up suggestions for a series of cabinets for schools I have had the help of Dr. A. M. Harvey, surgeon to the Crane company.

It will be noticed that the equipment recommended for country schools is somewhat more complete than that for city schools. The reason is that relief from outside sources is not so easily had as in the case of city schools. When help is summoned from the outside it will be longer in arriving, and an injured child being transported home will have a longer trip. The country school must be more nearly self-sufficient, and therefore for it a fuller equipment is provided.

In addition to the emergency cabinet I have added suggestions for some other equipment. This equipment will be found useful in promoting the efficiency and physical welfare of the students, but it cannot be classed as equipment needed for emergencies.

EMERGENCY CABINET NO 1. [for one room country school, ten to forty pupils].

Liquid green soap, one pound in two glass stoppered bottles.
One hand scrubbing brush.
Towels, one-half dozen, three-quarters yard long, eighteen inches wide.
Alcohol, one pound.
Saturated solution of boric acid, one pound.
Tincture of iodine, four ounces.
Adhesive tape, one yard long, one inch wide.
Two two ounce bottles of antiseptic dusting powder [boro-chloretone, talcum, or some such powder].
Sterile gauze [dry], one yard jar.
Bandages, one and two inch, one dozen each.
Safety pins, two dozen.
Scissors, one pair, with a two inch blade.
Ointment, two two-ounce jars white precipitate of mercury.
Aromatic spirits of ammonia, two two-ounce bottles.
One-half pound of Epsom salts.
One-half pound of cooking soda.
Two ounces of sirup of ipecac.
Two ounces of diarrhœa mixture
Two medicine glasses.
Two droppers.
Oil of cloves, one ounce.
One ounce of Monsel's solution.
Two enameled basins [white].
One rubber tourniquet, 24x¾ inch, or webbing 24x1 inch.
Two wooden splints, 30x4x3-16, and one wire gauze splint, 30x4.

Each package is to be plainly marked in English. The label on medicines must show the name of the medicine, its use, and its dose.

The soap and hand brush are to clean the surfaces to be treated; also to clean the hands of the person giving aid.

The alcohol is used to supplement the soap in cleaning. It can be used to wash off carbolic acid and excess of iodine. Iodine is used on cuts, bruises, abrasions, wherever the skin is broken. It may be poured on a surface or in a wound or it may be applied with an applicator.

The dusting powder is to be used on chafing or excoriated surfaces.

The ointment may be used on ringworm and vermin on certain parts of the body.

Aromatic spirits of ammonia is to be used wherever a stimulant is called for. It is of service when there is fainting or when there is shock following a severe injury.

The use of epsom salts is to relieve constipation when headache or dizziness is resulting from it.

The cooking soda is to be applied to burns, sunburns, stings, and hives. The sirup of ipecac is to be used to produce vomiting whenever indicator and tickling the fauces with the finger has proved ineffective.

The diarrhœa mixture is to be given to relieve violent watery diarrhœas with cramping.

The oil of cloves is to be applied to the cavities of aching teeth with a pledget of cotton and a toothpick. A little alcohol snuffed into the nostril on the same side as the aching tooth often gives relief.

The Monsel's solution of iron is to be used to control severe nose bleed or local hemorrhage. It can be applied on cotton.

The rubber tourniquet is to be used to control spurting hemorrhages in the extremities. The splints are to be applied in fracture cases. The splint should be applied outside of the clothing and without making any effort to reduce the fracture. The sole purpose of the first aid splint in a fracture case is to permit the patient to be moved without injury to the soft tissues from the sharp ends of the bone.

In addition I would strongly advise that every school be provided with a first aid manikin. This shows the methods of giving first aid, especially the control of hemorrhages and the fixation of fractures. Aside from its use as a first aid help, it can be made use of for the purpose of teaching anatomy and physiology.

In addition to its first aid cabinet every such school should have a welfare cabinet.

CONTENTS OF A WELFARE CABINET.

One dozen packages of wooden tongue depressors.
One dozen wooden applicators with sterile cotton swabs for taking throat cultures.
One clinical thermometer.
One set of Allport's eye testing cards.
One wet and dry bulb thermometer (hygrometer).

EMERGENCY CABINET NO. 2—[For a consolidated country school in which manual training and domestic science are taught, 60 to 120 children.]

There should be everything as in the No. 1 cabinet and the following in addition:

Sixteen ounces of picric acid solution [two grains to each fluid ounce].
Neutralizing agents.

The picric acid solution is to be applied to burns. Unimportant burns are to be treated with soda or soda water; the severer ones with picric acid solution.

The neutralizing agents probably belong in the laboratories rather than in the first aid cabinet. What they are will depend on the chemicals in use. For acid burns and poisonings, alkalis are to be used. Such are plaster from the walls, whiting, soda.

For alkalies, acids are to be used—vinegar or the stronger acids.

For bromine burns apply ammonia.

For carbolic acid burns apply alcohol.

For nitrate of silver burns apply common salt.

Welfare equipment as for the smaller school.

EMERGENCY CABINET No. 3—[For city elementary schools, 100 to 1,000 children.]

The cabinet should be supplied as in No. 1, except as to the following: Eliminate the tourniquet and the splints.

Although there is a much larger number of students than in the one room country school, it is not advisable to increase the quantities of the different drugs. It is easy to replenish as needed, and freshness is desirable.

The welfare cabinet to be the same as for No. 1. Instead of increasing the numbers of the different articles, it is better to duplicate cabinets as required.

NO. 4.—Same as for No. 2.
NO. 5.—Same as for No. 2.

OIL IN DRINKING WATER.

Q. D. G. writes: "1. Does it cause Bright's disease to drink four glasses of ice water at a meal in the summer? 2. I put one gallon of coal oil in a tank of drinking water six feet across and six feet deep. The water tasted strongly of it. Will it hurt to drink it? I thought oil floated on water. We draw water from the bottom of the tank. Please explain why the water tastes of oil. 3. Is there any danger of infection from wearing clothes of a person who died from cancer of the mouth?"

REPLY.

1. No. At the same time it is a bad habit.

2. I would advise you to empty the tank, clean it, and start over. You probably have messed oil over everything and the water will not taste fit until you have cleaned up. I do not think it will make you sick to drink the water and for laundry purposes it will be all right. Properly purified oil is without any harmful action and kerosene has not much. One cannot use kerosene in a drinking water tank without getting the taste, especially where such a great excess of oil is used. The proper plan is to make your tank mosquito proof with No. 18 or No. 20 screening.

3. None.

HOW TO GAIN WEIGHT.

"Slim" writes: "I am a bookkeeper. When I began about five years ago I weighed 181 pounds. I have gradually fallen off until I weigh only 155 pounds. Can you give me a diet that will increase my weight about twenty pounds? I do not feel bad, but I fear that if I allow myself to lose weight I will be sick from it later on. I am 6 feet 1½ inches tall."

REPLY.

A man 30 years of age, 6 feet 1½ inches tall, should weigh 180 pounds. You are now about 15 per cent under weight.

Eat a bowl of milk and rice at lunch. Eat a hearty supper, sit quietly around the house until you get drowsy, and then go to bed and sleep nine hours.

I presume that you consider that answer enough. "I do not." When a man loses sixteen pounds without effort it is a sign that something is wrong. It may be some disease. It is much more liable to be unhygienic living. It may be that you have been accustomed to exercise in the open air and miss that now. If so, the remedy is either change of occupation or some form of play. It may be worry, or unsuited habits of sleep, or unsuited food. Whatever it is, change the offending habit.

TICKS SPREAD SPOTTED FEVER

W. R. H. writes: "We have several cases of spotted fever in our city. What kind of a tick is it whose bite is the cause of this disease? In one of these cases the party bitten states it was an ordinary brown wood tick."

REPLY.

Stiles contends that the most commonly found tick in the Bitter Root valley is dermacentor Andersonii. This tick is closely related to the common brown tick. However, the man quoted in your letter is probably right. There is a general agreement that any one of the ticks in that valley can spread the disease. There are at least four varieties of ticks in Montana. The common brown wood tick, dermacentor venustus, is one. Riley advises people in the Rocky mountains to beware of all ticks.

ACUTE BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

A. M. K. writes: "Can albumin in the urine be cured to stay cured when it was caused by a cold? I am 30 years old. Never had anything the matter with my kidneys until about three weeks ago. I have been doctoring and feel a little better now."

REPLY.

Apparently you have an acute Bright's disease, the result of an acute infection. This disease is very apt to get well and to stay well. The average case of Bright's disease is exceedingly responsive to changes in habits of life. Have you studied "How to Live" and are you eating, drinking, exercising, sleeping, and thinking rightly?

DANGER VERY SLIGHT.

W. H. G. writes: "I have been told that I am running a great risk to my own health in marrying a widow whose husband suffered with paresis for many years. Is such the case? Would our offspring be victims of poison from the disease?"

REPLY.

1. No.

2. The chance is slight. A gambler would give you odds of 5,000 to 1. Why not have a Sumner marriage? Not because of special danger, but because it is good judgment.

MAY CAUSE LEAD POISONING.

G. W. writes: "Please tell me if the following hair tonic is injurious to the brain, as I have been told. I use this to darken the hair once every ten days. The formula is: Lac sulphur, one tablespoon; sugar of lead, one-half teaspoon; glycerin, one teaspoon; bay rum, four ounces; water to make sixteen ounces. Is any hair dye harmful to the brain?"

REPLY.

May cause lead poisoning. Lead poisoning affects all the organs of the body, including the brain.

EMPLOYES CAUTIONED RESPECTING NOISE.

Chicago, May 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The people in the neighborhood of the Borden Milk company's plant at Seventieth place and Princeton avenue are constantly annoyed by what I term unnecessary noise, in that the employés shout out aloud both day and night, and this, together with the machinery in operation and rattling of bottles, makes a real bedlam.

General Superintendent John J. Fitzpatrick of the Borden company says that he has called attention of their superintendent to the matter of conducting their business at city branches in as quiet a manner as possible. He says that there must be some misunderstanding regarding the complaint that the residents in the vicinity of their Seventieth place bottling works are annoyed by unnecessary noise caused by bottling machinery at night, as bottling operations at this plant do not start until 7 o'clock in the morning, and in practically all instances are completed before 3 p. m. Employés have been directed to use every effort to have all unnecessary noises stopped.

RESPECTING CHILDREN OF NATURALIZED PARENTS.

Park Ridge, Ill., May 16.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Would a young man now 22 years old, born in a foreign country and brought here when 9 years old, be required to take out naturalization papers, when first and second papers have already been taken out by parent.

JOHN A. REITEN.

Section 2172 U. S. R. S. provides in part as follows: "The children of persons who have been duly naturalized under any law of the United States . . . being under the age of 21 years at the time of the naturalization of their parents, shall, if dwelling in the United States, be considered as citizens thereof . . ." It will be seen, therefore, that if the parents of the person referred to in the communication were naturalized before the son reached the age of 21 such son is a citizen under the above cited provision of the law.

Chief Naturalization Examiner.

OWNER NOTIFIED TO IMPROVE CONDITIONS.

Chicago, May 16.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I wish to call your attention to the condition of the barn in the rear of 2017 Clifton avenue. Horses are stabled in it and the building is never cleaned out. There must be a broken water pipe and there seems to be no drainage, as the water stands continually on the barn floor, running out into the alley, where the odor of the refuse is very disagreeable. When warm weather comes this will be very much worse. R. W.

A notice has been served upon the agent and occupant to abate the nuisance by direction of the commissioner.

G. KOEHLER,
Assistant Commissioner of Health.

DEPENDS ON TERMS OF POLICY.

Chicago, May 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I was insured by a reserve insurance company of Illinois for $1,000 and have paid about $25 in premiums. When my last premium became due I sent it in error to another insurance company by whom I am also insured for a like amount. When I discovered my error I tendered premium to the reserve insurance company two days over due. They refused it, saying I would have to be examined by their medical officer. I was examined and rejected. Does policy become void if premium is one day over due and was I obliged to take the medical examination? Can I have any part of premiums returned?

T. V.

Your rights in this situation depend upon the terms of the insurance policy in question. The policy may provide that failure to pay the premium bars reinstatement, except upon medical examination, and such a provision of the contract is valid. It does not appear that you are entitled to the return of any premiums paid or any part thereof, for the reason that you have had the insurance for the period covered by the premiums paid.

MARRIAGE PERFORMED WHERE LICENSE IS GRANTED.

Chicago, May 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—When application for marriage license is made in this state and one of the parties is a divorced person, is it necessary to exhibit the divorce papers as evidence that one year's time has elapsed since the issuance of the decree, or is a statement to that effect by either party sufficient? Can a marriage be legally contracted in Wisconsin or Indiana on a license issued in Illinois or vice versa? Or must the marriage take place in the state in which the license is issued?

CURIOUS.

It is not necessary to exhibit divorce decree. The marriage ceremony can only be performed in the state where license is granted.

PAY COMMISSION TO SELLER OF PROPERTY.

Galesburg, Ill., May 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A party has several lots in Chicago which he wishes to sell. He has listed them with several real estate firms in the neighborhood. If an outside party should sell these lots would the party be obliged to pay a commission to the other real estate men also or only to the one who sold the property?

J. P. S.

Under the ordinary form of contract it will only be necessary for the owner of this property to pay commission to the agent who negotiates the sale. The exception to this will be in the event that one or more of the agents has been given an exclusive contract for the sale of the property.

WHY JAPAN DOES NOT WORRY.

Chicago, May 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your editorial of May 6 this statement occurs: "If we were strong, the Japanese would be governed by our wishes to the reasonable extent to which they would be expressed." Such a statement, it seems, is a little inaccurate in the present case, for while it is true that in a military way we are greatly inferior to Japan, we nevertheless outclass her on the seas and it is there that any future dispute with her will have to be decided. With her coasts blockaded by our fleets, there would be little chance of reinforcing her army in China, which in turn must either surrender or be destroyed.

Knowing this, then, as they surely do, it is reasonable to conclude that their actions are governed not by what we are capable of doing but by what we are likely to do. As our present course in Mexico has shown conclusively that our administration's policy, come what may, is to avoid at all costs a resort to arms, it is easy to see why Japan has little cause for worry as to our attitude in the present matter. It is equally clear why our numerous protests to England and Germany are ignored and our ships torpedoed and sunk.

Protests, like treaties, have potency only so long as they are backed by force, and nations failing to realize this vital fact will in time find themselves in a position where they are not only unable to enforce their just demands but are at the same time the objects of contempt and insult from their powerful neighbors.

CHARLES H. KYLE.

HE IS DISCOURAGED.

Chicago, May 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Will THE TRIBUNE explain why shipping ammunition to the allies constitutes a "mercenary crime," as depicted by its cartoonist? Will it further explain why nations which do not make war their most highly specialized and heavily subsidized industry should, when attacked, be denied the privilege of purchasing in neutral markets the munitions with which to defend themselves? To one who has read THE TRIBUNE daily for fifteen years the present attitude of the paper is discouraging. A. J. CRAMP.

SUSTAIN THE PRESIDENT.

Chicago, May 18.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If Mr. Wilson has, according to B. L. T., "given the whole world a laugh" by the phrasing of his attitude toward America and the war, he has also given the whole world an example of diplomatic restraint. Compared with the vainglorious ranting of Roosevelt, Mr. Wilson's seriously arrived at conclusions and noble conservation of humanity assume an international dignity. Unhappy as are the later misfortunes which have added so gravely to the situation, a more than finite wisdom has shaped their handling. Let us bow gratefully before this fact. Any fool can criticize, but let all who lay any claim to intelligence help to lift by every slightest word and thought the great burden of our president.

The nation, to Mr. Wilson, means something more than a pawn to be moved by impulse for vain and personal achievement. The nation to which he is dedicating his highest thought and noblest effort means millions of mothers and sons looking to him for a fulfillment of life, the fruitage of progress. May they sustain his great hour and justify his exceeding wisdom!

ALICE CARTER BUTLER.

BELGIANS WANT TO WORK.

Shardhighs, Halsted, Essex, England, April 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Being one of the Belgians who has been driven out by the Germans, and received the hospitality of England, I would like to do something which I do not think has yet been done. That is, to thank the American nation for their great generosity and goodness they have shown to the Belgians and the way they have shown their sympathy with a nation in trouble.

It was quite enough for them to know that we had no home, no money, in fact nothing, that without waiting to examine the facts, they at once subscribed generously on our behalf. We thank them from the bottom of our hearts and will ever teach our children to look to the nation of free and great generosity.

After the war, there will be thousands of Belgians who will have no work and they do not wish to be supported by the means of the great friendly powers longer than they need be.

Would it not be possible to find employment for many Belgians in America, or could not a company be formed in America or England to register those employers who require representatives in Belgium for American firms, and also American firms who require employés in their American works?

I have written to many English firms to make arrangements for work after the war, but I am always told to wait until the war is over. That is not what we wish, our arrangements ought to be made now, either in England or America, so that as soon as the war is over we shall be able to go back to our own land and support ourselves.

I should be very glad to hear from any American manufacturers or business men who are thinking of investing money in Belgium after the war, or of opening agencies or branches in Belgium, or any of those generous people who are interested in the re-formation of the Belgian nation. Your American Stage

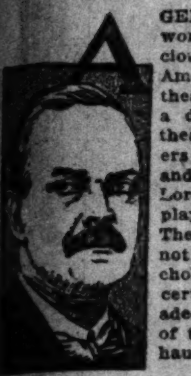
By Edward Goldbeck.



A GERMAN poet has said, "passion is the key to the world." If you want a thing passionately and tenaciously you will probably get it sooner or later. The Americans are passionate in their predilection for the theater and this is the reason why we may hope for a development which will give to this country real theatrical art. If the public were "blasé," the reformers would do better to renounce their alluring schemes and stop their meritorious endeavors, but—thank the Lord—the audiences are unsophisticated and prefer a play or a "show" to almost every other amusement. The Americans resemble the Latin nations; they are not afraid of laughing heartily. I have seen men choking, heard women shrieking with laughter. They certainly overdid—just a smile would have been an adequate reward for the not too high aiming efforts of the author, but this attitude is more promising than haughty indifference would be.

I do not think there is any nation which likes the theater as much as the Americans. There are people who see the same play half a dozen times and they are not rare. Of course women patronize the theater more than men, but the latter, too, are more assiduous than Europeans. People take their babies to the theaters with them, they feed them with light opera, as the Bavarian nurses his offspring on Pschorrbräu. Girls are allowed to see everything, as the stage is "clean" in this puzzling country, or was so at least until the most recent time. The American women can afford to go oftener than their German sisters, since they take their duties as housewives less pedantically than the Germans. The husband is proud of his wife getting her due of intellectual enjoyment; he likes her to be his superior in culture, æstheticism and "that sort of stuff." This is part of his social position; his wife must be just as tip-top as his car. So the taste of the woman dominates the theater.

What does this public favor on the stage?

It loves "sensationalism," "punches," dramatic action. This action is external, so to say. It is not the internal action, as we would express it on the other side: the experiences of the heart, the climax of emotion. Something must happen and go on all the time. The latest type is a mixture of melodrama with fun. The revolver is an indispensable requisite.

The audience likes a snappy dialogue. Every clever line is sure of keen grasping and spontaneous applause. Sometimes a play is nothing but "lines," as, for instance, "Peg o' My Heart," wherein the star stands in the middle of the stage and the other actors "feed" her. The audience likes sentiment. During the wishy-washy scenes the fiddles of the orchestra wail sympathetically.

Men and women identify the actor with the part. They applaud high sounding words, noble sentiments, and fine actions. The actor who in the last minute rushes in to save the girl from her brutal oppressor is sure of an enthusiastic reception. The public is easily satisfied. But the Americans applaud even when they do not like the performance. They are good hearted and lenient. This is certainly a charming quality in private life, but it is disastrous for the development of art. Art demands inexorable severity.

THE MANAGERS.

THE managers are business men and want to make money. It is silly to demand that they be reformers and philanthropists. They do not boast of being literary connoisseurs. Their principle is: Give the public what it wants! The only trouble is that the public never knows what it wants before "it" is there. Schiller had another idea, he intended to "stir up" the public and he considered the stage as "an ethical institution." But it would not be fair to ask the idealism of a German poet from an American manager. And the German managers do not differ from them at all: It is the system which differs.

In this country we have two big firms which dominate the theatrical market. The men who conduct the business are astonishingly clever, but to my mind the German system seems healthier. In Germany a manager has one theater which belongs to him (sometimes two, never more), and within these narrow limits he tries to do the best he can. Almost every town has a subsidized theater with a stock company. The young artist must play classical drama, modern drama, comedy, farce, operetta; he must act as a super whenever the manager bids him to. If he plays Ibsen today he may be in the "Merry Widow" tomorrow and in Aeschylus or Sardou the day after.

THE ACTOR.

THE public writes the plays, the plays make the actor. As almost all the American plays are reproductions of daily life, the actors are natural. They render the sloppy talk and behavior of our humdrum existence wonderfully well. But beyond this they fail. Deep brooding, volcanic outbursts are not their forte. What we call "style" is a notion unknown to the average actor. He would hardly understand that different qualities are needed to act Schiller, Shakspeare, Racine, Ibsen, Maeterlinck, Shaw. Of course not, since the American stage has no repertoire. The manager produces a play. Either it is a failure, then he drops it; or it is a hit, then he runs it for two years. There is no opportunity for the actor to develop. And if for instance in the last hit he has been a lion tamer, the managers will expect him to be a lion tamer all his life. They look out for the "type." Nothing could be more fossilizing for the actor.

The star system has the same disadvantages. The star makes his, or mostly her, effort by "magnetism." She observes eagerly which trick appeals most to the public. A woman, for instance, has a certain innocent way of talking which pleases the audience. After two years of starring she probably will be so babyish as to spoil her original charm.

Americans are very well gifted for the stage. The "stage children" are amazing. One always thinks they will prove to be geniuses, but they never do. Why not? Because the stage lacks standards, discipline, tradition, things which are difficult to get in a democratic civilization. There is, for instance, the terrible way of pronouncing. Every actor pronounces differently and arbitrarily. That would be impossible in France or Germany. The producer would not tolerate it, and, in France at least, the public would go mad. It is a great mission for the stage to awake in the average man the feeling which Meredith once put into the rapturous words, "O, how divine is utterance!" Every member of a great nation ought to be proud of his language and try to speak it as correctly and beautifully as possible.

The American stage has the best dancers, the best eccentrics, the prettiest girls, the best character women. These are quite an American specialty and no European country can compete with them.

THE AUTHOR.

JULES LEMAITRE says in one of his criticisms: "Every progress of the civil law is a drawback for the dramatic author, because everything which lessens the possibilities of conflict between the individual and society diminishes the funds from which he is drawing. A dramatic author does not want the codes of law to be reasonable. He has no objection to human institutions being absurd." These words express with the utmost precision why it is so difficult to write, in America for America, good plays, the material of which would be taken from actual American life. America is too happy to be dramatic.

A few instances. In European countries up to a very recent time the power of the parents over the children was almost unlimited. There is the stuff for drama: the rebellion of children against parental power. The father may forbid the son to take up a vocation which the young fellow considers the only one which would respond to certain of his instincts and tendencies—in short, the struggle of two generations, each of which has the soul of its time and cannot understand the other. Turgenieff wrote a famous novel, "Fathers and Sons."—"Mothers and Daughters" would be more up to date. In America the problem would not do. The children are independent and the parents like it.

Another dramatic situation is the refusal of the parents to allow a marriage. Mostly they refuse for reasons which are derived from social prejudices. A prince must renounce the woman he loves because she belongs to the lower classes. But such an issue is only sure of its effect so long as the spectators believe themselves in the necessity of class distinctions. You might say that in this country the aristocracy of wealth has taken the place of the aristocracy of birth, so there is a new dramatic problem of equal value. But that is not true. Nobility was something which awed the average European up to our day, a tradition of centuries which told on him. But the fact that a man who starts with nothing and makes two millions refuses his daughter to a man who starts with nothing and perhaps will make three millions can never be taken as the starting point of a drama. A masterful writer might get some fun out of it, but even he will hardly touch our heartstrings.

European wives formerly were subject to their husbands. Problem: The husband's brutality drives the wife into the arms of another man. You know Nietzsche's word: "At first marriage breaks her and then she breaks marriage." As there is little mistreatment of wives here, except among the lowest classes of immigrants, this issue seems not very real.

Then there is the struggle of men and women against political, social, and religious dogmas. But that a human being perishes in such a struggle is impossible, as in this country there is unlimited freedom of thought and speech and every institution can be changed at any moment by a resolution of majority. How many novels and dramas have been suggested in Latin countries by the indissolubility of marriage or the difficulties of divorce! Here it is easy enough to get out. But the dramatist sighs.

The two dominating factors of human actions are, according to Schiller, "hunger and love." The first motif cannot be used here because the American audience believes that nobody has to starve in this country. The treatment of the second motif, which is so immensely important to the dramatist, is limited by a puritanism which is sometimes sincere, sometimes hypocritical. French literature is entirely dominated by the erotic problem and the German does not fall very much behind the French in this respect. "Cleanliness" is something very beautiful, but it must not mislead into blindness, into conscious ignoring of reality. It must not impoverish psychological insight.

It seems necessary to mention that a novel and a drama do not obey the same laws. As soon as a novel pleases the public it becomes dramatized; as soon as a drama makes a hit the publishers think it will be delightful as a book. It may, but it need not, and the fact that the metamorphosis is inescapable seems to prove that the industrious tailors who turn the coat have no idea about the organism of a drama or a novel.

From NISH to BUCHAREST

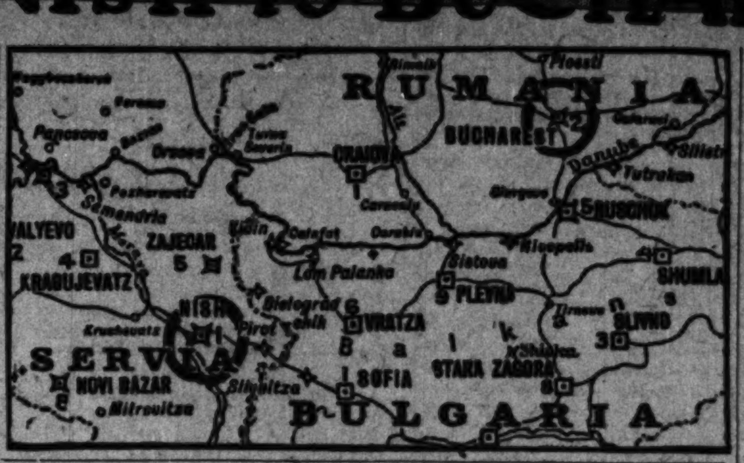
Mr. McCormick, war correspondent for "The Tribune" with the Russian forces, has forwarded the subjoined letter from Petrograd relating his experiences while traveling through the Balkan country on the way to Petrograd. His articles are appearing from time to time in both the daily and Sunday "Tribune."



By Robert R. McCormick.

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TRAVELING through the Balkans has the advantage of being different from traveling anywhere else, and has the additional advantage of variety. Of all our experiences, the one which will live the most pleasantly in my memory is the shepherd dog which, on the road from Nish to Sofia, ran beside the train for several miles, begging for scraps and eating them. I tried several ways of losing him, such as dropping several pieces of bread at once, to make him stop, or dropping a large loaf, which took some time to masticate, but he always easily overtook the train and did not leave it until his hunger was satisfied.

Sofia is a new city and bears the American earmarks of a new city. Many of its best streets are merely staked out, and they show you the place where the palace will stand, just as the real estate agent shows you the site of the city hall in a boom town. In one respect they carry their enthusiasm beyond American standards, for they have established a fashionable walk on the fashionable street, which runs between the city and the park, but which is still lacking houses on either side.

Sofia has her "Burnham" plan. So far her only contribution to it is the new Church of Sainte Sophie, which is said by many to be the most perfect of the Greek churches. After seeing Athens, its architecture could not be impressive, but the mural paintings were the most expressive of religious teaching of any I have ever seen.

The city is dominated by the beautiful mountain of Vitos, which is crowned in snow and bathed in clouds the year around. "Dominate," a word so commonly used in guide books and geographies, is very real at Sofia. When the Servians were marching on the town during the Balkan war the Bulgarians, I was told, built a military road to its summit in twenty-four hours in order to plant artillery, so that the Servians could not.

Near Mount Vitos is the school for the officers of reserve; young men who have graduated from academic or scientific universities and take one year of military instruction. I was fortunate enough to see one of the instruction drills, in which each student acts at the same time as officer and man, shouting out orders to himself and then carrying them out, somewhat like a little boy playing soldier, but more like a man perfectly crazy.

For my benefit an exhibition was given of the Bulgarian final attack, when the men in unison shout three times:

"Napréd na nôj! Napréd na nôj! Napréd na nôj!" (pronounced, naprâ na nawj) which means "Forward with the knife, hurray!" and then leap forward to the charge, shouting at the top of their lungs.

I have no doubt that when repeated by thousands of throats and accompanied by a bayonet attack, this must be very terrifying, but I should think that such a signal given to well trained troops would serve as a valuable forewarning to the enemy.

War, of course, is in many ways a return to the abysmal. There were times in the Turkish war, so a one armed officer said, when troops no longer willing to obey the order to advance could be worked into a new courage by the repetition in chorus of this warlike shout.

The Bulgarians claim to be the most tolerant people in the world. A naïve informant told me that their sobranje, or congress, contained twenty Socialists and sixteen Mohammedans, which people he seemed to think were very much alike. The Mohammedan religion is tolerated, and with it polygamy, but polygamy is not allowed among the Christian population.

They claim their land is more evenly divided among the people than in any other European country, and that they have no economic troubles to disturb them. Even so, the politicians seem to get along, as the existence of eleven different political parties testifies.

From Sofia, the railroad runs to Roustouk, first through a craggy mountain gorge, and afterward through as rich a grain land as an American farmer would wish. The white legged trousers and sheepskin coats point an opportunity to the clothing manufacturer, while the oxen have easy pulling with American plows.

Trunks are checked through to Bucharest, but it is well to pay a little something to the porters, because the Danube is deep, and nobody has been hired to pick up any baggage which may fall overboard. On the Roumanian shore, quick connections are made with a train starting seven hours later.

An English speaking native of Ramadan offered to conduct us to a first class gambling "club" to while away our time and money and explained that the house gave fair exchange for Ennglish and French gold. I preferred to look at the river barges loading with Roumanian wheat for Austria.

There were strange craft with high forecastles and poops, flying the star and crescent above the lateen sails, but there were more steel barges from 100 to 200 feet long and of medium draft. They have neither engines nor masts and depend upon tugs for locomotion. From the different flags flying I could tell that they navigated the Black sea and even the Bosporus, the Dardanelles and the Ægean sea to Greece.

Here as elsewhere in Europe water navigation is infinitely better than in America; here as elsewhere the railroads are vastly inferior to ours. In America the railroads are said to have choked the waterways. In Europe the railroads have choked themselves. As freight carriers the best European railroad is less efficient than the worst one in the United States.

The German, to be sure, have made their railroads instruments of tremendous military efficiency, but I believe that if a little military practice were given our railroad men in time of peace they would excel all others and equal the Germans.

I could not help observing that while with us railroads are private enterprises and the waterway question largely political, in Europe the reverse is the case.

Travelers proposing to travel from Bucharest comfortably should travel in second class compartments, as these are brilliantly lighted with gas, while dim oil lamps hardly break the gloom in the higher priced rooms.

We made the American mistake and, finding ourselves unable to read or even play cards, spent our time saying unpleasant things about a country that did not afford a "Friend of the People."

Even Roumanian railroad journeys end, however, and midnight found us in the streets of Bucharest just as that gay capital was getting its second wind.

Aeroplane Warfare

Claude Grahame-White is one of England's most daring military aviators. He has taken part in raids on Dusseldorf, Cuxhaven, and Friedrichshafen. He has written in collaboration with Harry Harper a book, "Aircraft in the Great War," which has just been published by A. C. McClurg & Co., and in which the following appears:

By Claude Grahame-White.

WHAT has been learned about bomb dropping from aircraft has been learned almost entirely since the beginning of the war, and the lessons taught have surprised those who not many months ago were found ready to declare that for destructive work of any significance the present type aeroplane is a factor of no account. Bombs, as a matter of fact, have been dropped from the air—an astonishing number, indeed. In the space of a few days during the fighting in Flanders our British pilots let fall upon the enemy more than a hundred missiles. And though the results save in certain cases have been moral rather than material, still there have been results; and in one or two such affairs, when conditions have been favorable, the bomb droppers have done work which was important and could not have been achieved by any other means.

But the skeptics have had ground for their views. They grant small importance to the modern type aircraft as an instrument of destruction; they are apt to smile at the feats which have been chronicled in this war. Their real point of view—and to a certain extent a reasonable one—is that hardly anything can be done, at any rate in this campaign, that will foreshadow the powers of a perfected craft—that huge machine of the future which, fully armed and able to hover over a given spot and take an accurate and deadly aim, will shower death in many dreadful forms—bombs containing terrible explosives; others releasing suffocating fumes; others, again, which will spread fire over everything they touch. This is a dream of the future—a nightmare, rather; and there are those who say that before this evil day can come aircraft will have made war so terrible that all humanity will revolt.

As it is, and from many quarters, there have come protests against the use of aircraft for purposes of destruction. That they would be so used, and in this war, was not for a moment doubted. What has been surprising is the amount of damage they have done. Not that this damage has been considerable, for it has not; but it has been far greater than many would have thought possible. With no experience worth the name, and with no missiles or releasing gear that were anything but experimental, the aviators in this campaign have been able—almost entirely through their own courage and skill—to pursue a guerrilla form of warfare which merely from its harassing and disconcerting aspects has had a marked effect upon the enemy attacked.

But is not aerial bomb dropping to be condemned as barbarous? Should an enemy be allowed to rain explosives from the air into a city, killing and wounding its citizens? If there can be any limit in the terrors of war, should not an attack from the air represent that limit? These are questions that have been raised, and there has been a storm of indignation when from time to time the Germans have dropped bombs upon Antwerp, Paris, or Dunkirk. The point has been advanced and strongly represented that such destructive raids are merely wanton, that they serve no military purpose.

To these objections there are rejoinders, and they are not made necessarily by men who are inhuman. War is war. This is a platitude, but it needs to be understood. When you begin to fight, when you decide that the sword and the sword alone is your last court of appeal, then you must fight as fiercely and as relentlessly as you can, using every weapon that can aid you or any new terror that may shake the morale of your enemy and incline him to lose courage and yield. War is like nothing else; it breaks down the conceptions of ordinary life. To understand it, to appreciate the point of view of those who wage it, we must seek new values.

"Quite so," readers may agree. "But are there not rules of war which civilized nations have agreed to adopt?"

CLAUDE GRAHAME-WHITE

That is so; and as regards aerial bomb dropping, when this is practiced no laws are broken because no laws have been made.

"But," objects the reader again, "what about the dropping of bombs on undefended cities?"

Here, as is often the case in regard to warfare, there is a misapprehension. When bombs were dropped on Antwerp, for example, and when others were let fall above Paris, there was condemnation of the act, people being led to suppose that it was a violation of the rules of war. But it was not. The enemy was within his rights in dropping bombs on these cities. They were not defenseless cities, but were in fact strongly defended—at any rate, according to the rules of war. In this question of "defended" or "undefended" cities there lies the crux of the matter. Article 25 of the regulations annexed to The Hague convention of 1907 places on record the words:

"It is forbidden to attack or to bombard, by any means whatever, towns, villages, habitations, or buildings which are not defended."

This rule, which is so specific, has been taken to mean that no bombs should be dropped by aircraft upon towns or cities and that, in fact, all bomb dropping from the air is illegal. But this article gives no explanation of when a town, from the aviator's point of view, should be considered defended or undefended. There do not exist, as a matter of fact, any rules to govern aerial bombardment. None have been drawn up because this problem was regarded as so new and so strange that until there had been a war few authorities cared to grapple with it.

Why, it may be asked, could not the nations have agreed to prohibit bomb dropping? The question was brought up at The Hague convention and no general agreement could be obtained. The proposal was that aerial bomb dropping should be excluded from war, and certain nations were willing to agree. These were Great Britain, the United States, Austria, Belgium, Greece, Norway, Holland, Portugal, Switzerland, and Turkey.

What was actually agreed was this: That in any war, as between these countries mentioned, they would refrain from using aircraft for the purposes of dropping bombs. But they made it clear also that, should they be fighting against any of the nations which had not signed this agreement, or in alliance with any of them, then they should be free to drop bombs if they cared to do so. Among countries which were unwilling to exclude aerial destruction from their weapons of war were Germany and France. In this campaign we have Germany as our enemy and France as our ally, and as Germany and France drop bombs, we do so also.

What the question amounts to, in plain language, is this: Both Germany and France recognized that they had in the aeroplane a weapon that might be valuable in raids across the frontier. Therefore they were not willing to deprive themselves of its use. Again the platitude, "War is war"; and Dr. J. M. Spaight, who has studied closely this problem, has told us in his book "Aircraft in War," while discussing the legitimacy of any new weapon such as the aeroplane:

"If the results which it achieves are sufficiently great to be regarded as justifying the incidental suffering of its victims, if its 'bag' is large enough, then the conscience of the world has no difficulty in approving its use."

This is plain speaking; at first sight it may appear brutal; but the standpoint, when the business is that of war, is the right one. Nations when they go to war fight to win, and it is permissible to use all methods save those which are barbarous. If one country by dropping bombs from airships over another can produce a panic among the public it is justified in using this weapon. The policy of Germany in war is, among other things, to strike terror into the hearts of all civil populations she encounters.

AIR SCOUTING AND TACTICS.

AS he cannot be checked, as his spying cannot be avoided, the air scout has been a factor in this war to be reckoned with in every movement of troops. It was thought a year or so ago that the presence of these observers high in the air would revolutionize the tactics of war. The experience we have now gained shows us that, though war is not easily revolutionized, the air scout has played an extraordinarily important part. But flying has not been the only factor to be considered; abnormally long battle fronts and the hugeness of the forces engaged have brought up problems that were never faced before. War has changed, and so materially that the change is difficult to comprehend.

Today when great nations fight there is scarcely a possibility—as there was, say, in the time of Napoleon—for a swift and brilliant master stroke. In wars of the past, when two armies, each, for example, of 100,000 men, were engaging each other closely, the throwing against the flank of one of them by some quick and dexterous move of a force, say, of 30,000 men, might prove sufficient to turn the tide and give victory to the commander who had planned the stroke. But in this great war, and particularly in such a battle as that upon the Aisne, a flanking movement by 30,000 men would, owing to the smallness of such a force when compared with the bulk of troops engaged, fail in its object.

With 300,000 men, perhaps, detached for a flank attack there might be some result. But the movement of such a force as this is slow; it cannot be flung impetuously at a critical position. And this point, too, must be remembered: While such a force is being assembled at some point behind the fighting line it is the duty of the air scouts to discover it and to follow it when it is in motion. Thus the blow, even when it is struck, is robbed of its prime object; it fails to surprise. The force has been watched in its formation and in its movement into action, and the result is that at the point which is threatened more troops have been shifted into place and force is met by force.

Granted efficient air scouts and an enemy unable to prevent their work, a commander in chief should know exactly from day to day not only what his opponent is doing at the moment but where his reserve troops are being moved and at what points his battle front is being strengthened or thinned. The element of surprise, once so vital in war, has been almost eliminated. It is of no avail for one commander, a subtle move in mind, to augment his screen of cavalry and press back the enemy's land scouts. It is not they so much he needs to fear; it is the new scout, the enemy's superscout, who passes high above his cavalry and penetrates deep within his lines, watching the assembly of the transport trains and noting that bustle in the camps and those clouds of dust along the roads that speak of the movement of large bodies of men.

Who Pays?

By Robert Herrick.

I SETTLED myself comfortably at the small table which the dining car provided and chose from the menu what my appetite prompted. As I lay down the card and unfolded the crisp napkin, my eye fell upon a legend that the railroad company had had inscribed on the back of the menu—as elsewhere—and in idleness, just as the sly corporation meant, I took in the information that the great railroad—"the premier among American railroads"—was being slowly driven into bankruptcy by the effect of ill-considered legislation, notably of the "full crew law," with which the legend on the back of the menu dealt especially. The extravagance in operation entailed by this piece of social legislation, as feelingly described by the railroad company for the benefit of its patrons, appalled me—as it was intended it should appal the chance diner. There, I said to myself, laying aside the menu, are the fruits of greed, of hasty socialistic lawmaking. No business can survive such gouging by its workmen. Who do they think will pay the bill?

The sunshine outside on the March landscape seems a trifle less brilliant than before. With a sigh I pick up my morning paper, the reliable, conservative, capitalistic sheet that I had purchased to while away the journey. And there my eye is drawn as if by hypnotic power to a full column account of the "hearing" about the Rock Island railroad affairs. It amuses me, these post mortems that we make long after some railroad property has been thoroughly wrecked, so long after that the convenient memories of the men concerned in the wrecking have forgotten all trifling details that involve millions of stockholders' money, and refer vaguely to transactions of magnitude. I can never get over my surprise at the nonchalance with which railroad financiers discuss the evasive millions they have handled, which came from somewhere, out of somebody's pockets, and went mysteriously somewhere else into some other body's pockets.

I don't know what good these belated post mortems on railroad evil deeds can do, but they are a favorite form of public entertainment. A year ago it was the malodorous 'Frisco system that was being dissected on the government table, and about the same time there was the notorious New Haven. There is always some big operation on! I suppose it is the love of scandal that makes these melancholy records of plain dishonesty, of financial jugglery, and incompetency amusing reading. Then there is the size of it. These gentlemen who looted the 'Frisco and the New Haven and the Rock Island, not to mention other minor pilferings of the same sort, played their game on such a stupendous scale! How could they be expected to remember where the millions went? Wasn't it Harriman who expressed his irritation at being pestered as to what really happened to some thirty millions of bonds that once belonged to the Alton?

WELL, my food arrives, is laid on the table by the agile waiter, and I lay aside the newspaper to devote mself to the meal. But my mind goes wondering where all the millions in these wrecked railroads really did go—into whose pockets they were poured at last? Certainly not into the railroads', and not into "full crews" or taxes or other forms of public extortions. And the sunshine outside does not seem to glitter so brilliantly as I thought it did over the early spring fields through which we are speeding swiftly.

If these greedy operatives and tax gatherers are ruining the railroads they seem to have left something for the Moores and the Reids and the Yoakums and the Harrimans and the Morgans et al., ad infinitum! But who pays the bill?

At last my modest luncheon has been swallowed, and I pay my bill, which, I notice, is 25 per cent more than it was last year on the same journey for smaller portions of food. Ah, well, every one knows that food has gone up and the railroads are hard up, poor things, and need the 25 per cent more than I do perhaps. So I drop my oblation into the waiter's chocolate palm and seize my hat. I will have a good smoke and forget all this weary coil of who pays the bill. I go on a hunt through the long "limited express" for a smoking car or compartment where I may take my ease with my pipe. But there is no smoking car or compartment, so an official informs me; nothing but a filthy, reeking day coach—"up forwards," a mile or more. "Economy," the official grins in explanation.

BUT one thing is borne in upon me irresistibly as I jolt to and fro on my hard seat and suck comfort from my pipe, and that is I am not getting the benefit, except morally, of all this economy! For I belong to that large, vague, soft, nonresistant majority in the country known as the general public. The public always pays the bill, in one way or another, as everybody knows—must pay the bill for all the greeds and the extortions and the incompetencies of others. That is what the general public is for—to pay the bills and ask no questions. Of late years it has been asking questions, with an uncomfortable pertinacity, which the financial managers of the public's business call "agitation" and abhor. Then the public gets tired—it shows signs of fatigue just now—and concludes that it does no good to ask questions, for it will never get a correct answer. And that is what the financiers call "coming to its senses" about business. That state of mind, they warn the public, must precede any real revival of prosperity—a sort of conviction of sin on the part of the public for being too curious and dissatisfied.

Meanwhile the little ego that I represent of the big public mind must take the situation with as much humor as possible. It is surely a joke that railroad managers should be so plaintive about the injustices of the "full crew law" and added taxes, while so many of them—and the leaders, too—have dipped so deep and so often during the last twenty years into the corporate purse of the properties in their charge. "A pest on both your houses!" I mutter as I knock the ashes from my pipe and seek an atmosphere less foul on the platform.

Forget it! I hear my neighbors, all members of the general public, murmur good naturedly. But that is just the trouble with the American general public: it has a spasmodic memory. It is too busy or too indolent to unravel the snarls that affect its comfort, its welfare, and apportion blame justly where it belongs. Post mortems on dishonesty seem futile, but they would be worth while if the public really learned a lesson from them. For, some day, the public must make up its mind whether it will govern itself or hand the business over wholly to those who are interested in governing it for the profit they can make. As it is now the great general public seems to rest between the upper millstone of capitalism, sometimes reckless and dishonest, and the lower millstone of labor, too often narrow and self-interested. We know what happens to any object between two millstones.

FUTURES REACT AFTER ADVANCE

COARSE GRAINS HEAVY.

The wheat market had a decided change of front during the session. Prices at the opening were firm, and there was a big bulge following. Commission houses which were the best buyers of the last few days started in selling out their wheat, and the market broke sharply, closing 1¼@1½c lower for the day. All months were weak and there did not appear to be much demand for the May here, although Minneapolis May was again strong.

There were no cables, on account of the English holiday. Foreign news, however, was helpful to the bulls, the damage reports from this side stimulating a better continental demand, while Argentine and Indian offerings were firmer, the Plate markets being influenced by the advices from this side. It was claimed, too, that the bulk of the Argentine surplus wheat has already been contracted for.

Crop Experts Send Bull News.

Crop news favored the bulls also, but there was no great enthusiasm on the part of traders. The Kansas report showed a loss of 12.8 per cent in condition since a month ago, and Snow's report was bullish, claiming about a 60 per cent crop in some of the best Illinois wheat counties. Both Snow and the Kansas reports gave Hessian fly and chinch bugs as the principal causes for the deterioration in what prospects.

Receipts here were 45 cars, with 65 cars inspected yesterday. Primary receipts for the day were 532,000 bu and for the week they were 3,814,000 bu, against 3,365,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts were 155 cars, against 131 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 259 cars compared to 188 cars a year ago. Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 400,000 bu for one day.

Southwest Offerings Light.

In the southwest free offerings of winter wheat continue, and it was claimed premiums for new crop wheat at the gulf were relatively about 1c lower. Stocks of old wheat in the southwest are supposed to be large, but in other parts of the country supplies are light. Weather conditions continue favorable. There were rains in the Ohio valley and showers southwest, while elsewhere clearing conditions prevail.

Some of the local bulls, including Cutten, were credited with selling wheat yesterday, and wire houses were sellers on the bulge. Early there was buying by Ware-Leland, Bartlett-Frazier, and Barrell and Ware-Lelan.

Corn Prices Have Reaction.

Corn prices were affected by wheat. At the close net losses for the day were ⅝@¾c. Offerings from the country continue light, and there is also a slow demand for shipment. Weather and crop conditions are excellent, but the rains have delayed planting in some sections. However, general crop prospects are excellent. It is expected the acreage will be larger than a year ago. Argentine reports were less favorable on account of the warmer and more unsettled weather. However, Argentine cables said there was a good demand at higher prices for June-July shipment. Receipts of corn here were 57 cars, with 64 cars the inspection yesterday. Primary receipts were 2,610,000 bu, against 2,131,000 bu for the same week a year ago. Cash prices were steady and there were sales of 90,000 bu. Receivers reported but little increase in country offerings.

Oats Trade Is Quiet.

Oats were easy at the close, with other grains, resting prices being ⅛c up to ⅜c off. The May was relatively firm. The cash market was quiet and sales were only 50,000 bu. Shipping demand east is quiet and there is not much inquiry for export. Receipts were 83 cars, with 67 cars inspected yesterday, and primary receipts were 2,642,000 bu for the week, against 3,834,000 bu a year ago. For the day primary receipts were 811,000 bu, against 717,000 bu a year ago.

Hog Products Are Easy.

Provisions were generally a little lower through the list. Offerings were not heavy, but there was not much demand, and the weaker tone at the yards exerted a bearish tendency. The hog receipts were 13,000, with 36,000 the estimate for Monday, and for the week the estimate was 130,000 bu. Western receipts for the week were 519,000, against 458,300 a year ago. Liverpool prices were 3d up for backs, 1 shilling up for Cumberland sides, and 9d higher for hams. Prices at the yards were steady to 5c off. It is expected there will be a better English demand for American products.

Rye Quiet but Firm.

Rye was quiet but firm at $1.17 nominal for No. 2. Receipts, 1 car.

Timothy seed was quiet at $4.50@6.25 for cash. Clover seed was steady at $8.00@12.50 for cash.

Duluth flax closed 2⅝c higher, with cash on track $1.97, May $1.96, July $1.99, and September $2.02. Receipts, 7 cars. Minneapolis was 2⅝c higher at $1.93@1.94 for cash on track. Receipts, 2 cars. Winnipeg closed 1@1⅝c higher, with May $1.79¼, July $1.81½, and October $1.84¼. Receipts, 3 cars.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The market for coffee futures was very quiet today, but after opening unchanged to two points higher prices advanced quite sharply on a little European buying in the absence of prompt sellers. NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Snow wired Bartlett-Frazier: "Drove today in Washington, Randolph, Monroe, and Sinclair, four counties with more than 450,000 acres, or one-sixth of the wheat area of Illinois. Find fly damage already apparent everywhere and much fly in stalk that does not yet show. Some good wheat found, but there is also much that is a complete loss. Chinch bugs also present in dangerous numbers, but the damage is from fly. Wheat just heading and stalks already breaking down. District traversed today will hardly average more than a 60 per cent crop. The late seeding is practically a total failure because of the dry spring as well as fly damage, so that the acreage increase this year is lost. Early oats heading very short and poor from early drought. Corn coming fast, acreage increased with soil, and moisture conditions never better."

Cutten was given credit for selling wheat, and there was free selling by commission houses, who were good buyers around $1.25 for the July earlier in the week. Local shorts were forced to cover at the start, and the bullish crop reports from Kansas and from B. W. Snow started values strong. The general opinion among wheat traders appears to be that damage will have to be extensive in order to offset the increased acreage in both winter and spring wheat. Consequently there is less enthusiasm over the crop damage news than there would be if the acreage was normal, and conditions so far had not been so favorable. That the damage has been considerable in sections is shown by the recent state reports, but there is still a prospect for a bumper crop.

The Kansas crop report, wired by King of Toledo, making the condition 80 against 92.8 a month ago, was a bull factor in wheat yesterday, although the advance failed to hold. The crop indicated is 136,000,000 bu, or 6,000,000 bu less than the government May estimate of 142,000,000 bu. The figures compare with the April state report of 159,000,000 bu. A year ago, according to the government, the state harvested 176,000,000 bu. Principal damage from Hessian fly and chinch bugs in Saline, Dickinson, McPherson, Marion, Harvey, Sedgwick, and Sumner counties. Much corn still to be planted.

Reports from the seaboard were indicative of a little export business in corn the last day or so, and it was intimated Argentine corn was close to a working basis for import into this country. This would not be at all surprising. Plate corn is now being contracted freely for July shipment by European buyers, and it is claimed with good weather the shipments of Plate corn will be extremely large later in the season, providing there is tonnage enough available to carry the grain.

English advices indicate that American bacon is relatively the cheapest article in the way of food products at the present time. Large quantities of Irish and Danish bacon have been used, but prices for Danish bacon have advanced sharply, while there are still liberal supplies of American bacon. Prices for cereals have advanced greatly compared to meat products.

General rains were reported in France, and this was regarded as unfavorable. Broomhall cabled that the continent was bidding more actively for wheat as the result of the unfavorable conditions reported in America. Argentine markets were also firmer for the same reason.

Cash wheat prices were steady here, and it is understood there is a good inquiry, but holders are firm as a general thing. The seaboard business was light. Cash corn and oats were steady and there were sales of 90,000 bu corn and 50,000 bu oats.

Reports from southern Illinois did not agree altogether with some of the crop experts, who are sending in reports of serious damage. Many reports said conditions were still favorable.

Receivers say there are no signs of any important increase in corn marketings. An after planting movement has been expected, but farmers are said to be inclined to hold for higher prices.

Keusch-Schwartz had a New York message saying the new wheat premiums at the gulf were 1c lower and that offerings of wheat from the country were liberal.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 66 cars; corn, 64 cars; oats, 67 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 22 cars; hogs, 36,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 130,000 head.

Allen Logan of Kansas City estimates the Kansas crop of wheat at 120,000,000 bu, or about 16,000,000 bu less than the state report figures.

Chicago packing of hogs for the season to date is placed at 1,405,000, against 1,062,000 a year ago.

Hog market opened at a decline of 5c on receipts of 10,500 head and closed largely 10c lower than on Friday. The trade was active at the decline and a good clearance was effected, but shippers had only a few orders and packers had the market well in control. Top sales were made at $7.77½, which proved far out of line with the general market, as few lots sold higher than $7.70, and the bulk found an outlet at $7.50@7.65. Pigs were lower, with prime shippers at $7.25 and lighter weights at $6.50@6.75 for the bulk.

Final prices made hogs 15@20c lower than a week ago, while pigs showed a loss of 35@40c. The average price of all hogs received here this week, however, was $7.65, or the highest made since last October, and 5c higher than last week's average. Receipts at Chicago this week aggregated around 141,000 head and were the largest since early in March. Shipments fell off to little more than 10,000 head, and this absence of strong competition from eastern shippers enabled packers to force sharply lower values on closing days of the week.

CATTLE.

Although receipts of cattle at Chicago this week made a substantial increase, the market displayed stability and values closed unchanged to 10@15c lower than a week ago. The decline was confined to the plain and medium quality heavy steers, demand for which continued unsatisfactory. Lighter steers made steady figures, regardless of quality, and more of the prime yearling grades could have been disposed of to advantage. Corn fed cows and heifers also sold well, but animals that had been pastured met with strict discrimination and sold at a decline of 25@50c. These are believed due for further reductions, but a steady market is expected for dry fed stock. Bulls sold 25@35c lower for the week, while calves met with a brisk call and closed 25@50c higher.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 111,700, against 99,900 the preceding week, 95,600 a year ago, and 112,700 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 2,333,000, against 2,265,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Opening at the highest level ever recorded, sheep and lamb values at Chicago this week underwent sharp downward revisions and closed lower, although effecting fair rallies towards the finish. Aged sheep sustained more loss than any other class, ewes closing 75c@$1.00 lower than a week ago. Yearlings were scarce and showed little change at the finish, while shorn lambs met with a broad outlet and closed on a steady basis after selling cheaper during the greater part of the period. Wool lambs closed 50c lower than a week ago. Top sales this week were made at $11.50 for wool lambs and $8.25 for shorn sheep. Shorn lambs reached $10.25, the highest price of the season, and closed at $10.15. Receipts for the week showed a decrease of nearly 5,000 head, and were little more than half the arrivals the same week last year.

American Light and Traction.

J. L. B., Aberdeen, S. D.—The American Light and Traction company was formed in 1901 as a holding company for various gas, electric lighting, and street railway undertakings. It paid 6 per cent on its preferred stock from the start and has paid dividends on common since 1904. For the last five years the rate has been 10 per cent cash and 10 per cent stock. The balance sheet of March 31 last showed preferred stock outstanding to the amount preferred stock outstanding to the amount of $15,715,600. As a 2½ per cent stock dividend was paid on May 1 there should be now $16,108,490 of common. The gross earnings for the year ended March 31 last showed an increase notwithstanding the business depression. The gross was $4,556,164, compared with $4,422,767 the year before. After paying dividends there was left a balance of $512,611, a decrease of $176,106, compared with 1914. The total profit and loss surplus passed the $10,000,000 mark in February. Evidently the payment of 10 per cent stock dividends cannot go on indefinitely and a purchase of common stock at present prices would be somewhat speculative.

Central Illinois Public Service.

E. S., Fond du Lac, Wis.—The Central Illinois Public Service company is the largest subsidiary of the Middle West Utilities. It is still in the development stage. It has outstanding $3,225,000 preferred stock and $4,000,000 common. There are a little over $1,000,000 of underlying bonds, a little over $3,000,000 first and refunding bonds, $3,000,000 three year gold notes and about $2,000,000 of debentures and floating debt. The business depression last year was particularly severe in the Illinois coal mining district and the earnings of the company were affected adversely. However, the gross showed an increase of nearly 10 per cent, and interest on all bonds, including $3,500,000 which are pledged under the three year notes, was earned more than one and one-half times.

Atlantic Gas and Electric.

S. C. G.: The Atlantic Gas and Electric company, whose bond you hold, was formed in 1912 as a holding corporation. Its income account for 1913 shows net earnings, $179,815; bond interest, $48,975; dividends on preferred stock, $79,036; surplus, $51,803. The company has now passed under the control of the General Gas and Electric. No recent reports of earnings of the latter are available. Apparently you would be changing from an investment to a speculation if you exchanged your bond for preferred and common stock of the General Gas and Electric. A Philadelphia broker wants to sell some General Gas and Electric 6 per cent notes, due in 1918, at 96½. This is a 10 per cent income basis.

Little River Drainage District.

J. C. R.—The bonds of the Little River drainage district of Missouri are a legal investment for trust funds in that state. The law under which they are issued is favorable to bondholders and the engineering and legal details of the project have been carefully worked out by the best authorities. Though only a small part of the district is now cleared and revenue producing, the stated average value of the uncleared property ought to be sufficient to insure the payment of the drainage tax.

Brief Answers.

F. B., New Decatur, Ala.—The purchase of stock in a magazine is a participation in a rather hazardous business venture. The assets of such a publication consist in large part of good will which bad management might destroy in a short time. A good mortgage on real estate worth twice the loan and producing rent equal to twice the interest is one of the most conservative of investments.

M. P. S.—The Tri-Bullion Smelting and Development company has a zinc and lead mine in Arizona. It operated at a loss in 1913. Its 1914 report is not available. The stock is not worth $2 a share as collateral. The latest quotation found is 18 cents bid.

C. R. S.—Almost any reputable broker will buy stocks for you on the installment plan if your first installment is as much as 25 per cent of the whole value.

NATIONAL BANKS LOAN MORE

Washington, D. C., May 22.—Loans and discounts of national banks in New York and Chicago increased more than $72,000,000 in the period between March 4 and May 1, according to an announcement today by the controller of the currency. St. Louis showed a decrease of about $1,000,000. Total deposits in all three cities showed an increase in the same period of more than $245,000,000.

The Heart of Your Building

16% More Heat from Your Coal

This is the advantage which owners of Weil Firebox Boilers enjoy. 16% more heat from every pound of coal.

This exact degree of superiority over other types of firebox boilers was conclusively proved in a recent unbiased engineering test.

Ask your architect why Weil Firebox Boilers are 16% more efficient. He knows the advantage of our bent water tube grate over the straight type.

NEW COAST RATES HELP TO CHICAGO

Interstate Commerce Decisions Lower Rail Tariffs to the Pacific.

LOCAL CURB MARKET.

All the transcontinental railroads have agreed to accept the findings of the interstate commerce commission involving rates east of the Rocky mountains to Pacific coast terminal points and intermediate points. The new rail rates will put Chicago on a competitive basis in the Pacific coast markets with the water rates from the eastern seaboard via the Panama canal, maintaining the status quo and giving the manufacturer a delivery fifteen days earlier than the boat connection. The new reductions will become effective on July 15.

Edward Chambers, vice president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railroad, yesterday prepared the following brief statement, setting forth the benefits that Chicago and the surrounding territory will realize from the decisions:

Rail Service Advantages.

"The railroads can afford to handle traffic from Chicago to Pacific coast points at rates that meet those of water carriers from the Atlantic seaboard to the same points. The rail service includes full insurance, avoids on carload business rehandling, hauling charges at both ends, and other saving as compared with the water carriers. These factors enable the all rail line to get a somewhat higher rate than that charged by the water carriers from port to port, while still in competition. The all rail service Chicago to the Pacific coast is much quicker than from New York via the water route, saving on the average of fifteen days. This is such a distinct advantage to Chicago that its volume of business to Pacific coast points should rapidly increase.

"Within the last few years Chicago has attained a position which, with the plants in operation and those under construction, will enable it to supply the Pacific coast with all kinds of goods consumed in this country."

probable demand. The strain of the last nine months has made necessary a thorough liquidation of any previous distension.

"If war should come it is probable our participation in it would be for the present, at least, industrial rather than military. Released from the restraint of a neutrality that has been oppressive, we should be free to devote all our activities to producing the things required and would employ every factory and every wage earner in this country at their maximum capacity for a year and perhaps longer."

Pacific Gas and Electric.

The Pacific Gas and Electric company paid off yesterday $1,500,000 of its 5 per cent one year notes, thus retiring the issue of $4,000,000. An official of the corporation says:

"One thing in our situation that is rather unique is that the Pacific Gas and Electric company, notwithstanding its size, is the owner in absolute fee of all the properties it operates. Our balance sheet conceals no deficits or liabilities in accounts of subsidiary companies, which usually are not published, or if published, are too complicated for any but expert understanding."

Dividend Declared.

The Atlas Powder company has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent and an extra dividend of 1 per cent on its common stock, payable June 10. Books close May 29; reopen June 11.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates were steady in Chicago at 4@4½ per cent on collateral, 3¾@4 per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange sold at 5c premium. Chicago bank clearings were $46,518,014.

Financial News Notes.

Gross earnings of the Chicago Great Western for the first week of May show an increase of $1,430.

The Ohio utilities commission has authorized an issue of $1,739,000 5 per cent bonds by the Columbus Railway, Power and Light company.

Chicago Securities.

On the local stock exchange People's Gas was weak. It declined from an opening at 116⅝ to 113. The weakness was due to the announcement that the city of Chicago will press its contention for 70 cent gas. Gas at this price will involve the repayment of about $8,000,000 rebates to the customers of the company.

Sears-Roebuck common was firm. Swift & Co. shares were steady.

In the bond department Commonwealth Edison 5s again sold at 100. Ogden Gas 5s were quoted at 96. Swift & Co. bonds were steady at 96½.

ENTIRE LIST UP IN WALL STREET

Trade Dwindles, However, with General Recessions from Best Prices.

WAR SHARES FEATURE.

Total sales of stocks, 367,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $1,060,000.

New York, May 22.—Judging from the course of today's stock market, Wall street, or at least the speculative fraternity, is proceeding on the theory that Italy's participation in the war is calculated to shorten the conflict.

This theory is hardly to be reconciled, however, with the fact that the most striking gains of the brief session were again made by the war specialties, Crucible Steel and Bethlehem Steel leading. Should the war come to a speedy end, it is obvious that demand for munitions and other supplies of like character would be materially reduced. Crucible Steel, which made a maximum gain of 4⅝ points, contributed 25 per cent to the first hour's business.

Rise Envelops Entire List.

The entire list took part in the rise, which was most active in the first thirty minutes, after which trading dwindled, with some effect on values. In numerous instances higher prices were made in the second hour, but general recessions from the best ruled at the close, Bethlehem Steel yielding all its advance. Reports of an anti-American demonstration at Berlin caused some late selling.

London was observing a holiday, so the local market was without guidance from that quarter. Private cables from London and other international centers threw no light upon the international situation, but in local circles the belief prevailed that Germany's reply to this government regarding the Lusitania incident would pave the way to a better understanding between Washington and Berlin.

Reason for Rise of Steel.

The statement of the president of the United States Steel corporation that the output of the company's plants has increased to 75 per cent, as against 40 per cent last January, was doubtless responsible for the strength of Steel shares. Mercantile agencies also reported more favorable conditions in general lines. Kansas crop reports estimating a wheat yield of 80 per cent show a depreciation of almost 13 per cent from last month's estimates.

A moderate loan contraction and a small increase of reserves were the only features of the bank statement, which failed to disclose an expected gain of cash.

Bonds were steady. United States coupon and registered 3s advanced ¼ per cent on call during the week.

A STATE BANK Founded 1855 60th ANNIVERSARY

Protect Your Income by Properly Distributing Your Investments

Bankers earn large incomes on funds entrusted to their care, and reduce liability of loss to a minimum by properly distributing their investments. This principle is so firmly established that a bank by legal enactment is prevented from investing more than 10 per cent of its capital and surplus in any one enterprise.

If you are dependent upon agricultural production for your income, you should invest some of your surplus in sound, dividend-paying preferred stocks of industrial corporations. A reserve income from this source goes on steadily, whether crops are good or bad.

We are specialists in the selection and underwriting of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stocks issued by sound manufacturing institutions. The values behind our stocks are real, and by contract are permanently maintained at the ratio of $200.00 of net assets for each $100.00 of preferred stock issued.

When you understand our methods you will know why our stocks are safe. Our free booklet "Investing Under Expert Direction" explains. Send for it if you are interested, together with our descriptive offering list of stocks yielding 6 to 7 per cent income.

THERE is no doubt that building operations are being affected by the tie-up in the building trades and that the real estate market is suffering as well because of the close relations between the two. This is the statement of both building contractors and real estate brokers. Again, it is asserted by the latter that the present complication with Germany has adversely affected the market because of the apprehension aroused. However, the exceedingly interesting fact remains that there were more transfers filed in the recorder's office last week and more building permits issued by the city building department than for the corresponding week a year ago, where there was no trouble in the building trades and when the world was at peace.

It is a remarkable showing, the only apparent explanation of which is that the tie-up of building operations is not as great as most people have been led to believe, and likewise that the real estate market is not suffering as much as has been thought to be the case.

Building on Outside Goes On.

It has been known that a considerable amount of outside building is being done by small independent contractors, but the fact that the volume of building is apparently about on a normal basis is difficult to reconcile with the recognized disturbed conditions in the building trades.

The same is true with reference to the movement of real estate. Much complaint recently has been voiced by outside brokers, and particularly subdividers, regarding the injurious effect which the strike is having on the sale of lots, and undoubtedly many people planning to buy with the purpose of immediate improvement have been deterred from so doing because of this. Yet the fact remains there was a greater movement of property last week than for the corresponding week a year ago. It is a striking tribute to the strength of the market and to a building growth which declines to yield to particularly adverse conditions.

Deals Confirm Reports of Activity.

Confirmation of the activity in outside building was furnished by a number of real estate deals reported last week involving improvements of an extensive character. Announcement also was made of the plans for the construction of a $1,000,000 summer resort hotel on the lake shore at the foot of Balmoral avenue and a $250,000 factory building in the central manufacturing district.

One of these deals covered the property at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Surf street, 197 feet on the road and 185 on Surf street, which was sold by the Northern Trust company, trustee for the Sercomb estate, to E. Raphael Nourse for $80,000, at the rate of over $406 a front foot.

Callistus S. Ennis & Co. and James A. McLane & Co. were the brokers, and they subsequently sold the 100x143 feet at the northwest corner of the tract to Edward G. Uihlein for $45,000.

Plan High Grade Flats.

He plans to improve with a high grade apartment building to cost around $250,000. They also sold the forty-two feet west of this to Frank P. Schuster for $10,000. He will improve with an extra high grade three flat building. The remaining ninety-seven feet they are said to have sold to another purchaser, who also plans to improve with a high class building.

Another transaction involves the erection by Dr. R. A. Harlan of a thirty apartment building at the northeast corner of Washington boulevard and Ridgeland avenue, Austin, to cost about $100,000. It will occupy 132x130 feet, which he acquired from F. W. Blanchard in exchange for a six apartment building at 6029-31 South Park avenue, the consideration being $20,000. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. and Holton, Seelye & Co. were the brokers.

Transactions on South Side.

In a south side transaction Buck E. Ogden of Philadelphia sold to Louis C. Wagner the vacant 137x165 feet on Jefferson avenue, 120 feet north of Fifty-third street, east front, for $20,000, which he will improve with a thirty-nine apartment building to cost about $100,000. M. L. Freiberger was the broker.

The erection of apartments in South Evanston, to cost about $100,000, figured in a transaction also involving the sale of an eighteen flat building at the southeast corner of Sixtieth street and Rhodes avenue. The Evanston property comprises the southeast and northeast corners of Main street and Asbury avenue, each 150x150 feet. They were sold by Robert B. Clark to William T. Woodley for a reported $30,000 or $15,000 each. Mr. Woodley gave in exchange the equity in the south side flat building, which, with an incumbrance of $37,500, figured in at a valuation of $67,500.

Plans to Erect Four Buildings.

Another north side deal involving important improvements was reported in the purchase by Alexander Beifeld and Morris Hirsch from Leo Vogel of the vacant property at the northeast corner of Robey street and Sunnyside avenue, 157 feet on the former and 152 feet on the latter, for a reported consideration of $15,000. It is announced that plans are being prepared for a group of four buildings containing small flats and stores and flats on the corner to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Hugo Anders sold to Milton S. Plotke the vacant property at the southwest corner of Cicero and West End avenues, 180 feet on Cicero avenue and 100 feet on West End avenue, for an indicated consideration of $200,000, subject to an incumbrance of $5,000. It is stated that plans for a store, office, and flat building are being prepared. In part payment Mr. Plotke conveyed the nine apartment building at 4732-36 St. Lawrence avenue. Bach & Fries represented Mr. Anders and H. F. Knipp, of Spelz & Walson, Mr. Plotke.

Another important development of the week in a building way was the announcement that John A. Spoor and Arthur G. Leonard, trustees of the Central Manufacturing district, are to erect for the Union Bag and Paper company a big plant on Ashland avenue, between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh streets, which with the land will represent an investment of about $250,000.

Business Holds Good in the Subdivisions.

W. E. Miller, sales manager of Archibald & Co., reports that nearly a dozen buildings are under contract for Stony Island Manor and all will be completed by the middle of August. Sales continue good in this district. Cepek & Co. will subdivide and place on sale fifty acres purchased in this district last week at Eighty-seventh street.

Portia Manor, the suburban property being offered by Frederick H. Bartlett & Co., has had a good advance sale. The $500 gold prize contest for letters on "What would you do with one-half acre in Portia Manor?" already has brought in a large volume of replies. Much interest is being evidenced in this latest feature of subdivision offering.

The new subdivision of Koester & Zander, at the southeast corner of Cicero and Belmont avenues, is being rapidly improved. Two business blocks on Cicero avenue at the intersection of Belmont are rapidly nearing completion and the activity in this section promises to be one of the important new development features this year.

William H. Britigan, manager of Marquette Manor, reports sales for the week ending May 21 of $89,125. In commenting on the market conditions for subdivision property Mr. Britigan says:

"While there was evidence of a slowing up in the subdivision market in the last ten days, there is no question in my mind but that it was a temporary condition and that outside influences were responsible for it. Our daily sales sheets for the last three days are indicative of the returning strength of the market on improved property in outside subdivisions. Real investors are buying now, not speculators."

W. F. Kaiser & Co. reports considerable activity in the Metropolitan subdivision at Twelfth street and Fifty-sixth avenue. Buying was also normal last week in Petersen's Woods addition and Arcadia Terrace, both of which are near Bryn Mawr and Lincoln avenue. The underground improvements are well under way in Petersen's Woods addition.

TWO BUY COUNTRY ESTATES

Guy C. Woodin and Thomas E. Wilson, president of Morris & Co., are reported to have acquired nearly 700 acres of land on both sides of Telegraph road at Lake Forest, with the purpose of establishing handsome country estates. Mr. Woodin's purchase is about four and a half miles north of the station at Lake Forest on the west side of the road, while Mr. Wilson's purchase is on the east side of the road. They are paving two and a half miles of Telegraph road with crushed stone and gravel. They are said to plan to raise fine horses.

STARTS GOLD PRIZE CONTEST

The latest wrinkle in the subdivision business is the $500 gold prize contest started by Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. in which a prize of $200 is offered for the best letter of 1,000 words in answer to the question: "What would you do with one-half acre in Portia Manor?" For the second best answer $100 is offered, and $50 for the third, with $5 for each of the thirty contestants whose papers contribute most in the way of practical suggestions. The firm has not yet disclosed the location of the subdivision.

FLATS TAKE LEAD IN REAL ESTATE DEALS OF WEEK

Outside Business Property Slows Up as Apartments Forge Ahead.

There was much doing of an interesting character in apartment house properties during the week, the showing being better than for several weeks past. On the other hand, outside business property, which has been much in evidence lately and has made up the bulk of the more interesting transactions in the outside field, was represented only to a small extent in the week's business.

Probably the most interesting of the flat deals was that covering the extra high grade building known as 33 Bellevue place, which was conveyed by Buckingham Chandler to Mrs. Charlotte S. Smith, wife of Thomas P. Smith, president of E. H. Sargent & Co., Mr. Chandler taking back a ninety-nine year lease of the property. The transfer was made at an indicated consideration of $150,000, subject to an incumbrance of $110,000, originally $125,000.

Rentals to Decrease.

The terms of the lease are unique, as they provide for a graduated decreasing rental, reversing the usual process in connection with ninety-nine year leases. Thus, the first year's rent is stated to be $12,415.68, which reduces gradually for the first twenty-one years until the rent for the twentieth year is $8,140.63, and for the remaining seventy-nine years is $3,000 a year. It is stated the fee was created for the purchaser as an investment in preference to the usual method of serial payment mortgages.

The building is a four story, attic, and basement structure on 111½x100 feet of ground between Rush street and the Lake Shore drive and contains seven apartments of fourteen and fifteen rooms, which rent at from $4,000 to $6,000 a year. It was erected in 1912. Chandler, Hildreth & Co. were the brokers, while John D. Wild attended to the legal details of the lease for the lessee and Charles F. Harding for the lessor.

$56,000 Transfer Reported.

William E. Henry sold to James S. McCullough the fifteen flat building at the southwest corner of Artesian and Sunnyside avenues, lot 68x125 feet, for an indicated consideration of $56,000, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $35,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment two residence properties, one in Wilmette and one on Paulina street. Mr. Ingersoll of C. C. Mitchell & Co. was the broker in the deal.

The new twelve apartment building at the southeast corner of Lakewood and Loyola avenues, on 50x151 feet of ground, has been sold by William H. Banford of H. H. Banford & Co. to Lula A. Howard for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. It is divided into apartments of four and five rooms, which rent at from $40 to $50 a month. The sale was negotiated by Finley & McGuire.

Murray Wolbach Sells Flat.

The twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Maryland avenue and Sixtieth street, with 48x125 feet of ground, has been sold by Murray Wolbach to Christen Nielsen for an indicated consideration of $48,500, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000. Nielsen conveyed in part payment property in Armour avenue, at the northwest corner of Thirty-seventh street, of an indicated value of $6,000, and the property at 7101 Ingleside avenue.

The property on Lawrence avenue, forty-one feet east of Christiana avenue, lot 75x125 feet, south front, with store and flat improvements, has been sold by Alexander Beifeld and Morris Hirsch to David Steinberg for an indicated consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

The business property at the southeast corner of Grand avenue and Franklin street, 102x100 feet, with old three story brick warehouse, was sold by the estate of Francis Headen to Mae C. Killick for an indicated consideration of $50,000, the purchaser assuming an incumbrance of $25,000 and paying $25,000 for the equity, and also giving a part purchase money mortgage for $25,000. The trustees under the Schiller trust agreement acquired from Mary E. Anderson the property at the northwest corner of North Dearborn and Schiller streets, 90x149 feet, for an indicated consideration of $24,000, represented by an existing incumbrance.

Good Price on South Side.

Record was made of the transfer by William H. Barry to William M. Derby Jr. of the property on South Michigan avenue, ninety-seven feet north of Twenty-third street, lot 45x178 feet, east front, with brick improvements, for an indicated consideration of $55,000, made up of an incumbrance of $47,000 and $8,000 paid for the equity. The property subsequently was transferred by Derby to the Northern Trust company, trustee.

WHITE SOX AND CUBS TAKE LEAD IN PENNANT RACES

ROGER'S HOPES DOWN BRAVES IN NINTH, 5 TO 4

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Boston, Mass., May 22.—[Special.]—Chicago's Cubs made it three straight from Boston's world champions today and climbed into first place over the waterlogged Phillies, but they had to win the game twice to get there by a score of 5 to 4.

Zimmerman's bludgeon and Vaughn's good southpaw had the game cinched up to the seventh round. Heine drove a home run over the tall left field fence in the fourth and almost duplicated it in the sixth. He scored two runs with those blows. Vaughn's single in the fifth was chiefly responsible for two Cub tallies and the big fellow had the Braves completely awed, to all appearances. In the seventh a wild orgy of errors enabled the locals to score four runs and knot the count.

Bresnahan Leads Rally.

Fisher booted one chance and Bresnahan dropped two throws to the plate which would have cut off tallies. To retrieve himself Bresnahan led a rally which brought victory in the ninth with the aid of a wild heave by Maranville.

In the last half Bresnahan replaced Vaughn with Standridge, who struck out Gilbert, a pinch hitter of renown. Then after Standridge had pitched one ball to Moran, who batted for Fitzpatrick, Bresnahan took out Standridge and called on Humphries to finish the game. He retired the next men in order.

Boston got the first break when Egan bounded a single over second with one down in the opener. Cather's sacrifice put him on second, and Magee whaled a long blow to right center, but Williams pinched it for the third out.

Zim Wallops Home Run.

In the fourth Zimmerman got hold of a fast one and walloped it high over the fence back of Cather for a home run, giving the Cubs the jump by one lap. Saier grounded.

Tyler wavered in the fifth and issued a couple of passes which were converted into round trips. Williams led with a walk and made second on Bresnahan's out. Knisely also walked. Vaughn made his own task easier by slamming a single to center. It scored Williams and put Knisely on third, from where he jogged home when Phelan flied to deep center. Fisher rolled out.

With one gone in the sixth, Zim got hold of another good one and gave it a terrific ride almost over the fence, but it went nearer center than left and failed to clear the barrier. They stopped Zim on second, but he made third on Saier's fly to Magee and scored when Maranville fumbled Williams' grounder. Bresnahan flew out.

Braves Get Four Runs.

The Braves broke the ice in their seventh with the help of a flock of reserves and errors by Fisher and Bresnahan. Smith led with a double to center. Fisher fumbled Maranville's grounder. Strand batted for Whaling and beat out a bounder to Saier, filling the bases. Gowdy took Tyler's bat and soaked a single to center, scoring Smith and Maranville and sending Strand to third. Rudolph ran for Gowdy.

Fitzpatrick hit a little one to Vaughn, who tossed it home in time to get Strand, but Bresnahan muffed it and the run counted. Rudolph sneaked to third on the play. Egan flied to Williams, who whipped the ball home ahead of Rudolph, but again Bresnahan dropped the pill after tagging the runner, and the score was tied. Magee and Schmidt popped out.

With James on the slab they went into the ninth tied. Bresnahan led with a single, which caromed away from Smith's shins. Maranville picked up the ball and fired it against the stand, letting Roger reach second. He went to third on Knisely's fly and scored on one just like it by Phelan.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

Bill to Steve.

[Copyright: 1915: By Ring W. Lardner.]

BOSTON, May 22.—Steve. Well Steve this is a fine place to play ball and its all jest luck and guest work and a school girl could play ball on theses grds. just as good is I or Ty Cobb or any of them because it aint nothing but luck and guest work only of corse they aint no chanct for me where you got to depend on your luck because I dont have no luck and if I had some luck I wouldent be marred to a girl that goes and rents a flat for $25.00 per mo. and sticks me for the rent wile Im on the rode and shes staying to her old mans house or if I had some luck I wouldent half to be trying to play ball on grds. where the grd. keeper dont know his busness and the wind blows the ball all a round town because if I was lucky I would be runing the girls old mans brewry but no he had to go and get well again and I dont mean I dident want him to get well but when a mans as old is him what more have you got to live for. Nothing you might say.

Well Steve this here Schulte that they got plain the outfield is a pretty wise guy and he knowes what kind of a chanct a mane got plains good ball in the outfield in Boston when the winds blown in off the ocean all the wile so hard that a ball dont never come down with in 1 mile of where your looking for it. So Schulte tells Bresnahan hes feeling sick and could he lay off and Bresnahan fell for it and told him to lay off so Bresnahan come up to me and says I would half to play right field and I says all right but on the square Steve I was just as sick is Schulte and ought to never went in there feeling the way I was. But I aint no cry baby so I says all right I would play and I went out there and played right field.

Well Steve I led off in the 1 inning and it was this lucky left hand it stiff of a Tyler that was faceing against us and I cracked the 1st. 1 he throwed up there right on the nose and this Maranville jumps a mile in the air and speered it but the ball wouldent of came near him but for the wind blown it tords him.

Well I dident have no chance in the out field til there 8th inning and Schmidt was up and hes a left hand it hitter and I thot of corse Vaughn would have sence enough to keep the ball on the outside so he couldent pull 1 down the foul line and so I lade over tords center field and 1st. thing you know Vaughn give him 1 on the in side and he cracked it over Saers head but he hit under the ball and razed it way up. Well Steve I juged the ball perfect and started after it with the crack of the bat and it was a ball I could catch in my pocket 9 times out of a 100 that is where they aint no hurry up cane blown acrost the field all the wile.

So as I say I had the ball judge O. K. and run over tords the foul line and in tords Saier but Zimmerman hollers that hes got it and I seen he had misjudged it and dident know where was it going because it started to far out for a 2d. base man to catch it I dont care weather he was Eddy Collins or who was he. But Zimmerman yelled for me to keep a way and I told him to keep a way his self and I kept going for the ball and just as I was geting set under it up came a Gus of wind and took it over to 1 side and pulled it back tords the in field and as soon is I seen it was bean carred back by the wind tords the in field I hollered to Zimmerman to go a head and take it and he had gave up like a busher or some thing and couldent get to it in time but if he had of been on the job in the 1st. place and started with the crack of the bat he could of catched it in his cap. Ether him or Saier ought to of catched the ball but they dident nether 1 or them try for it and the ball fell safe and Schmidt was on 2d. base and then Vaughn throwed a couple up there with out nothing on them and they was a couple of base hits and 2 runs come in.

Well when the inning was over I come in and it was my turn to hit again so I grabbed my bat and started up to the plate and this here Bresnahan called me back to the bench and sent Corriden up to hit for me and I says Whats the matter do you take a man out of the game because this here Maranville made a lucky stab and robbed me out of a base hit and Bresnahan says no but Im afrade to leave you in that outfield because the Boston club hasent been drawing good and cant buy many balls and may be a ball might hit you in the head and get ripped. I says Dont talk your smart stuff a round me. So that shut him up. Then I went in the club house and drest and I dident even wate to see how the game come out but I went down to the hotel and got a couple drinks because they aint no mgr. going to try there monky busness on me and get away with it.

Fine ball pk. eh Steve and a fine town where you cant never tell where a fly balls going on acct. of the wind comeing in off the ocean all the wile and we got a fine ball club where the 1st. base man dont never start after a ball and the 2d. base man quits as soon is he sees its going to be a hard ball to judge.

Well Steve I aint said nothing to Bresnahan sence it come off and all as Im waiting for is for him to shoot off his mouth at me and then it will be good night mr. Bresnahan eh Steve.

BRAVES OFF SOCIAL STUFF; MUST SEND THEIR REGRETS.

Boston, Mass., May 22.—Members of the world's champion Boston Nationals have been forbidden by President Gaffney to appear at social events hereafter without special permission. In a letter to the Rev. George P. O'Connor of Malden, made public today, Mr. Gaffney said he had issued orders to that effect, with a penalty of indefinite suspension for violation. After their success in the last world series the Braves became popular after-dinner speakers. The ban on social activities follows a slump of several days in their playing.

HERE'S CHANCE TO BECOME SOX, CUB, OR WHALE

Three Amateurs to Be Rewarded for Their Skill and Deportment.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

How many amateur baseball players of Chicago would like to take a trip on the road as an actual player of the Cubs, White Sox, or Whales?

That's the opportunity which THE TRIBUNE offers to the young diamond performers of Chicago in furtherance of its policy to promote the national game as played on the prairie and vacant lots. It is an offer unparalleled, so far as known, either in baseball or the newspaper field. Such an unusual privilege is made possible only through the approval and sympathy with THE TRIBUNE'S purposes on the part of President Charles H. Thomas of the Cubs, President Charles A. Comiskey of the White Sox, and President Charles Weeghman of the Whales.

Owners Approve Plans.

The three owners of Chicago's big league clubs have agreed to take on one of the last road trips of the season as a member of their teams three Chicago amateur players chosen by a committee to be appointed by THE TRIBUNE. The committee will base its selection upon the playing of these boys from now until the time the awards are announced. Skill in baseball and deportment on the field will be the points considered in making the selections.

Grown fans consider it interesting to read what the big league players do off the field, and to read of how they get in condition to do their work on the field for the credit of Chicago's name in the baseball world. Just think how much more interesting to know these players personally, perhaps to call them by their first names, to observe what they do in their leisure hours, to be associated with them in hotels and on trains—to be a real member of the team for several weeks.

Just Like Big Leaguer.

Yes, to be a real member of the team—that's what the offer means. These three boys are not to be guests. They are to be actual players while they are with the club. They will occupy the same sleeping cars, quarreling about upper or lower berths, be assigned to rooms in hotels, eat with the players, wear a uniform on the field, and perhaps get a chance to act as substitute if any of the regulars are injured.

In addition to these privileges, the youngsters chosen—all of whom will be under 21 years old—will be chaperoned on the trip by some one of THE TRIBUNE'S corps of baseball writers—I. E. Sanborn, James Crusinberry, J. J. Alcock or Sam Weller. These seasoned veterans will look after the youngsters and will point out objects of interest in other cities quite apart from the baseball atmosphere, so the experience will be educational as well.

May Become a Regular.

Of course, it is hardly thought that the boys selected because of their playing ability and their deportment will be able to jump into big league shoes next season, although such cases have been known. Vic Saier never saw a big league game until he reported to the Cubs after one year in the minors. But the boys will learn first hand of big league methods. They will hear what Managers Bresnahan, Rowland, and Tinker say to their men between innings, how they plan an attack, and much of the inside stuff which never ordinarily gets outside the players' coop.

The purpose is to give the three most promising youngsters in Chicago an insight into big league methods which may be invaluable to them in later years.

Scouts to Watch Players.

Now as to the method of selection: A committee will be named to supervise the work. Because Chicago is so large a field to cover, this committee will appoint a large number of assistants. Their names will not be announced, but they will visit the amateur parks and the corner lots of the city on scouting trips and will report to the main committee. If a particularly promising boy is spotted others will be sent to see his work.

Reserve players from the big league teams frequently will act as scouts when their services can be spared. Ed Walsh of the White Sox has promised to help. Joe Tinker says call on him for any help needed. Roger Bresnahan, in Boston, expressed his desire to coöperate.

Big Chance for Youngsters.

Every big leaguer likes a promising, bright young fellow with ambition, and every manager is looking for new talent. If he cannot use the boy next season, perhaps he will get him a job with a minor league club with a privilege of bidding for the boy's services the following year. It's something worth trying for.

Remember, boys, the contest opens today. There may be a scout watching your play this afternoon. So keep on your toes and try your hardest all the time. And be careful how you act on the field. No umpire baiters are going to be chosen. The scouts will recommend only gentlemanly ball players and good sportsmen.

BY MAROON.

Illinois baseball players cemented their grip on the conference championship yesterday, downing the Maroons on Stagg field, 4 to 1. The Illini scored their runs in two big innings and successfully staved off Chicago rallies when Page's men three times had two runners on bases.

Chicago took the lead in the second, Cavin scoring on Desjardien's hit after tripling. Krebs and Bradley tallied for Illinois in the next inning. Krebs doubled and Bradley reached first on Kixmiller's fumble. Clark hit to Desjardien, working in right field for the day, and scored the two. In the fourth Koptik and Cogdal tallied after a succession of brisk hits.

Gophers Blank Purple, 2-0.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 22.—[Special.]—Minnesota shut out Northwestern, 2 to 0, in a great pitchers' battle between Capt. Pennington of the Gophers and Juel of the Purple. Pennington allowed two hits, while Juel gave five and struck out eleven Minnesota batsmen. Minnesota scored its runs in the second inning and threatened to score several more, but each time Juel tightened up and retired the side. Score:

Notes of the Whales.

Bill Brennan, chief umpire of the Fed league, says Hank O'Day will not be added to the staff.

Two games today at Weeghman park, starting at 1:30 this afternoon. Otto Knabe and his scrappy Terrapins will be back to furnish the Whales with some competition.

Flack robbed Benny Kauff of a long hit in his opening inning by tearing madly to the fence in left center and spearing a mighty smash that was labeled for three sacks.

Anderson tripped and fell in pursuing Brown's three bagger. The ball sailed right out to the fence, and, if Brownie had cared to hurry, he might have stretched the blow into a homer.

Halt went back of second and stole a hit from Wilson in the same frame by scooping a scorching bounder and getting it to first in a hurry. Farrell duplicated the feat in the fifth at the expense of Marion.

Despite frequent denials, it still seems that the labor unions are boycotting the Brookfeds because of the row between the Wards and the bakers. That fact may account for the poor attendance at games in which Brooklyn is one of the attractions.

Dr. George J. Aste of the Policlinic hospital was summoned to Auburn, Ind., last night to take charge of Mrs. Rollie Zeider. If possible, the wife of the Whales' third sacker will be removed to Chicago for treatment. Her condition is serious, but there is still a chance for her recovery.

Ad Brennan and Catcher Wagner have not started for the Colonial league. Down east they don't seem to understand the rules of baseball, for the Springfield, Mass., club refuses to furnish transportation for the players. Until said transportation arrives Brennan and Wagner will be kept at Weeghman park.

Cub Sydelights.

Boston, Mass., May 22.—[Special.]—One more game here Monday will end the set.

After his two mighty wallops Zimmerman greeted each Brave as he stepped to the plate with this remark: "Well, here's another one of these bushers who won a world's pennant."

Rain drove the bleacherites to shelter in the seventh, and some of them invaded the playing field. Byron stopped play until the arena was cleared of bugs.

The weather turned hot and muggy during the night but remained cloudy and threatening enough to keep the attendance down. The storm also left the field heavy in spots, but the diamond was fast.

Zimmerman's feat of clearing the left field fence with a home run has been performed by only a few illustrious predecessors. Duffy Lewis and Jake Stahl are two men who have done it. The fence is not so far away, but it is high.

President Thomas' desire to arrange an exhibition game for the Cubs was frustrated by the fact that none of the International league teams within reach of Rocky Point has an open date tomorrow. A possible game with a Colonial league team was prevented by the tangle that circuit is in on account of Federal league affiliations.

Ed Schorr, the Cubs' pitching discard, refuses to stay put. He could not come to terms with the South Bend team, to which he was released. President Thomas today disposed of Schorr to the Jersey City team of the International league and declared that if Schorr could not agree on a salary with the Skeeters he could languish in Lancaster, O., the rest of the season.

WHALES VICTORS OVER BROOKFEDS

Mordecai Brown Tames Tip Tops and Assists in Pounding Out 4-2 Triumph.

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

Backed by errorless and at times sensational support, Mordecai Brown kept the Whales in the thick of the Federal league pennant battle by taming the Brooklyn sluggers yesterday, 4 to 2. Mordecai imitated Claude Hendrix by taking a leading part in the assaults which sent the Tip Tops out of town with two defeats to show for their stay here. Brownie helped out in a two run attack in the third frame with a healthy single and later poled a triple which developed into another counter.

Don Marion was Brownie's slab foe, and in the matter of hits Don had a shade. He repulsed the Whales with five blows, while Brown was solved for eight.

Error by Marion Costly.

Marion was responsible for his own defeat, however. With the sacks crowded in the third, Flack rolled an easy one to the slab and Don fell all over the scenery when he ought to have started a cinch double play from the plate to first base.

Pratt's homer over the right field fence produced the first hostile run in the third, and a double by Steve Evans drove home the second foreign count in the fifth. Brown got better as the game progressed and in the ninth fanned two of the three men who faced him. One of the victims was Art Griggs, a pinch hitter. Brownie got seven men on strikes.

Small Crowd at Game.

That seventeen inning battle of Friday made all the fans anxious to see Rowland's pennant chasers in action, and the Whales drew a slim crowd for a half holiday. There were only about 3,500 in the stands when the battle commenced. Probably the cold weather kept considerable small change from drifting into the box office.

Pratt caught Brown's first pitch on the trade mark in round three and sailed it into Sheffield avenue for a home run. Brooklyn's triumph was short lived, as two runs put the Whales ahead in their next attack. Beck and Brown singled before Wickland struck out. Zwilling walked, filling the bases. Marion knocked down Flack's tap, but with a soft double play in sight he skidded and then threw low to the plate, letting Beck score. Wilson's fly to Anderson sent Brown across, but the fun ended when Zwilling and Flack wandered around the field until the Tip Tops doubled Dutch at third.

Brownie Scores in Fifth.

Brownie earned a generous round of applause by conducting another run home in the fifth. Beck was sent back. Then Mordecai tripled to left and finished the circuit on Wickland's loft to Anderson.

In the sixth the Tip Tops crept up one notch. Kauff hit to left and reached second on a passed ball. Steve Evans drove him around with a two ply smash to left.

One more Whale run was thrown around in the eighth after two were out. Zwilling walked, Flack got an infield hit because Halt was dashing over to cover second, and when Zwilling kept on for third Cooper heaved to the stand, Zwilling scoring and Flack getting to second. Wilson skied.

Notes of the White Sox

The final game of the series with the Red Sox will take place today.

Shano Collins would have had a fourth hit if Duffy Lewis had not executed a great diving catch of a low line drive in the eighth inning. Lewis went headlong into the grass after the ball and got it.

Eddie Collins made up for his bad day on Friday when he went up seven times and got nary a hit. Yesterday he rammed out two singles and made two sacrifice hits in five trips to the plate.

Manager Carrigan announced last night that Smoky Joe Wood would be on the slab for the Boston gang today. Russell, Scott, and Cicotte, all are candidates for duty on the Chicago side.

BATS OF HOSE ROUT BOSTON BY 11-3 SCORE

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

First place in the American league pennant race was gained by the rampant White Sox yesterday at Comiskey park when they gave the speedy Boston Red Sox a decisive beating, 11 to 3, while the Browns were trimming the New York Yankees down in St. Louis.

Although Comiskey's athletes were in front for one day, that being the second day of the season, this is the first time since the race was well started that they have held the honor, and they have earned it by strenuous and consistent playing for the last four weeks, going to the top at last with a great display of athletic prowess that made them look like champions.

It was the fifth straight victory for the proud south siders and they had it clinched before one inning was played, because in their first attack they ripped the Boston defense into shreds and tallied four times. Another count in the second and a cluster of five driven home in the fourth completely humbled the ambitious Hub town stars.

Benz Wins with Ease.

It fell to the lot of Joe Benz, the Batesville butcher boy, to be on the slab and pitch the team into the lead, but Joe had an easy day of it, for his mates gave him runs to spare. He hurled in his best stride, being steady and effective at all times and never permitting himself to get into fretful places.

The Sox clouted the ball with reckless abandon, making a total of fifteen hits, many of which were driven to the distant fences. They drove George Ruth, a Boston recruit slabman, off the mound at the start of the second inning when he came back for more after being drubbed for four runs in the opening round. Two blows in succession in the second sent the youthful southpaw to the clubhouse and Ray Collins, the veteran left hander, strode in from the bullpen.

Ray Collins Also Pounded.

Ray's southpaw curves apparently looked no different to the Sox batters than did those of the recruit, for they continued to whale the ball until one felt sorry for every fellow on the Boston team. Ray stuck to the finish, however, and got in a real day's work.

Shano Collins used his bludgeon with more deadly effect against the left handers than any of the others, getting a single, a double, and a triple. Bobby Roth had a pair of singles and a triple, while Weaver and Eddie Collins each had a couple of one base blows and Hap Felsch drove out a single and a two bagger besides walking twice.

A crowd of at least 9,000 fans was present to cheer and made good on the job. There was so much yelling in the early rounds that every one was played out and content to sit quietly and look on during the last half of the battle. The record combat of the previous day had excited Chicago's fans into a frenzy and now that the south siders are out in front one need expect no peace until next fall.

Sox Start with Four.

The Sox gave the crowd plenty of chances to cheer, too, for they began clouting the ball all over the lot right from the start. Four luscious runs were driven home in the opening round. Felsch began with a walk and Roth tapped to the pitcher, who made a wild shot to second. Felsch got to third on the mistake and scored when Eddie Collins sacrificed. Fournier walked and J. Collins got an infield hit, filling the sacks. Weaver produced a single, sending Roth home. A wild pitch let Fournier count, but J. Collins was caught when he rounded third. Brief singled, sending Weaver home, Brief taking second on the throw. Schalk walked, and Benz ended the fuss with a tap to Ruth.

E. Collins Drives in Run.

Felsch opened the second round with a single and went to third when Roth hit safely to right. Ruth was relieved by Ray Collins right there, and Eddie Collins singled, sending Felsch home. R. Collins got the side out with no further damage, but in the fourth the Sox clouted him for five runs.

Benz began the attack with a single and Felsch walked. Roth got an infield hit, filling the bases, then E. Collins poled safely to right, Benz and Felsch scoring, while Roth took third. Eddie stole second, then Fournier grounded out, Roth scoring. J. Collins followed with a triple, E. Collins counting, and J. Collins came home when Weaver singled. Weaver was caught off first and run down.

In the fifth the Red Sox counted once on Wagner's single, Speaker's double, and Lewis' infield out.

The local Sox weren't able to drive any more men around until the seventh, when with one out Roth drove over Speaker's head for three sacks. E. Collins produced a long sacrifice fly, sending Bobby home, and Fournier closed with a roller to Gainer.

The Red Sox grabbed a couple of useless runs in the ninth on Roth's error, McNally's triple, and Speaker's single, but they were suppressed before Benz was even in danger.

Cleveland, O., May 22.—Cleveland defeated Washington in twelve innings, 7 to 6. The winning run was scored on Morgan's fumble, Chapman's bunt, and Graney's single. Cleveland acquired an early lead by driving Boehling from the slab, but Washington turned the tables and sent Steen out in the sixth. Mitchell, who finished for Cleveland, pitched gilt edged ball except in the twelfth, when Washington filled the bases with none out. Cleveland's third double play prevented any scoring. Score:

WALKS GIVE TIGERS GAME.

Detroit, Mich., May 22.—Detroit took advantage of erratic work of Philadelphia's pitchers today and won the second game of the series, 5 to 2. Wyckoff struck out Crawford three times during the five innings he pitched. Bush, like Wyckoff, was wild and in the eighth inning with the bases full he passed Vitt, forcing in Stanage. Score:

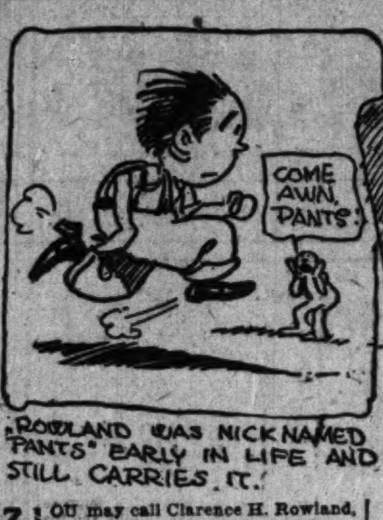
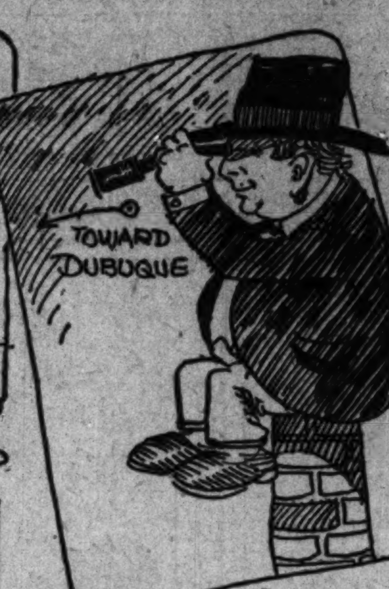
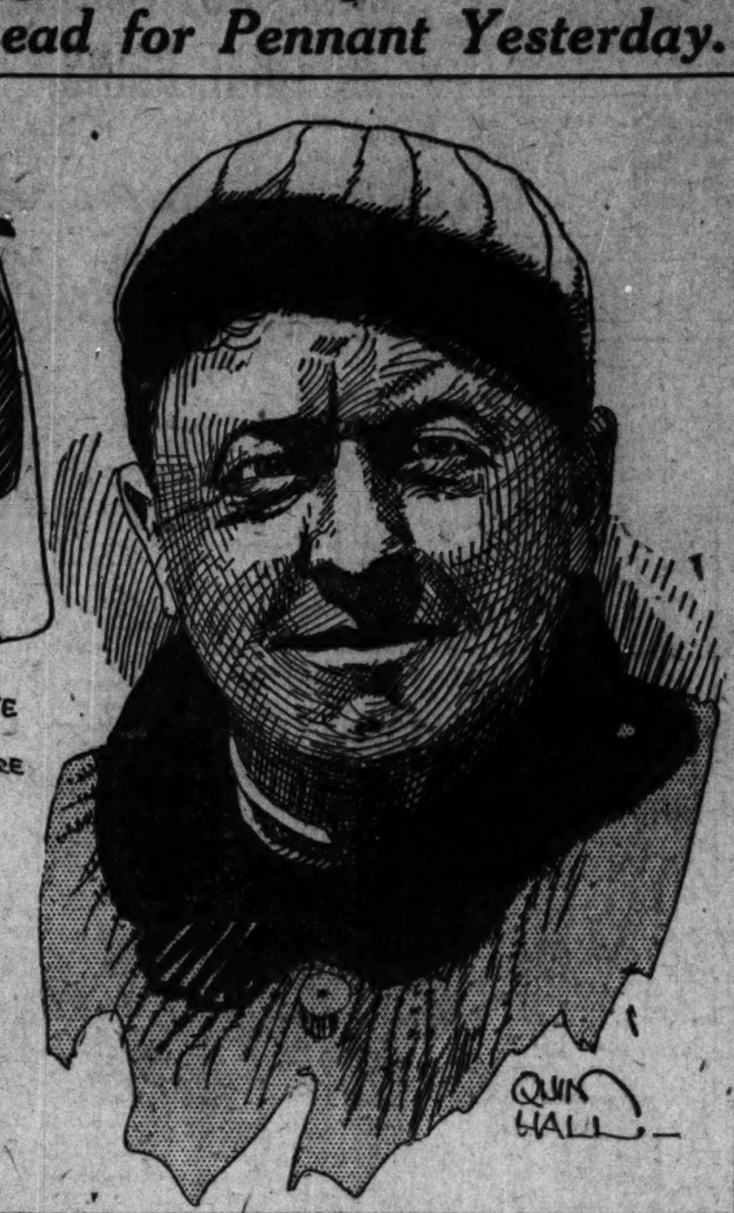
Clarence H. Rowland, Manager of Chicago White Sox, Whose Team Went Into Lead for Pennant Yesterday.



COME AWN, PANTS!
"ROWLAND WAS NICKNAMED "PANTS" EARLY IN LIFE AND STILL CARRIES IT.





COMISKEY HAD HAD HIS EYE ON ROWLAND FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS BEFORE HE GRABBED HIM OFF
QUIN HALL

You may call Clarence H. Rowland, manager of the Chicago White Sox, a minor leaguer as many times as you like and he will not care. He did jump from the Three Eyes league unexpectedly to the direction of a major league club, and he is proud of the fact. He welcomes the opportunity offered, but when discussing the situation adds with just a trace of seriousness, "If you call me a minor leaguer in 1916 after I have served a year with the Sox I probably will regard it as a reflection."

With the material at his disposal and the spirit which he seems to have aroused among the players Rowland should not be regarded as a minor leaguer next season. His appointment to succeed Jimmy Callahan was a complete surprise to the Chicago public. It also was a surprise to the usually lynx eyed baseball scribes. Just how much of a surprise it was may be gleaned from the fact that not a single newspaper had a picture of Rowland in other than Camp Jerome hunting camp attire in its "morgue"—the technical name for the photographic collection of celebrities who may be needed some time.

Rowland's appointment was followed by predictions from some quarters that Eddie Collins and other veterans would not take orders from a "busher." So far there is no apparent lack of harmony. Rowland's task no doubt is made easier by the fact that the White Sox this season are a comparatively new team. Five of the seven regular positions outside the batteries are filled by newcomers. An old team might resent the decapitation of Callahan, who seemed the victim of circumstances rather than anything else. At any rate Rowland took the reins with no

Rowland made no grand stand declarations of what he would do. No matter what he thought of his own ability, he accepted the position modestly. He did say there must be speed on the team, and he has insisted his men take chances on the bases and run out all hits. Eddie Collins, of course, has been a wonderful spoke in his wheel of attack. Rowland does not believe in a field captain, so he did not appoint any, although Collins acts if occasion demands. Thus another prediction of friction between Buck Weaver and Collins went awry.

The new Sox manager frankly admits that he is an experiment. He thinks he will make good. So does Comiskey. The latter explains his choice by saying that he has been watching Rowland for a number of years and that he seems to have a faculty for uncovering diamonds in the rough.

Rowland recommended Faber and Hi Jasper to the Sox and also called attention to Ray Schalk in 1911. He sent Vince Campbell to Pittsburgh and Pernoll to Detroit in 1909. He recommended Larry Doyle to Comiskey in 1907, but the Giants beat other clubs to Kinsella's Springfield prize package at what was then considered a high price for a class B leaguer. Other players sold or recommended by Rowland were Paddock to the Yankees, Akers to Washington, Darringer to St. Louis, Yelle to Detroit, Red Kreitz, Rogge and Ernie Johnson to the White Sox, and Hauser to St. Louis. "If he can find young blood for our team we'll be satisfied," says Comiskey.

Clarence Harry Rowland—make it Harry, not Henry, please, as Clarence is enough monicker handicap for a baseball manager, according to the owner of the name—was born Feb. 12, 1879, at Platteville, Wis., where his father was a railroad engineer on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. His father was born in Pennsylvania of Scotch-Irish stock, while his mother was French born. Both are dead. A sister lives in Seattle and a brother runs his buffet and restaurant in Dubuque during his absence.

During his infancy the Rowland lares and penates were moved to Dubuque, where Clarence attended the Prescott grammar school and the high school for two years, where as catcher on the nine he acquired the nickname "Pants," which has stuck through the intervening years. The appellation was acquired when Clarence first appeared for practice in some nether garments discarded from the paternal wardrobe. They were carefully tucked up at the knees, but in Rowland's first trip to the plate he made an unusually long hit. In his circuit of the bases the pants legs kept coming down farther and farther until they reached nearly to his ankles. Thus was the "Pants" nickname firmly established.

While still a schoolboy Rowland visited the world's fair at Chicago in 1893, during his summer vacation. He did not apply for funds at home, but secured a job as bellhop at the Windsor-Clifton and later at Gore's hotel. His spare time was spent at the fair and in attending the baseball games.

Rowland's high school career ended when he was 16 years old, because he saw greater excitement in being a bellhop at the Hotel Julian, Dubuque. He found time for semi-pro ball on local teams, and the following year formed the Rowland Colts. In this capacity he on one occasion proved a financier. A game was scheduled against a team at Bellevue, backed by the leading banker of that city. Fearing trouble over the result of the game and their share of the gate receipts Rowland demanded that the guarantee be placed in the Bellevue man's bank, and that his home bank in Dubuque be notified to that effect. The demand, amusing to the banker, was granted.

Later his Colts became the Dubuque Models because a clothing store of that name was willing to furnish the uniforms in return for the indirect advertising it would receive. Manager Rowland rented a ball park for Saturday and Sunday games and often played to 1,000 people. The players' "take" ranged from about $4 to $7 a man, and with a kindly home umpire the team won most of its games.

In the winter of 1902-03 Rowland really launched into the professional game by attending a Three Eyes meeting in Chicago and securing a franchise. The fact that he had practically no backing did not discourage him. It was his new managerial responsibilities which brought his first meeting with Comiskey. He wanted players for his team and floated out to Comiskey's residence, then in Wabash avenue, one bright morning between 7 and 7:30 a. m. "Commy" was so surprised at the nerve that he farmed to Rowland Pitcher Ward Isbell, a brother of Frank, and Infielder Jimmy Robinson, a brother-in-law of Clark Griffith.

Rowland did not continue as manager at Dubuque the following season because he thought his services worth more than the $125 a month he had been receiving. For four years he owned and operated the Hotel Wales bar, taking the Dubuque management again in 1908 at a salary of $140 a month. In 1909 he accepted a position with Aberdeen, Wash., in the Northwestern league and finished third. In 1910 he finished second with Winnipeg in the Northern league.

In 1910 Rowland bought the Dubuque franchise and operated it for three years in the Three Eyes league, breaking a little better than even, largely through the sale of players to the majors. He sold out to Forrest Plass and last year was manager at Peoria, which finished second to Davenport in a racking pennant struggle.

The present White Sox manager was married in 1899 to Miss Anna Utzig of Dubuque. Roy Clarence Rowland, 13 years old; Beulah Rowland, 11 years, and Mrs. Rowland are three of the most devoted White Sox fans, as is only natural.

CORNELL SHUTS OUT YALE IN 10 INNINGS, 1 TO 0.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 22.—[Special.]—When Pumpelly threw wildly to first on what would have been an easy out, walked two Cornell batters and then issued a third pass to Whitney, thereby forcing Mellen in with a run, Cornell beat Yale in the tenth inning here this afternoon, 1 to 0. In the first of the tenth Yale got two men on, Hanes singling and Legore being safe on Clary's wild peg to first. When Reilly struck out, Hanes was doubled between second and third. Bryant on the mound for Cornell allowed the blue only two hits. Score:

PAIGE
"The Standard of Value and Quality"

We'll Take the Family in the Paige

It is good just to live these days. But it is better to be in the open, to be swinging through the green country-side, through woodlands, past quiet lakes, beyond the noise-zone and dirt-zone and worry-zone of the city—in the warm sunshine of young summer—with the family. That's the vital point—with the family. And the Paige "Six"—seven passenger "Six"—the most popular, the fastest selling, the sensational "Six" of the year—is the vehicle that enables the family to take its tours, and recreation—together.

Why is the Paige "Six" the most popular light "Six" of the year?

First, there is its amazingly low price—$1395.

Then, there is the national verdict that the Paige "Six" offers a combination of highest-grade features that cannot be bought in any other six-cylinder car—whatever the price.

What are the Paige Six's Features?

The distinctive beauty of the design, and full seven-passenger roominess and comfort.

The unequalled ease of riding on all roads and hills, accomplished by the cantilever spring suspension.

The vast power and flexibility of the Paige-Continental motor (3½x5¼). The easily-operated and always dependable Gray & Davis electric equipment for starting the motor and electrically lighting the car.

The Rayfield carburetor which means unfailing service and the Bosch Magneto which means the world's best ignition.

The multiple disc cork-insert clutch, luxurious leather upholstery, one-man top and a score of other distinctive features that, together, mean the very acme of luxurious motoring—and at the Paige Price—$1395.

These are the reasons why the Paige "Six" is unique—why the Paige "Six" is "the year-ahead car"—why next year the Paige "Six" will be the most widely copied car in the country.

Today its position is supreme and its supremacy is unchallenged.

Today—see your Paige Dealer and let him show the family the wonder-working Paige "Six."

Princeton, N. J., May 22.—A heavy rain storm today caused the Princeton-Harvard baseball game and tennis matches to be postponed until Monday. One tennis match had been finished when rain interfered and this was won by Harvard.

HARVARD EIGHT BEATS CORNELL BY HALF LENGTH

No Water Shows Between Boats During Two Mile Race.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 22.—Harvard won the varsity rowing race from Cornell today for the first time in the history of Cayuga lake regattas. The Crimson crew was victorious by half a length.

Cornell's fast freshman eight, which defeated Yale and Princeton last week, won its race with Harvard's first year crew.

In the big race Cornell's varsity crew demonstrated that it is not up to the usual standard of Ithaca eights. Harvard caught the water first and maintained a lead throughout the two mile race, although Cornell struggled hard to overcome the Crimson advantage. Both crews rowed a thirty-four stroke for the most part, but near the finish raised it to thirty-six. At no time during the race was there open water between the boats. Cornell tried continuously to spurt, but seemed to lack the driving power.

Courtney's freshmen won their event by showing the power that the Red and White varsity lacked. Harvard led for more than a mile. Then the Ithacans raised the stroke, overtook the Crimson, and won easily by one and one-half lengths.

The time of the winners was: Harvard varsity, 10:41 2-5; Cornell freshman, 10:52.

AUTO SPEEDERS MAKE FAST TIME IN TRIAL SPINS

De Palma, Cooper, and Resta Lead Field in Tests at Indianapolis Track.

BY REED L. PARKER.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 22.—[Special.]—Ralph De Palma, Earl Cooper, and Darius Resta proved the class of their cars entered for the 500 mile race here on May 29 in today's trials. De Palma in a declared effort to break Boillot's record of 1:30.13 failed by fifty seconds. He drove his Mercedes at what is believed to be the limit of its speed. Cooper, in his Stutz, averaged ninety-six miles an hour in his trial, and Resta, in the Peugeot, was less than a second slower than Cooper.

Resta will try for the course record tomorrow. It is believed he can beat Boillot's time, as he shut off his motor to make the turns today. The cars to qualify, their drivers, and lap time follow:

Peugeot, Burman	1:37.2	Peugeot, Bab'k.	1:41.2
Sunbeam, Grant	1:40.6	Mais Special, Mais	1:49.4
Emdin, Don'son	1:39	Sebring, J. Cooper	1:45
Kleinart, Klein	1:40	Mercer, Rucks'l	1:47.4
Peugeot, Resta	1:33.6	Dusenberg, O'Donnell	1:41.1
Delage, J. De Palma	1:43.2
Stutz, Wilcox	1:39.9

Porter Cars on Track.

The Porter Knights arrived, but after a few slow laps were taken from the track. It is thought they encountered piston ring trouble. They are likely looking cars. Hughie Hughes, Charles Kline, and Devore, a driver of reputation on the Pacific coast, handled the cars. Devore succeeded Neil Whalen, who did not show up for practice.

The motor of Barney Oldfield's Bugatti, the German car owned by Charles Fuller, was damaged beyond repair during morning practice. A connecting rod broke. The crank case, one cylinder, and a piston were badly injured. It will be impossible to repair the car in time to start it in this or the Chicago race of June 19. It is thought Oldfield will drive one of the three Maxwells.

Vice President Visits Course.

Vice President Thomas Marshall accompanied by Mark Thistlewaite, his secretary, was an interested visitor. Mr. Marshall inspected the garages and watched practice for more than an hour during the afternoon. More than 5,000 persons saw the trials.

It was officially reported that Ralph Mulford's special and the three Bergdolls had been scratched. Mulford wanted until next Thursday to take his time trials. This favor was denied him. He probably will be seen at the wheel of one of the Duesenbergs.

Inquisitive Fans.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Are the first four teams in the pennant race considered in the first division or only the teams with a percentage above .500? R. S. H.

The first four teams constitute the first division.

C. C. Mcaise: The Tribune does not answer queries having to do with bets of any kind.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Three men on bases with two out. The batter hits a grounder to right field. Fielder returns ball and pitcher accepts the throw. The man on third scores. Coacher on the third base line starts home, making believe he is the runner from second, and is touched out on the base line for the third out. Should the run count or is the batter out with the score the same as it was before the play? R. T. WOELLS.

The run counts and no one was put out on the play. The rule penalizing the coacher for that offense does not apply after two are out.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Runners are on both first and second base. Pitcher delivers the ball for a called strike. The man on first runs to second, the runner originally occupying second being on the bag when the runner from first touches second. Which runner is out? M. C. S.

There is nothing to indicate either man is out, but the runner who was on first base can be put out by being touched while standing on second or at any time before he gets back to his own base. The runner originally on second cannot be put out except by being touched while off that base.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Runners on first and second. They start a double steal. The ball goes to second and the runner, coming from first, is tagged, but after he arrives at the base. Runner going to third has a fall and the ball goes to third, turning the runner back. He gets back to second and is also tagged with the ball after he is on the base, the other runner having gone back to first. Which runner, if either, was out? J. E. JONES.

As the play is described, neither runner was out.

R. P. Dryden, Chicago: "Texas leaguer" is the term used to indicate a low fly that lands between the infield and the outfield and out of reach, usually, of either infielder or outfielder.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—1. One out, man on second, one strike on the batter. Man on second starts to steal third. Batter strikes at ball and swings around the second time and hits the ball, which the catcher has juggled. Umpire rules the man back to second and calls a strike on the batsman. Is he correct? 2. On a fielder's choice does the batter get credit for a time at bat without a hit, or does he get credited with a sacrifice hit? W. B. LYMAN.

1. If the interference with the catcher was sufficient to justify sending the runner back, the umpire ought also to have called the batsman out. 2. The batsman is charged with a time at bat unless he deliberately bunted the ball which resulted in the fielder's choice.

George A. Lambert, Chicago: Do not know.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is the penalty on the following balks: Balk made by pitcher while facing batter, with men on first and second. Balk made by pitcher while facing batter with no men on base. Balk made by pitcher on a throw to first base to get a runner on the base? A. L. JONES.

You do not specify which one of the nine kinds of balks the pitcher makes in each of these cases, but each base runner always advances one base on any kind of a balk. In cases of illegal delivery, if the bases are empty it counts as a ball for the batsman.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Suppose a team is tied up to the ninth inning and the opposing team scores two runs, then the home team has three men on bases and the next batsman hits the ball out of the park. Does the batter get credit for a home run? T. F.

No. The game ends when the man on first scores and a three base hit is the most the batsman can get.

Whist Query.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—The score was 12 to 0 in A's favor. A bid three diamonds, holding 7 or 8 diamonds, headed by king and jack; 3 spades jack ten, and x; one heart, queen, and ace clubs. B passed. C, thinking that three diamonds meant a setup suit, bid three no trump, holding ace, king, queen, xx spades, king, queen, jack, ten, nine hearts, ace x of clubs; nine diamonds. D passed, likewise A and B. D opened with a club, king or queen, C played ten, then ace on second lead, made five spade tricks, let opponents in with ace of hearts and lost 100. Will you kindly tell me wherein bidding was faulty? F. G. P.

Answer—Neither player bid correctly. A should have bid one diamond. There is no excuse for bidding more than one of a suit originally unless there is a decent prospect of making game on the declaration. C held a two suit hand—that is, two suits of five or more. With such a hand a suit declaration is always to be preferred to no trump if either of the long suits is hearts or spades. C should have bid one of either suit. Had C bid one heart A would have gone to two diamonds and C should then have switched to royals. Had C bid a royal, A would have allowed the bid to stand and game would have been very easy.

DORRIS

Dorris Six Cylinder
The perfected valve-in-head motor
Backed by ten successful seasons

Equal to Any Emergency

The famous Dorris valve-in-head motor, with its seven bearing crank shaft and seven bearing cam shaft—small wall area of combustion chamber—continuous flow of gas—a greater flexibility than it is possible to attain in any other type of motor—insures less loss of heat, less fuel waste, therefore, more power, more miles per gallon of gasoline.

The Dorris "Six" will take railroad crossings, rough, uneven roads at full speed without jolting—due to a combination of a 42-inch front spring with a set of platform springs—the side spring being 50 inches, the cross spring 40 inches, equaling 224 inches of spring length to the car—insuring a long, easy swing, no sideway and holding the road at any speed.

You Are Invited

There is an urgent need in Chicago for just such a car as the Dorris "Six."

The traffic crowded loop district offers an exceptional opportunity to prove that constant gear shifting is a thing of the past—and going up Hubbard's Hill on "High" from a standing start with a full seven passenger load is another convincing demonstration in favor of the Dorris "Six."

Your time will be well spent in investigating this handsome, elegantly furnished, seven passenger, 128 inch wheel base, electric started, lighted and Bosch ignited, powerful Dorris "Six."

The first time you sit at the wheel of the Dorris "Six" and experience its ample power, unusual flexibility, absence of vibration under all conditions, the even, steady pull and noiseless action, you will agree that here is the "Six" you have long wanted.

BRISCOE

COMPLETELY EQUIPPED—

Including electric self-starter, electric lights, generator, one-man mohair top and boot, wood or wire wheels, speedometer, high tension magneto, windshield, etc.

If the Difference Is Less Than $500 Don't Pay It.

There is a limit to the value you can get in an automobile. If the car you are looking at now isn't a Briscoe, and if it costs anywhere within the limit of $500 more than the Briscoe, don't pay the difference.

When you go above this $500 extra price limit you are getting out of the field of moderate price, low upkeep cost, and getting into the big car field. And if you want economy along with comfort, beauty of design, high grade construction and durability, don't get a big car.

Low price now means an attractive car of which you can be justly proud even when comparing it in body beauty and finish with cars of the highest price. Briscoe has brought about this change.

You will find in the Briscoe, selling at $500 less than the higher priced cars of its type and several hundred dollars less than any other car of equal quality, every feature of real design that you can ask for in an automobile, any feature that you can find in any other car of its type. But you will also find in the Briscoe better materials, better construction, more careful attention to body development, greater durability and greater economy than in other light fours.

Briscoe is rapidly forging ahead into first place in sales among moderate priced cars. It is already a dominant first in popularity among owners.

MAROONS BEAT ILLINI ON TRACK AFTER SIX YEARS

MIDWAY SQUAD SHOWS HEELS TO URBANA RUNNERS

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Chicago won all but four firsts on Stagg field yesterday and defeated Illinois in a dual track meet for the first time since 1909 by 74 1-3 points to 51 2-3. Campbell bettered the half mile mark and Ward equaled the 100 yard dash record. Other records were missed by close margins.

The Maroons had the lead in the scoring from the first and piled up points consistently in each event. Mason, the Illinois distance star, was heavy point winner for the downstaters. He missed the mile record by four-fifths of a second and romped off with the two mile. Carter in the broad jump and Culp in the pole vault got the only other firsts for the Orange and Blue. Carter missed the jump record by one inch.

Ward Runs Century in :09 4-5.

Seniors on the Maroon team signalized their last appearance on the Midway track by totaling a majority of Chicago's points. Capt. Francis Ward was the second Maroon to tie the conference record of :09 4-5 in the century dash. He equaled the western college mark, which was first set in 1903, tied in 1908, and equaled again last week by Dewey Knight, his teammate.

Roy Campbell, 1914 Chicago captain, another Maroon senior, celebrated his last appearance at the Midway by clipping the conference record in the half mile. He shaved one-fifth of a second off the mark of 1:55 3-5 set by Henderson, Illinois, last year.

Breathed and Knight on the track and Des Jardien and Gorgas in the field events were others competing on Stagg field for the last time that celebrated by capturing firsts. Breathed led three Maroons across the tape in the 440 yard run. In this race Diamond, Stagg's colored star, finished third after running the entire race on the outside of the track. He was disqualified for interference, and O'Meara, the first Orange and Blue runner, received points for the place.

Weights Go to Des Jardien.

Des Jardien scored surprises in the field events after doffing his baseball uniform to compete for the second time in the afternoon. He overthrew expectations by capturing the shotput and discus throw with long heaves. Summaries:

220 yard dash—Won by Knight, Chicago; Diamond, Chicago, second; Hohman, Illinois, third. Time, :22 1-5.

BADGERS SWAMP GOPHERS.

Madison, Wis., May 22.—[Special.]—Wisconsin's well balanced track team romped off with the annual Minnesota dual meet today, piling up 103 points to 23 for the Gophers. The Badgers had first honors in all events but the two mile.

Table of Points.

Monmouth	37	Beloit	23½
Knox	28	Armour	14
L. Forest	23½

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

With an evenly balanced team of athletes who scored points in eight of the fourteen events and won the mile relay, which did not count in the point table, Monmouth won the fifth annual outdoor track and field meet of the Little Five, held yesterday on Northwestern field, with a total of 37 points. Knox was second with 28 units, and Lake Forest and Beloit tied for third position with 23½ points each.

Two new records were established and one equaled. Jansen of Lake Forest lowered the two mile mark from 10:41 1-5 to 10:28. Berry of Lake Forest hurled the hammer 143 feet ½ inch, breaking the former record of 125 feet 11 inches held by Buelow of Beloit. Kelley of Monmouth stepped the century in even time, tying the record.

Individual Honors to Ghormley.

To Ghormley of Monmouth went the individual honors. He scored ten points by winning the 120 yard high hurdles and the 220 yard low hurdles. Berry of Lake Forest, Kelly of Monmouth, and Tierney of Armour each scored eight points. Only a small crowd attended the meeting, which was featured by keen competition, despite the poor marks made. The event was won last year by Lake Forest, and the classic of the organization will be held by Monmouth next year.

For Players of Skat.

BY A. I. LAUER.

THE Lincoln Skat club will hold its last tournament of the season today at Lincoln Turner hall. This club, through its straightforward, honest methods and liberality in the matter of prizes has the support of all loyal skat followers. A. I. Lauer will act as skatmeister.

Below you will find the complete data regarding the eighteenth congress as far as playing rules are concerned. All that is necessary for us to do now is to get in on the division of the money:

Date—the eighteenth congress of the North American Skat league for the year 1915 will be held at Peoria, Ill., June 12, 13, and 14.

Prizes—A sum equal to 60 per cent of all receipts derived from entry fees, plus $500, will be given as prizes.

First prize—In conformity with the resolution passed at the seventeenth congress, the sum of $500 was set aside out of the entry fees of the tournament. To this the skat players of Peoria have added the sum of $500, making the first prize $1,000.

Second prize—The officers have determined that the second prize will be $500.

Apportionment—The balance of the 60 per cent will be apportioned by a committee of three members of the board of directors, appointed by the president of the league on the first day of the tournament.

Tournament session—The tournament will be held in two sessions. The first session will be called on Saturday, June 12, at 7:45 p. m. The second session on Sunday, June 13, at 2:45 p. m.

Drawing of seats—Drawing of seats will be held at the Coliseum building on Saturday, June 12, at 9 a. m. and continued until the opening of the tournament. Drawing of seats for the second session will begin on Sunday, June 13, 1915, at 9 in the forenoon and continue until the opening of the session, 2:45 p. m.

Entry fee—The admission fee to both sessions of the tournament will be $5, of which 60 per cent, plus $500, will be given as prizes, 30 per cent for the entertainment and conducting the tournament, and 10 per cent for the general fund.

Rules—The rules of the North American Skat league will be strictly enforced. Players' attention is particularly called to have every solo against 5 or more matadores and every high play of 140 points or more O. K.'d by the skatmeister. Unless such plays are O. K.'d by the meister, proper persons in authority the same will receive no consideration by the prize committee. The utmost care should be exercised in filling out the record of claims.

Signature and address—Every player should see that his name and address is written correctly and legibly and that every player signs a score sheet before leaving the table.

Special messenger service—Special messenger service will be provided for each section of twenty-five tables to wait upon the skat players for tournament purposes only during the play. All score sheets must be delivered to messenger upon conclusion of game.

Prize list—A certified copy of official prize list will be mailed to each participant within ten days after the tournament by the secretary.

BOXING, BACKED BY STATE, SURE TO GAIN FAVO

Legalized Contests Expe to Remove All Prejudic Against Sport.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

If success crowns the effort being at Springfield to secure the passage of bill legalizing boxing in Illinois, and present indications point to that outco those who have staunchly fought for rehabilitation of the sport will find in the victory not only reward, but an ans which they believe will convince and vert to their way of thinking those have so strongly formed opposition. answer must come in the conduct of sport, in proper control and with regu tion of a type which, while possibly completely above criticism, will any searchlight aimed for the purpose discovering motives.

Of course, it is necessary first to this form of lawful sport before a of the merits of the contention for against it can be made, and it has this necessity in the past that has the crux between those believing in health or unhealthiness of boxing sport.

Opponents of Bill Narrow.

Those who believed that boxing is "un healthy" have taken stern measures to suppress any effort to secure even passage of a bill making the sport and in so doing have not permitted a test. The opponents of boxing taken many things for granted. have looked upon the sport as dangerous because a number of boxers have death in the ring. They have terized it as a sport in which a element mingles, and lastly have it brutal.

Trying to look at it from this point is difficult to one in close with things pugilistic today. The history of the ring shows that many have met an untimely death in bouts, the great majority of fatalities can ly be attributed to lack of . In New York state since the Frawley ure became effective and with rule the sport has reached a place has brought little criticism. The New York commission, of course, has some mistakes in controlling the but experience teaches, and when errors have been discovered, they been speedily rectified.

Game Safely Guarded.

It can truthfully be said that ring ities are almost next to impossible the law of New York, or the one may be passed in Illinois, for careful ical examinations as prescribed by law prove successful as a preventive.

Then, again, where is the rowdy ment of boxing today? Can Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion; Jess Willard, heavyweight champion; Mike Gibbons, claimant of the middleweight championship; Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion; and Kid Williams, bantamweight champion, be classed as "undesirables"? The champions only have been mentioned, but there are many others who help to make up pugilism among them Packey McFarland, Willie Ritchie, and Charley White, who could place in any sport other than boxing and not be classified as members of the rowdy or brutal element.

"Sneak Fights" Harmful.

It has not been legal boxing that has given the black eye to the sport of past. It has been the so-called "sneak fights" which were pulled off to evade the laws which operated against boxing. These bouts are sometimes termed "bush fights," and it is admitted by one who knows anything about it that this type of milling is not only corrupt dangerous, for in many of the contests in the past there have been fatal finishes. The better element of pugilism does countenance them, and with legalized boxing they would be impossible.

Of course the selection of competent officials for the commission in Illinois be paramount in the success of the sport but there are quite a number of men in Illinois who could capably form a commission to control the sport in a way would quickly result in the removal of prejudice from the minds of those are opposed to it at the present With the passage of the bill Gov. Dunne can be depended upon to attend to matter of a commission.

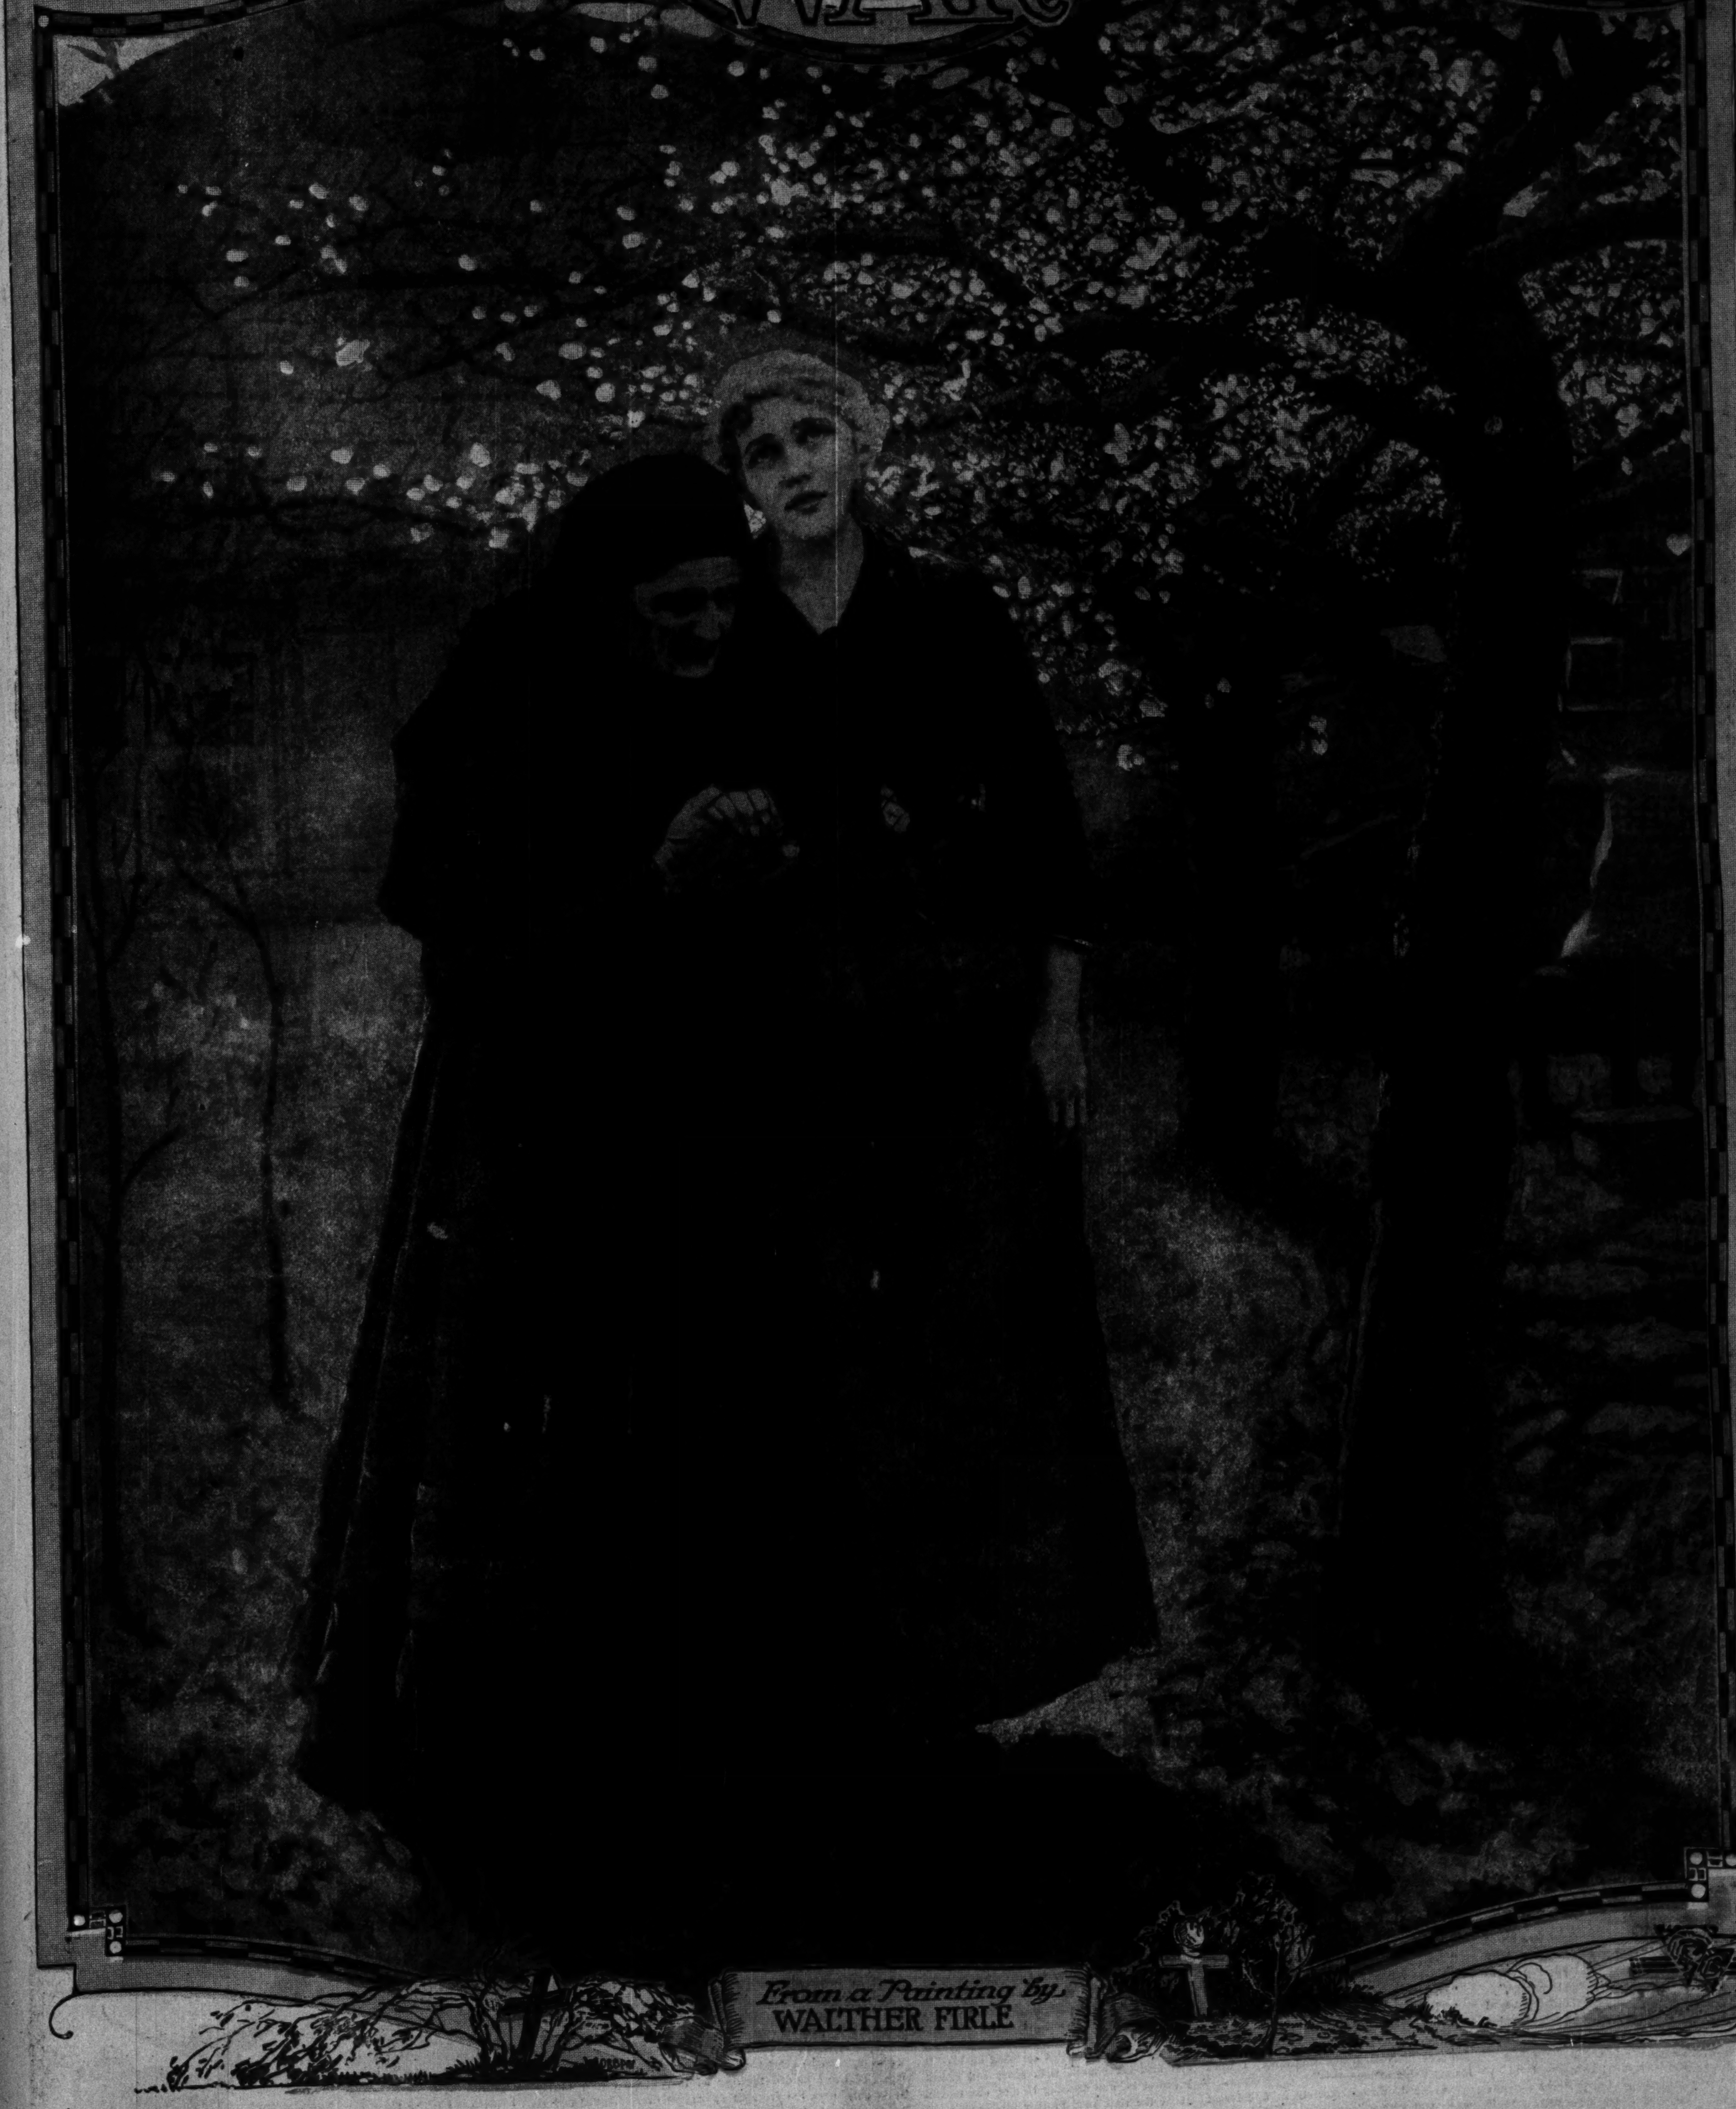
WAR



From a Painting by
WALTHER FIRLE

The LIMIT

by LIEUT. COL. E. D. SWINTON D.S.O., R.E.

Which Was the Coward, the Man Who Declined to Be Shot in an Open Charge, or His Brother Back Home for Whom the Former Was Fighting?

THERE was the sound of a man spitting, followed by bad language. Out of the darkness ten yards away there came: "Hullo, what's up?"

"I was just going to curl up here; thought it was a pile of straw; but it's the corner of a pigsty or a manure heap (sniff). I don't know which; I can't see."

"You're too particular. This isn't a bed of violets exactly, but it's straw anyway, fairly dry, with a roof on top and room for two, Come across here." A scuffling noise over the cobblestones as of a man walking in one boot followed.

"Mind your head—and my rifle! That's it, to the right."

With a rustle and clatter some one sat down and grunted:

"That's better."

He fumbled in his haversack and pulled out a pipe, which he filled. Putting it between his lips, he sucked at it—unlit—solemnly. It was foul and wheezed at every pull.

"Match?" said the other. "I've still got a few, but I've got no baccy. I'll swop a light for a fill."

The match was struck with care and shielded between a pair of hollowed hands. One after the other the pipe bowls were inserted and the flame was drawn down on to the glowing tobacco in a long tongue. Released between each draw, it blazed up momentarily and cast enough light to show two soldiers sitting on a heap of straw under a lean-to roof which was in a corner of a yard against a barnlike building. Round the inclosure was a low wall, and in the other corners were some vague heaps and rough sheds. Barely had the light of the match flared up finally after the pipes were alight than a hoarse voice was heard from over the wall on the right: "Here, hold hard, don't chuck it away," and two more soldiers, almost falling over the wall into the circle of light, scrambled up over the damp cobblestones just in time to make use of the last flicker. With a word of thanks they again vanished.

Besides showing up the two men on the straw, the match had lasted long enough to show that one of them was wearing only one boot, the other foot was bandaged. This man had noticed that the number on the other's shoulder strap was not that of any regiment in his brigade.

"Hullo! What are you doing here? Lost yourself?"

The reply was given slowly and in jerks between puffs of smoke.

"Yes; mounted man; sent back with message yesterday; tried to rejoin my regiment; horse shot; couldn't get a remount; ordered to join nearest force—this brigade. I struck your regiment; here I am—infantry!"

"Where's your own lot?"

"Miles away on the flank."

"Been with us all day?"

"Yes, since last night."

"Then you've helped to attack this place?"

"Yes."

"Many down your side?"

"Heaps."

"Ah! I wonder how long we shall have here?"

"All night, I suppose, unless they attack us. That's why we've been doing all this work fortifying the place since we got in. What's your job been?"

The other did not speak. He gently slapped the blade of a small shovel which was dangling by his side. The speaker continued:

"I haven't got one. I've been making loopholes with my bayonet—had nothing else. I carried out orders; but please God some one knows what the loopholes fire on—I don't. It was dark when we started work; but it strikes me that if we use them we shall be shooting our own men in the back."

"Dessay: things are bound to be in a bit of a mess when you get a place at night. Why did you come in here? What put you on to this straw? The yard don't smell too nice."

"To get out of the wind; and I guessed there might be some straw that wasn't sopping under the lee of this barn place," said the mounted man.

"I tried the barn first; but, once I got inside, the look of the roof against the sky was enough. Our guns must have got on to it pretty often. The whole show may tumble in any moment. I expect it is full of their dead, too."

"But there's quite a crowd of our fellows in there now."

"I know. It's warm inside, and dry; and some of 'em are so fed up they don't care a damn what happens."

There was no more conversation for some time. The glow of the pipes, however, and the rustle of the straw as the men fidgeted showed that they were not sleeping. They ought to have fallen asleep at once, for the were tired out, having marched far and fought hard during the two previous days. They were taking part in a large attack—successful as far as they were concerned, in that they had gained possession of the village for which they had been fighting all day. After the enemy had been finally driven out of the place there had still been much to do in strengthening it against any possible effort at recapture. Though otherwise unimportant, it was a stepping stone for the morrow's advance. The wearied men had been digging, knocking holes in walls, driving in stakes, and struggling in the dark with obstinate and savage barbed wire until the night was far advanced. They had then been allowed to feed and rest wherever they could find shelter near their position. Not many besides the wounded were in buildings, for the firing line was on the outer fringe of the village, some way from the houses. It was in tool sheds, yards, barns, cowhouses, and sties that the lucky ones got shelter. The rest were out in the open. Though the temperature was not really low, the night seemed cold to the sweat soaked soldiers who had been fighting and crawling all day in the sun. Moreover, they were wet; for it was under cover of a rainstorm that they had at last succeeded in rushing the place at dusk. Pursuit in the dark with tired infantry being out of the question, they had just to hang on to what they had won.

To men in such a condition, who had no roof over their heads, the chance of a straw bed out of the wind had outweighed such a trifle as the overwhelming farmyard smell which hung round behind the barn. The two chance comrades did not sleep, but neither spoke for some time for fear of waking the other. At last the infantry soldier turned over. As he did so he groaned aloud and swore.

"Eh?" grunted his companion.

"Rubbed foot; slung me boot round me neck yesterday: lost it today crawling, and a job I've had to dodge the medical officer. The infernal thing throbs so now that I can't sleep."

"No more can I. My rheumatism or lumbago or whatever it is gives me devilish little chance. I lie awake, smoke—when I have baccy—and think."

"Yes, there's a lot of us do a bit of thinking these days. Been a surprise to most of us, this show." From his conversation it was evident that the speaker, though not a man of good birth or much education, was of a superior class. He rarely dropped an "h." There was no response from the other, and he proceeded:

"In the first place, I never dreamt these —— could fight so well." He used a common but coarse nickname for the enemy.

"Why not?"

"They're not serving voluntarily—they're conscripts! I was always told that one volunteer was worth——"

"I know that old yarn well."

"You didn't believe in it then?"

"No. I'd traveled too much."

"Well, the most of us haven't traveled and we thought it was all right. Couldn't have believed that pressed men—slaves, in a manner of speaking—could have so much spirit. Why, they fight like the devil—at any rate quite as well as us. And from the prisoners and wounded that I have seen they don't seem very downtrodden neither. They don't appear to have much of a grievance."

"No, why should they?"

"Why, they're forced to fight whether they like it or not, aren't they?"

"That's just it. They're all in the same boat, and they're all doing their best."

"You mean they aren't worried by thinking of the—well—who are we all thinking of?"

"That's what I mean. It's our thoughts of those at home that are worrying us, nothing else."

"I believe you. We are beginning of. I should say, have begun to regret we ever came. Is it the danger, the wounds, the hardships? No! Is it the filth? No! Why, I am lousy—lousy, man, and I don't much care! Then, what is it?"—he was overwrought and sleepless, and his voice rose to a husky shout—"I ask you."

"We all know," said the other somewhat wearily: he had heard all this several times, and though it was true, repetition was vain. "But it's not much good going over it again. Those that know it best and feel it most perhaps say least."

"You're right," was the reply. "What's the good of talking about it? We did keep the thoughts down at first, when we were full of enthusiasm: but now——!"

There was no immediate answer, and the bootless man was again the first to speak:

"I say."

"Yes."

"Up to talking?"

"O, yes—may as well."

"There's one or two things I want to know—perhaps you can tell me. I'm a thinking man, mind you, though I've not had your advantages in position and education. I work for my living at home——"

"So do I, though possibly in a different way. Out with it."

"Ought not the people attacking to have the advantage in numbers, about three or four to one, or something of that?"

"Yes, that's the idea."

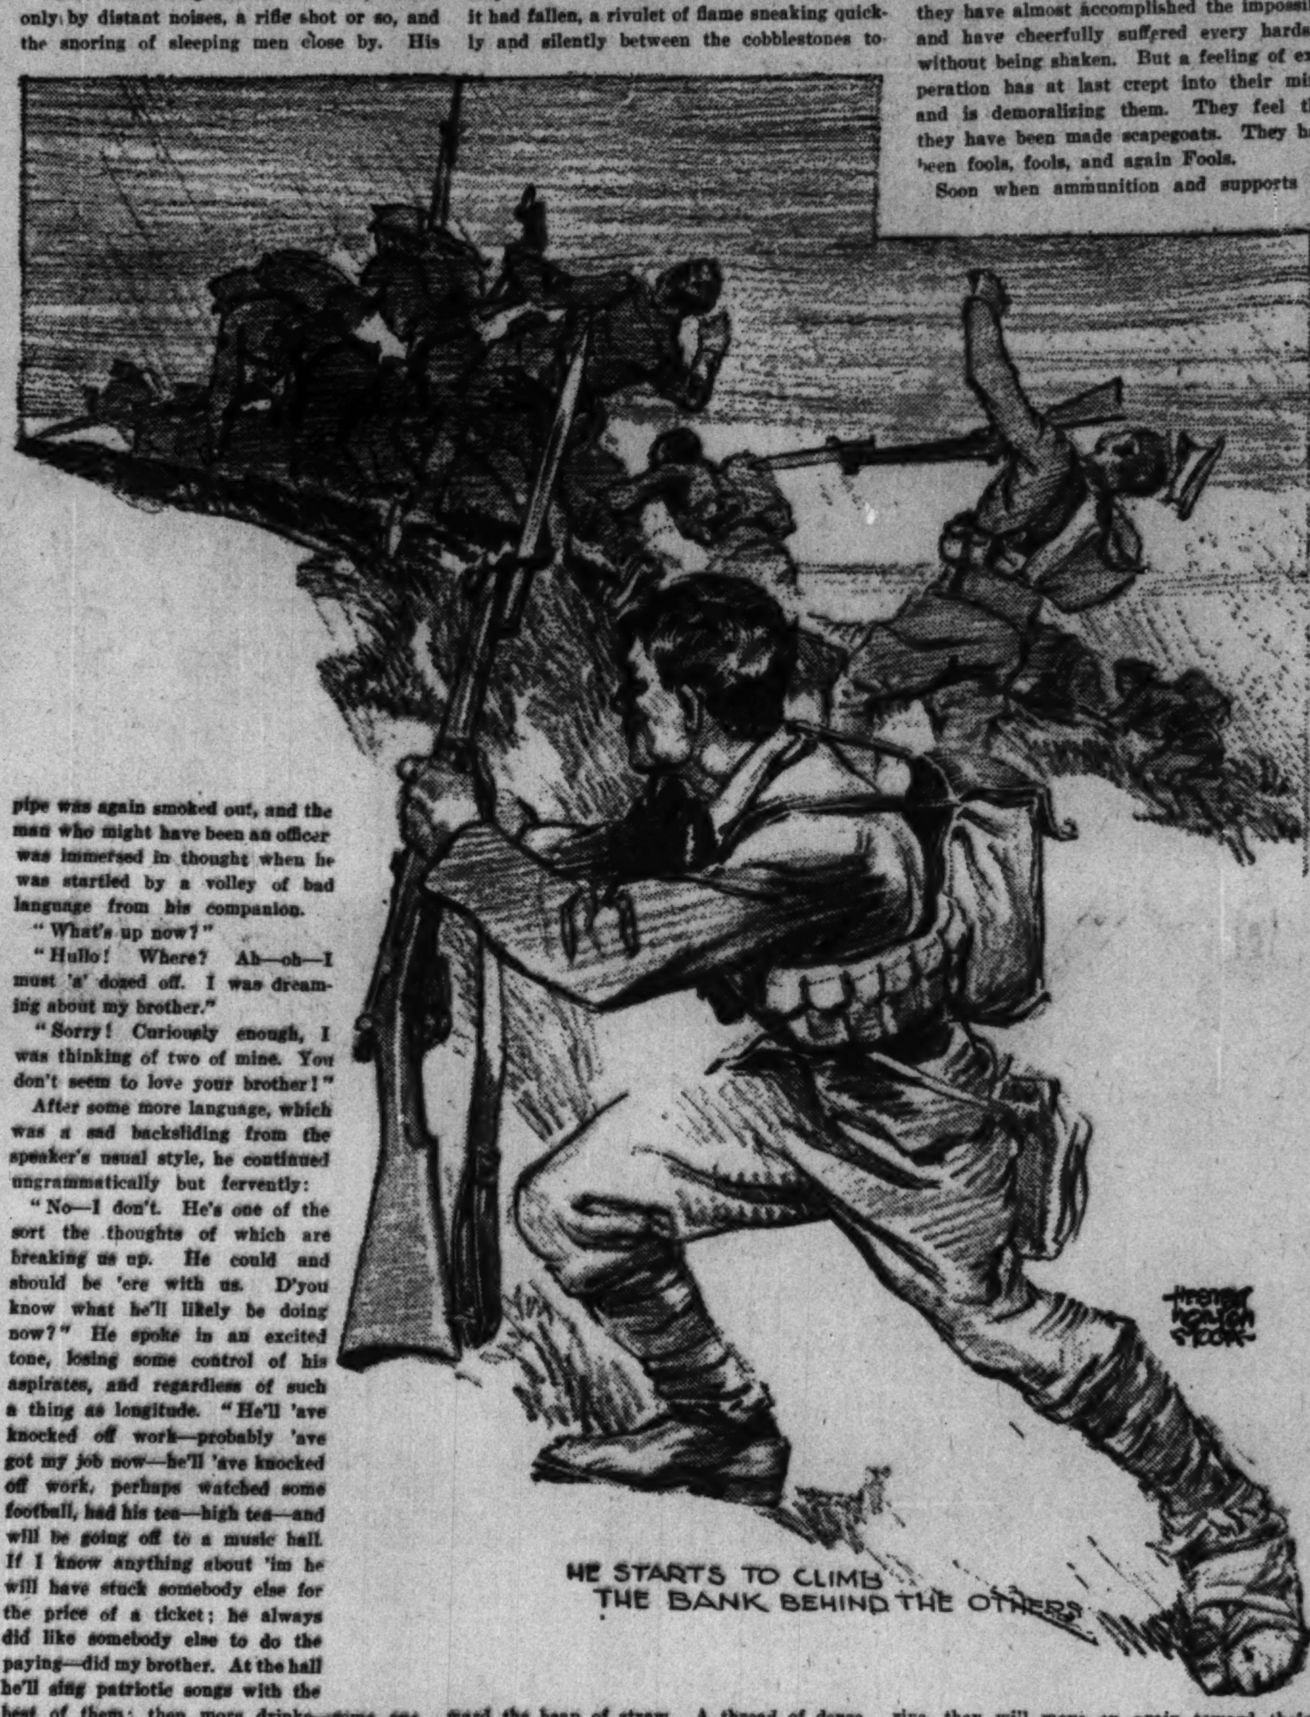
"We're attacking. Have we got it? It don't look so to me. As far as I've seen they've always had the pull over us so far."

"So they have. They've got far more men than we have."

"Then what I say is, why don't we let them attack us? Let them do a bit of the advancing in the open while we do a bit of shooting from the trenches. That sounds right, don't it?"

"It sounds all right: unluckily we can't afford to wait. We must try and finish them off soon—to wait would be to play their game. As they can reinforce three to four to our one—and better trained men, too—every hour goes against us. That's why we are shoving on so hard now. We have marched quick and concentrated here suddenly in order to neutralize this disadvantage, and I suppose we have a few more men here than they have against us at present."

There was a long silence this time, broken only by distant noises, a rifle shot or so, and the snoring of sleeping men close by. His pipe was again smoked out, and the man who might have been an officer was immersed in thought when he was startled by a volley of bad language from his companion.



HE STARTS TO CLIMB THE BANK BEHIND THE OTHERS

"What's up now?"

"Hullo! Where? Ah—oh—I must 'a' dozed off. I was dreaming about my brother."

"Sorry! Curiously enough, I was thinking of two of mine. You don't seem to love your brother!"

After some more language, which was a sad backsliding from the speaker's usual style, he continued ungrammatically but fervently:

"No—I don't. He's one of the sort the thoughts of which are breaking us up. He could and should be 'ere with us. D'you know what he'll likely be doing now?" He spoke in an excited tone, losing some control of his aspirates, and regardless of such a thing as longitude. "He'll 'ave knocked off work—probably 'ave got my job now—he'll 'ave knocked off work, perhaps watched some football, had his tea—high tea—and will be going off to a music hall. If I know anything about 'im he will have stuck somebody else for the price of a ticket; he always did like somebody else to do the paying—did my brother. At the hall he'll sing patriotic songs with the best of them; then more drinks—some one else paying, mind you—though he's earning good money now—and then the national anthem." He stopped to take breath. "That's my brother. God bless 'im! and that's what he's doing for his country while you and me are lying wornout and lousy on a dung heap. He could have come. He has no wife or kids, and has money saved; but he isn't such a damned fool, he says, as to waste his time and money in training or to fight for other people who stay behind and get all the pickings. If he called me a fool once he must have done it scores of times. I'm not sure but he wasn't right, too! That's the sort of fat loafer with the thousands of others like him that we are fighting for as well as the women and the kids and the old country, mind you." He finished, stopless and breathless, then added in a lower voice: "I'm sorry, mate, to give you all this; but when I can't sleep, when I'm resting, all the time when I'm not actually in the thick of it, the thought of him and his likes is a canker in my mind. I can't get quit of it, and it's always before we go into action, just before the whistle goes, that it gets me worst. Damn 'im! There, I'm through now. Perhaps you feel something of the same sort and understand? Most do, nowadays."

The other nodded thoughtfully. "Yes, I know. I have two brothers. One is much the same sort as yours, and is doing the same sort of thing, and it is just before the flag falls that I think most of him. He doesn't have to earn his living. I daresay he has given plenty to the different war funds; but he isn't here! He's just carrying on his life and amusing himself with sport and games. I expect he was dressing to dine out tonight about the time your brother was having tea, then he may have gone to the music hall or theater, or may have played cards. It's all the same thing. The other one I don't blame so much. He has a family and a big business. Unless other firms did it he could not afford to join himself or let his employés join; he would lose all to his rivals. In his and in most cases it is the whole nation that I blame more than individual shirkers—the fool nation that sits down and expects a few to do the work of the whole lot. You see it comes back to the same thing, and it's the realization of this that's corroding us. They"—he waved his hand vaguely toward the front of the village—"haven't got these thoughts to worry them. They feel they have justice for all. We may have been fools not to have seen through it before, but we've got to stick it out now!"

"Yes, we have been fools, but we've learned a lot, and some of us are pretty near the limit."

The gray of the sky had now assumed a greenish tinge when a close rifle shot rang out, then another. A dropping fire began, and, finally, the rattle of musketry burst out all round. Shouts arose, whistles were blown. Three shots from a gun near by brought down a fresh cascade of bricks. Forgetting his foot, forgetting even his brother, the lame man dodged the shower and ran for his rifle. The other, now running up with a lantern, fell over the wall into the yard. Quickly scrambling up, he vanished over the enclosure in order to test practically the direction of his loopholes. But the smashed lantern lay where it had fallen, a rivulet of flame sneaking quickly and silently between the cobblestones toward the heap of straw. A thread of dense smoke crawled softly up the wall of the building, and then the barn itself, the yard, and the immediate neighborhood were lit up in a fierce orange glare.

The "slaves" were actually making an attempt to recapture the village! The conflagration was the one thing necessary to show up the target for their guns, and bursting shell now added their share to the turmoil round the blazing barn. But its utility even in this direction was short lived, for each building soon stood out distinct against the light of the coming day.

Evening is closing in over the little ravine. It is a mere topographic under feature which would be shown on no map, however large the scale, but one which has assumed great importance for many human beings. There is still plenty of light, enough to see the little flags fluttering on its edge, and to see that the tortuous hollow is for some distance full of men. They are some of those who were holding the village down below—that village upon which the enemy made such a desperate but unsuccessful counter attack at dawn this morning. They have fought their way throughout the day up to close range of the "conscripts'" position, and are now waiting under cover. Some are at the bottom of the hollow, some on one side, some on the other, according to its direction, and they are collected in distinct groups, not distributed over the slopes. There are many places which appear to be avoided by common consent, though it would surely be more comfortable for these weary men to be scattered about at ease instead of being herded together as they are. It is only after the frequent recurrence over these spots of sharp smacking sounds, each accompanied by its little spurt of dust—ghostly gray in the half light—that the reason for their unpopularity becomes obvious. Far from giving the security which such a ravine promises, these spots catch many of the bullets humming down the hillside. The bodies lying there also show that the selection of the exact spots safe from long range, probably unaimed rifle fire, is a matter of trial and error and not of intuition.

One of those who have thus suffered to point the way for others is the man who might have been an officer. For him the final flag has fallen, and he lies face to the earth, head down the slope.

The men in their huddled groups are lying down and squatting between the bowlders and bushes. Some, by their attitude of absolute abandonment, show that they have reached the apathetic stage of fatigue: panting, with arms extended, they lie on back of stomach. Others roll their heads from side to side, or rock to and fro muttering. No one talks, and the only near sound to break the monotonous wailing overhead is the smack of stray bullets into the sides of the hollow and the rattle and clank of rifle or dangling shovel as men move. Even in this light it is not a pleasant sight. They are not pleasant men—these soldiers at their last gasp. Tattered, unshaven, and tanned, the congealed blood of wounds scarcely shows. Filthy they are, too, not with the honest grime of a day's toil, but with the repulsive accumulation of a much longer period, and the air of the ravine is tainted with the reek of an unwashed crowd.

Though not regulars, the men attacking have done wonders, and are now veterans as good as any professional soldiers in the world: they have almost accomplished the impossible, and have cheerfully suffered every hardship without being shaken. But a feeling of exasperation has at last crept into their minds and is demoralizing them. They feel that they have been made scapegoats. They have been fools, fools, and again Fools.

Soon when ammunition and supports arrive they will move on again toward their objective. Now they are resting and thinking. These pauses are welcome to tired nature; not so the thoughts which so insistently come with them.

It seems a long time that they have to wait in this shelter. The three things that they now require most are ammunition, reinforcements, and water. Though it is of the last that each man personally most feels the need, he will only get it if it arrives before the other two; once supports and cartridges come up, there will be no waiting for water. At last there is some commotion in the hollow—it is ammunition arriving. It is distributed in silence, and silently and mechanically are the bandoliers filled. But no supports come up. Before it gets quite dark a vague shadow passes high up over the hollow in the ground. It is visible, and by no means noiseless; but, perhaps owing to the din all round, possibly owing to the general apathy, no notice is taken of it. No one shoots upward, no bombs are dropped, and the shape floats away up the hill, probably to report to the hostile artillery the exact spot where this section of the attack has so mysteriously gone to earth and whence it will suddenly issue forth. Still they wait, and still the commander, who is now connected by telephone with the rear, anxiously inquires as to supports. Those of the men who are not too self-absorbed listen for the roar of the guns behind, which will cover the advance of reinforcements. It does not begin. Reinforcements are not easy to find in this army even when urgently required.

A gentle rain begins to fall and the air grows cold. The man with the bare foot continues to mutter. Though he is becoming chilled and stiff, he does not notice the rain; his foot feels cool, and he carefully rewraps it in the now wet rag. Those round him are digging out little hollows in the ground to catch the rain water and are sucking the wet pebbles. He does not notice. The little hollows slowly turn to shallow pools, and the strange spectacle is offered of a herd of men on all fours lapping from the ground with sucking noises. He does not notice. Suddenly he is brought to actualities. A feeling of collapse grips him: he feels unaccountably ill, forlorn, unmanned: his body sways. Is he going to faint? Involuntarily he stretches out a hand to steady himself, and puts it into something quite cold. He looks down: he is seated in a trickle of muddy water. To have the head or the whole body wet is nothing, but to be seated in cold water is of all things that best calculated to take the heart out of a man. He grasps the cause of his sudden depression, and turning over slowly on all fours he leaps from the mud and the gravel, then seizes his rifle and crawls stiffly on to the bank.

The reinforcements have at last started. The telephone has said so to the commander, and the sudden roar of their guns behind conveys the message to the rest. A few orders are passed down and most of the attackers crawl up below the edge of one bank and begin shooting. They can barely see the enemy's position above, owing to the curve of the hill; but they know the range roughly, and can help their comrades' advance by their fire.

Presently one panting man—the first of the supports—drops into the hollow from its lower edge; then others arrive in twos, threes, dozens. All blown, many wounded, they stumble into the ravine. There are too many now for any careful selection of resting places; the newcomers, moreover, do not know of the dangerous spots in this twisting crack in the hillside. Several come untouched across the open only to be struck down as soon as they reach the haven of refuge, and it is no longer into the hard ground of the exposed spots that the bullets smack. The bearers again become busy. More and more soldiers drop into the hollow, until it is crowded.

If the shape which fluttered overhead only a short time back has done its duty, now is the time for the enemy's artillery to open upon this mass of men crowded together. But no shrapnel whistles its way down to rain a vertical death upon them, no high explosive shell arrives to tear them into fragments. Possibly the enemy wish them to move out first and become visible, the better to shatter them with direct gun and rifle fire, and then with the cold steel of the counter stroke. At any rate, there is now a respite, for their own guns, covering the advance of reinforcements, have ceased to shoot, now that the latter have reached the safety of the ravine. Their assistance will be much more needed in a few minutes, and ammunition is precious.

During this respite—this breathing space—which, as all feel, is the calm before the storm, every man is silent. Time drags even to the most weary. Why don't they go on? Why doesn't the whistle sound? It is just before the flag falls, or that dread moment before the plunge—far worse than the plunge itself—which is always recurring in war, but which never loses its terrors. At such a moment men act variously, according to their temperaments, and derive no comfort from the propinquity of a crowd. Death is very near, and if met at all will be met alone, and each soul is isolated, solitary. The general silence gives an impression of apathy, which is belied by the few who mutter prayers or blaspheme at the delay. They are taking this last moment according to their nature. When the whistle blows they will act alike—as they have done before. None but the dead and wounded will remain behind.

One man stoops to adjust the bandage on his bootless foot. It is not really necessary; but he has a prejudice against being tripped up or being forced to advance barefooted over stones. It may seem superfluous for any thought to be given to such things when the air will be soon thick with whistling death; but it is at such moments that trifles obtrude themselves. Refastening the bandage, he gives it a pat, then stands up. He keeps swallowing, though he has nothing in his mouth. It is now all but dark. The guns behind roar. The enemy's artillery, however, only reply with star shell, which light up the hillside; it is infantry that they are thirsting for at present, and they bide their time. The very raindrops sparkle as they fall in the glare of the searchlights: it is the supreme moment; but even the consciousness that they are "playing the game" does not seem to inspire those waiting for the call: they are going into it cold blooded this time.

A whistle sounds faintly, then sounds again. The shrill noise grips the man with the bandaged leg and intensifies the thoughts that obsess him, reminding him of the football field, of home, and—his brother. Mechanically he starts to climb the bank a little behind the others; then hesitates. Why should he go on? Why should he endure all this? He lies down deliberately, as do hundreds of others, for the feeling now raised by the whistle is not peculiar to him alone. It is the Limit.

The rest climb on and, head down to avoid being dazzled, rush forward into the glare, their bodies shown in relief as they top the bank. The wailing sound in the air rises to a continuous shriek, its intensity some indication of the special slaughter which always awaits a weak assault beaten back.

VOICE of the FAN

Dear Miss Tinee: Delours Somers wrote an article, part of which was very good, part of it not so good. That part made me so mad that I went to the garden and sowed radishes where I had intended sowing flowers.

The part I refer to is where D. S. wants to know why the young men were attending an afternoon "movie." In the first place, it is none of her business, but, seeing D. S. makes it her business, I've just got to defend some of the young men referred to.

Who prints this page and the morning papers? Who handles thousands of telegrams while you sleep? Who handles the mail that is delivered to your door in the morning? The night worker does these things and many others.

The writer has been a night worker for five years and wishes to know from D. S. what time to attend a movie show.

As for witnessing "degrading photo plays," that is a matter of choice. Next time D. S. witnesses a scene showing pickpockets in their dens she should turn to sonnie and say, "Sonnie, those men are bad. Some day they will go to jail for their crime."

ART E. ANDRESON.

Dear Miss Tinee: I was one of the competitors for the scenario prize. I took my wife and my honey boy, Bobbie, who is 3 years old, to the theater last evening to see "The Diamond from the Sky." I was astonished at the greatness of the story. It unfolded itself like a flower warmed by the sun. Each episode seemed like a beautiful petal opening before your eyes. It's real and it's true to life. It's nature itself.

I take my hat off to Roy L. McCardell, and I concur fully in the judgment of yourself and the other two members who made the selection. I do not believe you could have done otherwise.

Mr. McCardell's story is simply wonderful, and all the world will be much better for having such a lovely story shown them on the screens and having an opportunity to read it through the columns of the Sunday paper. I shall try to outline a suggestion for a sequel to Mr. McCardell's story and submit it.

ROBERT L. CORBETT.

Dear Miss Tinee: Of course I could not let that horrid letter of Violette Ann Lester go by without saying a word of protest against her unfair charge. If you were in the pay of the Thanhouser people I should expect you to say and do a great deal more for them than you do. How silly! As far as I can see we get too much of Mary Pickford. I have questioned a great many people and they have all agreed upon that. Violette seems to forget that there are others in the world who like other actresses than Mary Pickford and Norma Talmadge. We will take our Mae Tinee just as she is, for where would we be without her? I too, hope you will print this letter.

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS.

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Miss Tinee, in care of this paper.

Questions that have been answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

FOUR NORMALITES: Mr. Bushman says he is not married. Crane Wilbur is a grass widower. J. Warren Kerrigan is a bachelor. The pictures of James Cruze and Marguerite Snow have been in the paper a number of times. I'm sorry if you have missed them. Mr. Wilbur has gone to the Lubin company. Why, no, girls, I can't exactly imagine Mr. Chaplin in a romantic rôle. There's something about his feet——?

MISS MARY C.: Address Pearl White in care of the Pathé company, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J.

J. C. AND E. P.: Yessah, I'll excuse the pencil. Miss Cleo Madison's picture has appeared in the "Frame." No reason why it shouldn't again, however, if she receives votes enough. A letter addressed to her in care of the Universal company, Hollywood. Cal.; will reach her. Thank you for liking the page.

MARJORIE E. B.: John Bunny died recently. Beatriz Michelena is with the California Motion Picture corporation, Los Angeles, Cal. A letter addressed to Dorothy Davenport in care of the Mutual company, 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, will reach her. Violet MacMillan plays in pictures more or less. Mary Pickford is not related to Alice Joyce. O, she's been married quite some time. Y'wekkum!

T. S.: Clara Kimball Young is with the World Film corporation, 110 West Fortieth street, New York. You're vurr' welcome.

B. G.: The Metro company is releasing "The High Road," in which Valli Valli appears.

HELEN K.: I had not heard that either Jack Standing or Dorothy Kelly was married. The last mentioned two in your letter are married.

BROWN EYES: Of course I love my movie page. You don't give the name of the company producing the picture in which you are interested, so I can give you no information regarding it. Three guesses, Brown Eyes, why the young man who takes you to picture shows objects to your raving about Richard Travers all the time.

FLORA: Mr. Costello still plays in Vitagraph productions.

EDGAR H. MOORE: Yes, the winner of the $10,000 scenario contest was announced on May 2. Roy McCardell was the lucky number.

PEARL M.: John Bunny is dead. The paragraph you read on the "page" the other Sunday saying he was to return to the picture game was not a misstatement at the time it was written. The color pages of a Sunday paper are made up in advance. Many others have written calling my attention to the paragraph. This is the explanation.

KATHLEEN: Margaret Joslin was Mrs. Slippery Slim in the Snakesville comedies. I can't hear too soon or too often from you. Kathleen. Maurice Costello is in his thirties. Mary Pickford is still with the Famous Players.

HIS LETTERS

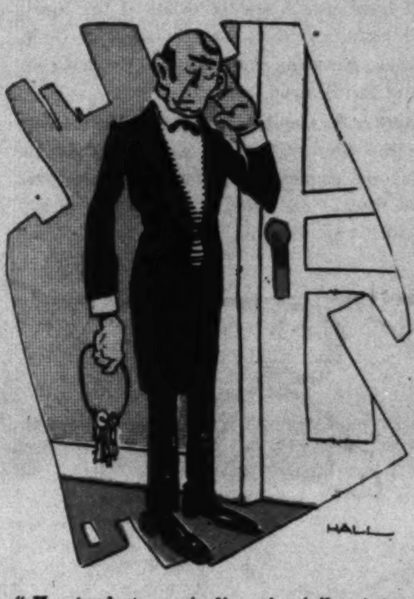
This is the second of a series of letters written by a moving picture actor to his lawyer friend in Chicago, procured under promise that the author's incognito would be preserved. The sketches are NOT photographs!

DEAR BOBS: Gee, this is a gay life! Something didding every minute. When I'm not making love to a lovely lady I'm roping a steer or, unarmed, staring a villian out of countenance. Yes, quoth he, for I am a hero, the favored of the fair, the strong right arm of virtue and the stalking terror of evildoers. He eats 'em alive! Who? Why, your friend Jim!

In my last letter I tipped it off to you that I had a valet and you quite likely grinned and said: "Pretty soft—the old bluffer! Pretty soft!"

Well, Bobs, it is my painful duty to inform you that my valet is "valet" in name only. The sad truth is he stands to me in lieu of a jailer, tutor, spy, sleuth, and nurse. He has strict orders, I am sure, to never quit me for a moment. Either this or my remarkable personality attracteth him as a magnet doth a needle, for, like my hide, he is always with me. He sticketh closer than a brother—and then some. The way I happened to get him was thusly:

In order to get some papers I was supposed to disguise myself as a woman. Herr Director, having taken me to the wardrobe mistress and given her instructions as to what my layout was to be, left me with a pat on the shoulder, telling me to report in an hour in the big daylight studio for the scene.



"He stands to me in lieu of a jailer, tutor, spy, sleuth, nurse, and father confessor."

"You understand makeup, you told me?" he flung back over his shoulder

"Yep!" I answered, wondering when I told him that. I remembered then that in my eagerness to have and to hold this job which had been thrust upon me I had told many strange tales, one of which had had to do with my prowess at makeup. The truth being, Bobs, that my sole experience along this line occurred that day behind the barn when we discovered a can of red paint and decided that we would be Indians. How long was it before that paint wore off? Geewhillikens, will you ever forget the scoldings and scrapings, and lickings we got for that escapade? However, I'm getting away from my point.

The kind old wardrobe mistress handed me my paraphernalia and I departed for my dressing room whistling blithely. There I sat me down before mine glass and got busy with the tools. I rouged and I powdered, I blackened and I grease painted, and, as a final touch—touches—I adorned myself from a package of black court plaster cut in the alluring shapes of the things you see when you hit your bed after a night out. Then I dressed.

Now dressing—in dresses—sounds simple, but I'm telling you, Bobs, that the ways of a woman's getup are devious and misleading. Her lingerie is a thing of snares and delusions, of ribbons that snarl and laces that turn inside out. O, it's awful! And her outside raiment! Ye gods! Such a mess of hooks that insist on getting opposite clasps instead of eyes. Whew!

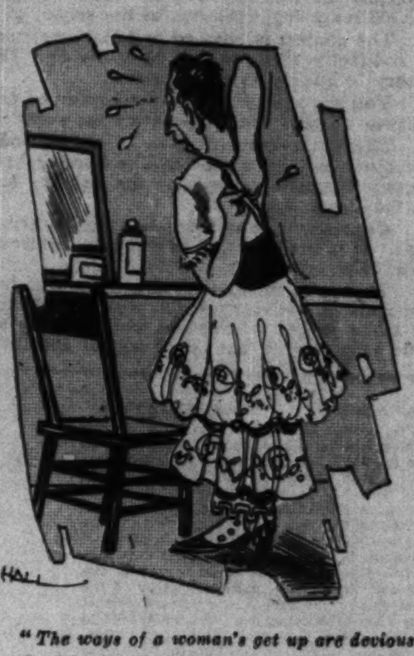
When I saw what I was in for I bolted my door and set my teeth. People kept coming and calling.

"Ready?"

"Are you ready?"

"Are you ready?"—and finally, "Sa-a-a-y! Are you ever going to be ready!"

To all of which I replied as I struggled and hooked and tied and pinned, "Inaminute, inaminute, justaminute!"



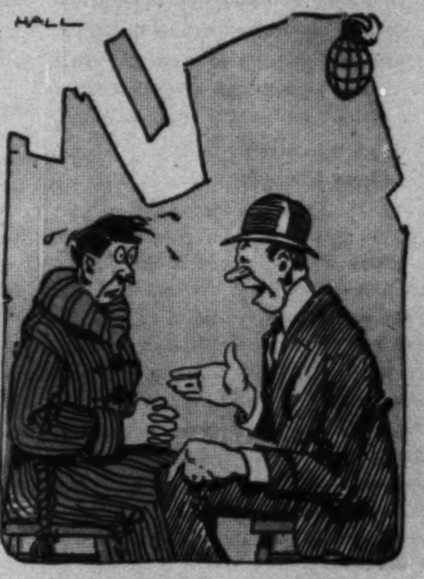
"The ways of a woman's get up are devious and misleading."

At last I was through! Seizing my hat, I tore for the daylight studio. It was up a flight of steps from the dressing room. I was in such a hurry that I forgot to hold up my skirts and I made the last step and the hem of my gown at the same time, thereby precipitating myself headlong into a group of my fellows—and sisters, wurra, wurra—causing large sized confusion which resolved itself into a hoot of laughter that rocked the building and brought every employé in the place, from the manager to the engineer, straight as an arrow to the mark to the daylight studio.

I stood there like a fool with my hat—it was my hat I'd picked up instead of the silly flowered thing I was supposed to bring—in my hand, and a most uncompromising mirror showed me perspiring until my makeup ran in rivulets of black and white and red all over my face.

Say, Bobs, you are a pretty wise chap, but let me tell you you have never yet experienced the ultimate experience—that of looking like a fool, feeling like a fool, and, by jove, acting like a fool before a choice audience of critics who know you are a fool! That is the ultimate experience!

Finally, when I could make myself heard, I spoke thus, gruffly, hesitatingly: "This is no work for me! I resign! Good-by!" and I departed, followed by another hoot.



"He sat down opposite and talked to me firmly but kindly."

As I was about to close the door of my dressing room the director came in. He was not smiling. On the contrary, he was quite grave.

"Sit down, old man," he said.

I told him I couldn't—which was true, for a pin was gouging my vitals, and every move was pain. Then the director proved himself a human being.

As tenderly as a mother he divested me of my accouterments of agony, bathed my face, and finally, when he had me in my bathrobe again, gave me a cigaret. Lighting one himself, he sat down opposite and talked to me firmly but kindly.

I was under contract. The serial must be finished, and as I was the only man who resembled the hero who had wantonly deserted during the filming of the second installment I must stick. However, my work would be made easy. I should have a valet who was also something of a motion picture actor and would be able to instruct me, ahem, in the rudiments of my art. Just a minute—he'd call the chap.

He did.

Valet came.

Valet hath been with me ever since. And while valet remains on the job there is no chance of my escaping. A motion picture actor, not from choice but of necessity, is your old friend,

JIM.

$10,000 for 1,000 Words or Less for an Idea for a Sequel to

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

The Tribune-American Film Manufacturing Company's Picturized Romantic Novel

The theme of "The Diamond from the Sky" was so fascinating and the developments of the story of such heart interest that the American Film Manufacturing company, in connection with "The Tribune," decided to offer a further prize of $10,000 for a suggestion as to the sequel of the winning scenario.

The contest is open to any man, woman, or child who is not connected directly or indirectly with the film company or "The Tribune." No literary ability is necessary to qualify as a contestant.

You are advised to see the continued photoplay in the theaters where it will be shown—to read the story as it runs every week, and then send in your suggestion.

The photo-dramatization of the episodes corresponding with the chapters of the story as they appear in The Sunday Tribune can be seen at the leading motion picture theaters throughout the country each week. One two reel episode is released every Monday.

Contestants must confine their contributions for the sequel to 1,000 words or less. It is the idea that is wanted. Address Photoplay Editor, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The most interesting situations will be pointed out from time to time in the synopsis of the story which will precede the chapters after the opening. A board of three judges will decide which of the suggestions received is most acceptable. The judgment of that board will be absolute and final.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud has existed between Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud has been engendered in family jealousy over an heirloom, "the diamond from the sky," that was found in a fallen meteor by an adventurer ancestor. The feud is further augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American Stanley. When a daughter is born to Col. Stanley of the eldest branch of the Stanleys in America, and the mother of the child dies at its birth, the chagrined colonel buys a newborn gypsy boy and substitutes him as heir. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the colonel's little daughter, being reared in secret, and leaves her own son undetected as the rightful heir of Stanley hall in Virginia, "the diamond from the sky," and the prospective heir to the earldom in England. The gypsy mother has also obtained possession of "the diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the Stanley secret of the false heir. She rears the little girl, Esther Stanley, as her own and grows to love her. When Esther is grown a beautiful young girl, Hagar, now gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with her, hoping she may right the wrong that has been done her by the Stanleys, and the wrong she has done the Stanleys in turn. She has a wild plan that Dr. Lee, the late Col. Stanley's old friend, may now adopt Esther, as originally intended. Her hope also is that her son, the supposed Arthur Stanley II., may fall in love with Esther and thus the innocent girl may become by marriage what she is by birth—mistress of Stanley hall. In all this Hagar, the gypsy queen, sees a fulfillment of all her hopes—her own son master of Stanley hall, possessor of "the diamond from the sky," presumptive heir to a proud English title, and also the sweet girl, Esther, cheated of her birthright, sharing all this good fortune and great honor. Dr. Lee readily agrees to adopt Esther, but also demands that Hagar turn over to his custody "the diamond from the sky." Dr. Lee also informs Hagar that her son, the supposed Arthur Stanley II., is a profligate and not worthy of Esther. But Hagar hopes for the best and with her people departs. Arthur Stanley does fall in love with Esther, and so does his boon companion, Blair Stanley, the cousin who would be the rightful male heir of Stanley were the Stanley secret known. Blair gets a glimpse of Dr. Lee in his study examining "the diamond from the sky." Blair's proud, cold mother has always believed Dr. Lee had the diamond. Blair in endeavoring to steal the diamond causes the death of the old doctor. In escaping from the doctor's house at midnight with the diamond Blair encounters Arthur, who has come to serenade Esther.

CHAPTER III.

THE SILENT WITNESS.

CAUGHT like a rat in a trap, with Arthur Stanley outside the window serenading the dead as well as the living, and Esther stirring o'erhead, Blair Stanley nerves himself with a supreme effort and turns the knob of the study door and steals down the darkened hallway. He unbolts the front door, and, closing it softly behind him, as though he would shut out the face of the dead man, Blair slips across the broad piazza like a phantom of the night.

But Arthur has heard the grating of the bolt, the soft opening of the door, and has stepped from the side to the front of the house, hoping it is Esther who comes in answer to his serenade and to receive his contrite pleadings for forgiveness. He reaches out to embrace the gentle girl, only to find he has clasped the stalwart, struggling frame of a man. The moon breaks through a cloud as his prisoner struggles, and its rays illuminate the face of Blair Stanley!

"What are you doing here, coming out of Dr. Lee's house at this hour?" whispers Arthur, tensely.

"Keep quiet, you fool!" Blair Stanley hisses, like a snake. "A girl's good name is at stake!"

As Arthur staggers back in horror at the shameful inference, Blair Stanley with a rapid movement draws his revolver and fires. He would do a double murder and win an earldom and the diamond from the sky, if he can escape without detection. But the quick arm of Arthur throws up the pistol and as Blair fires he wrenches the weapon from him. To avoid the shame and scandal, even of the inference of the base speaking Blair, the frenzied Arthur drags him down the pathway and down the silent village street, as the cocks are crowing, presaging the coming of the dawn. Panting and struggling, the cousins stumble off the village highway and into the little village graveyard. Their feet sink into a mound of soft earth by an open and newly dug grave. Standing panting and facing each other with rage and hate in their hearts and on their faces, the young men pause a moment in their mad struggle. Then Arthur brings out his own pistol and the long white silk handkerchief that protrudes from his breast pocket.

"For what you have said about Esther, either you or I must die," Arthur says. "Take one end of this handkerchief and stand across this open grave. Hold the handkerchief in your left hand, as I hold this corner of it. Now take your pistol, and when I count to 'Three!' raise and fire, and the one of us left alive will pull the dead man into the grave!"

Arthur counts "One!" when the now fearful murderer essays to fire. But the watchful Arthur is too quick for him. His pistol speaks first, and, instinctively tugging the handkerchief as he fires, Arthur drags the bleeding Blair into the grave, prone on his face. Arthur leaps into the grave after his fallen foe and tears open his shirt to see if the heart still beats, and there, on the breast of Blair Stanley, gleams in the moon rays the evil glitter of the diamond from the sky.

Arthur Stanley has known its every aspect, for the Stanley archives are full of it, in print and manuscript, pictured and described. "So there it has been, in the keeping of my cousin!" he mutters, and hardly realizing what he does, except the baleful gem is his by every right, he tears it from the neck of the figure in the grave and clambers out and stumbles on his way.

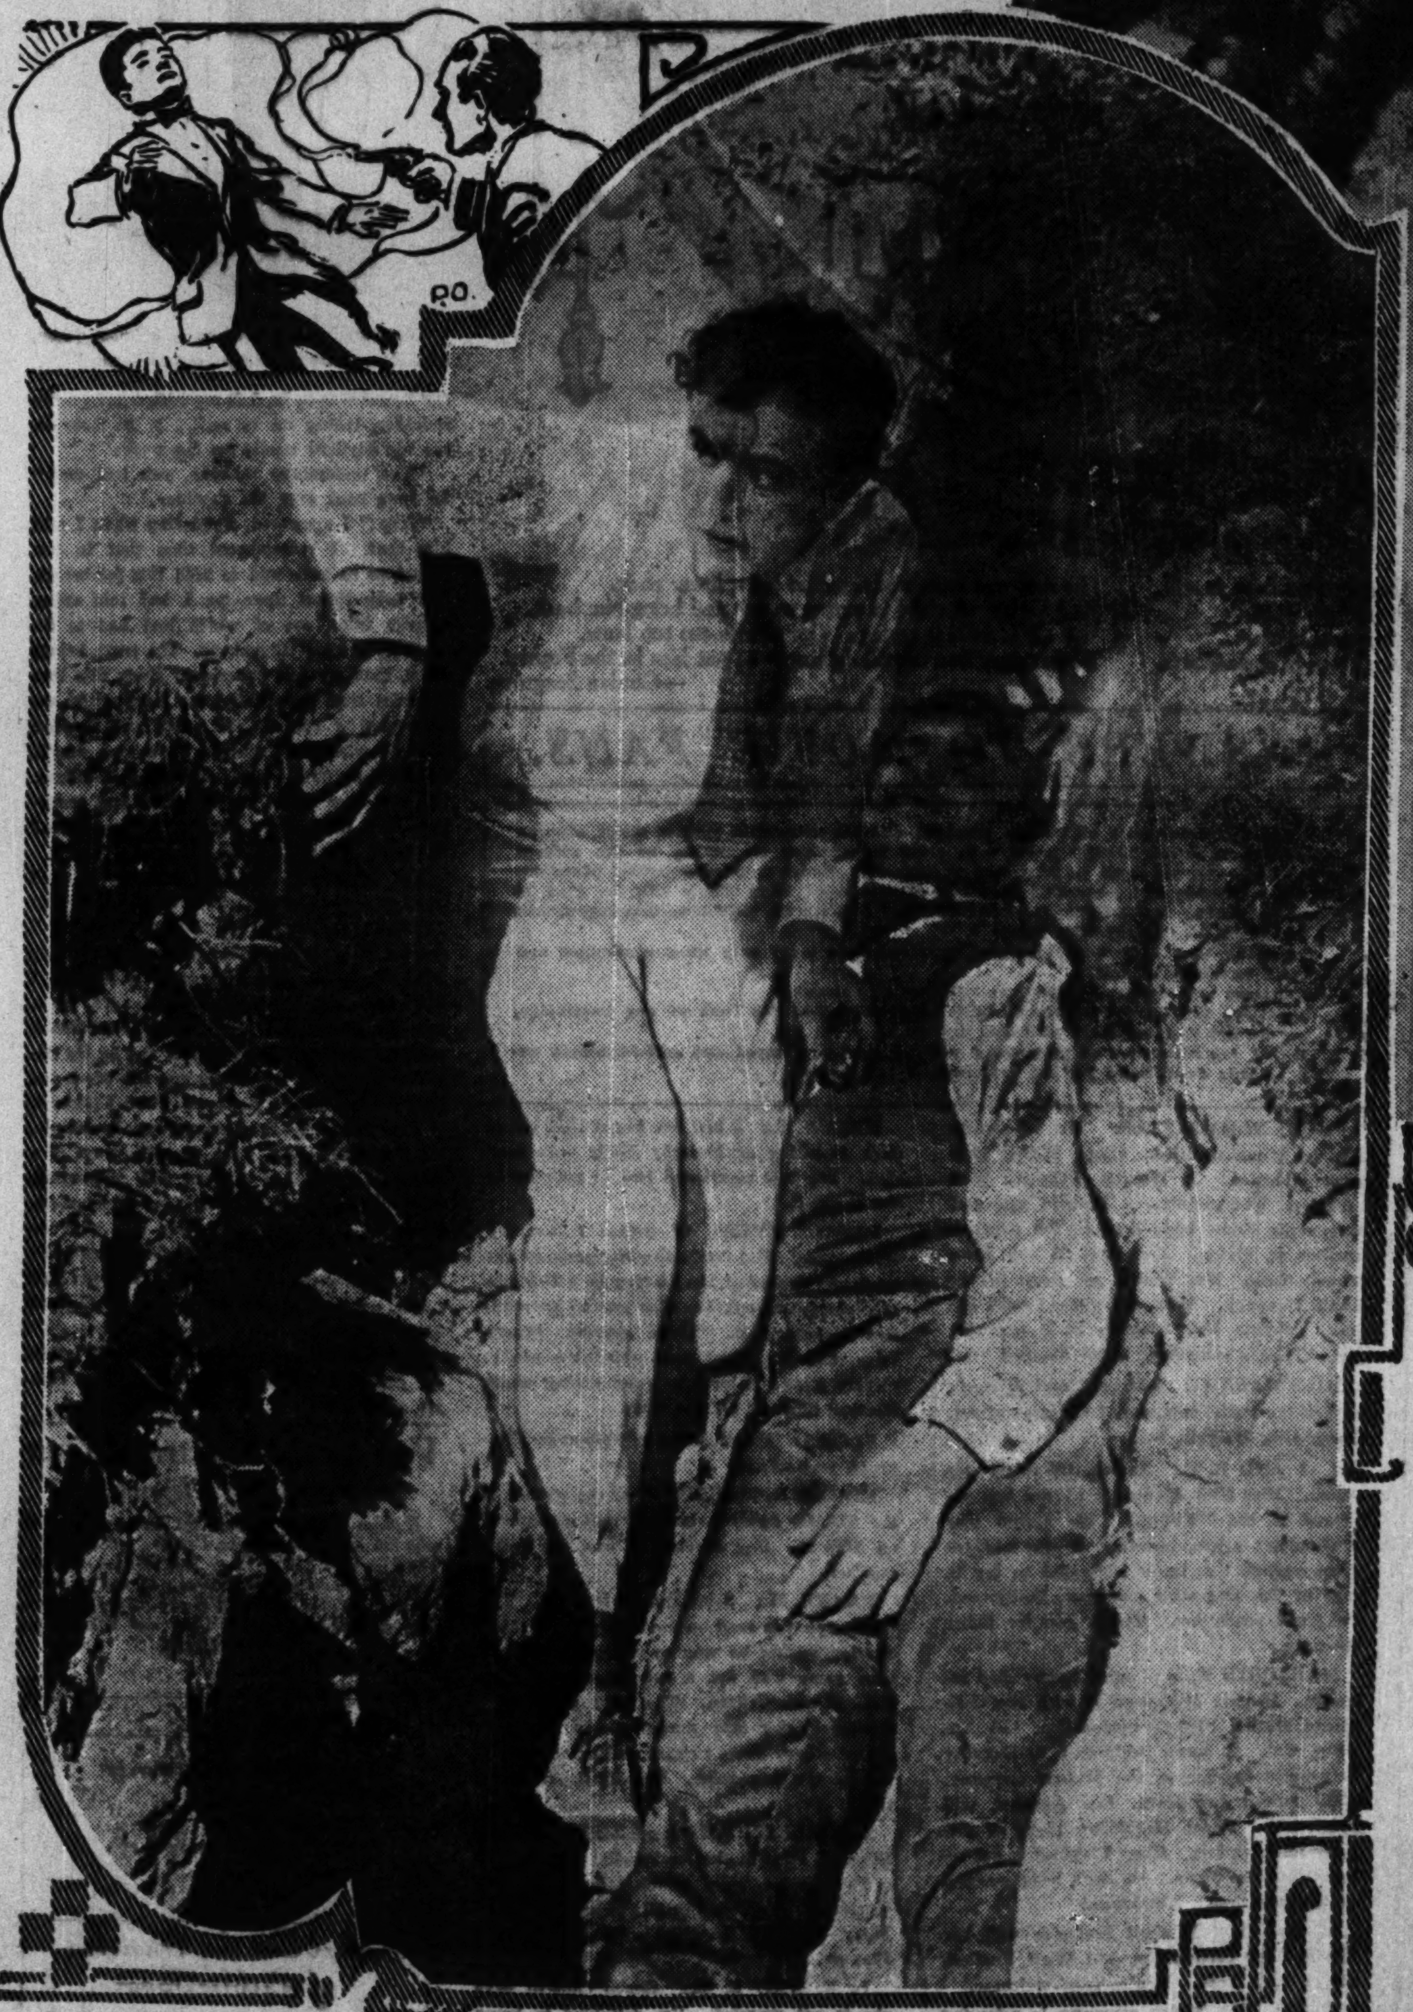
In the new dug grave Blair Stanley moaned and stirred. The wound in his forehead had been a glancing one, only sufficient to stun him, and now as he came to consciousness in the clammy depths of the grave his first impulse was to clutch wildly at his blood stained and disheveled shirt bosom. "The diamond from the sky" was gone! The death of the good old doctor had been all in vain. And Blair Stanley also fled beneath the moon, bootless and in truth blood guilty.

At Stanley hall Arthur gained access to the library and shuddered again as he saw the stains on his hands and on the great jewel that seemed to gleam all the brighter for them in the glare of the library lamp.

It was not to show "the diamond from the sky" that all men yearned for; it was to have it, to possess it, even in secret, that caused them to lie, to swindle, and even to grope through blood for it.

Well had the late Col. Stanley known the baleful history of the diamond that had fallen to the feet of his adventurer ancestor in a meteor. The Stanley "charm against harm" it was called, and now look what harm it had already done! Arraying brother against brother, father against son in the past, it had broken women's hearts the while, and now a false heir held it against a breast that ached in anguish.

Arthur felt instinctively "the diamond from the sky" was responsible for Blair's impugning the good name of sweet Esther, good old Dr. Lee's fair ward; but Arthur did not know that the good doctor lay cold in death at the hands of Blair Stanley. The wild thought, the wilder hope, that he might go elsewhere and under a new name, still holding to "the diamond from the sky," rehabilitate himself, and then seek out Esther in secret and wed her, now possessed Arthur.



HE TEARS THE BALEFUL GEM FROM THE NECK OF THE FIGURE in the GRAVE

LOTTIE PICKFORD

Meanwhile the dawn had come and Esther, who had been aroused at the pistol shots, was in great agitation and alarm. Comforted and encouraged by the first glimpse of dawn, she had descended to the lower hall of the house. The door of the doctor's study stood ajar and she glanced within. There in the dim light of the morning sun filtering through the window shades she saw the doctor in his dressing gown seemingly asleep in his favorite chair. She touched his cheek to rouse him and found it cold. Those pale lips, kindly even in death, could never keep their promise to tell her who and what she was "on the morrow." Here it was the morrow, and the lips that could tell were cold in death!

At first Esther and the neighbors had believed the doctor's death had been from natural causes, the peaceful passing in of old age. But the disorder of the room, the rifled cash box on the table, the chisel marked drawer of the old bookcase, and the opened window, against which the drawn shade flapped in the early morning air, mutely told their tale of theft and murder.

The sheriff had been sent for and already an eager neighbor had found a crushed guitar in the dooryard and the trampling of the feet of what appeared several struggling men in the flower beds that bordered the walk to the doctor's gate. The footprints were of well shod men of small and shapely feet, it was reported. No passing rough marauders, no outlaw negro desperadoes, had part in the murder and robbery in the doctor's study, nor had any such struggle in deadly combat in his garden, it was whispered. The matter was mystery as well as murder, and the morbid neighbors gathered in and around the cottage of the dead man and whispered greedily.

Meanwhile the dazed and bleeding Blair Stanley had a strange homecoming in the night. His mother, that proud, cold woman, worthy mate of the grim judge who had perished strangely in a wild mountain pass nearly a generation agone, loved her son seemingly only through her cold ambitions.

"You do not know when a day may come that you may be in position to save the life of the heir of Stanley," she had said often significantly. Blair understood his mother well.

It was known by all the Stanleys that "the diamond from the sky" had vanished strangely the night Col. Stanley had expired alone in his library, this preceding by a few days only the tragic death of Judge Stanley in the mountain pass, also, it was thought, alone. This was eighteen years ago, but the Stanley feud was not dead with its protagonists, those elder men of that elder day. The flush of hope came back to the ashen face of Blair Stanley. "I remember now," he said; "we trampled upon his guitar in the doctor's garden in our struggles. He will be accused of causing the doctor's death, and who will believe him if he in turn blames me? I will keep hidden, as you say, mother. The fact that he has the diamond and the doctor had it in his keeping up to his death will damn him. Thinking me dead, he may fly—who knows?"

His mother nodded, and then, seeing the dawn was breaking by the growing light outside, she crossed the room to the old fashioned fireplace and pressed a hidden spring. With wondering eyes Blair saw the whole fireplace from hearthstone to ceiling turn as one center pivot and swing half out into the room and half back into a great recess in the wall.

"A hiding place built by your Tory great-grandfather," said his mother. "Fairfax was all for the American arms during the revolution, all except your great-grandfather. Washington accused him of hiding and harboring spies for King George, but though they searched here they never found them," she added grimly.

In the niche behind the chimney Blair noted a small bench, or pallet, a reading lamp of old design, and sundry other crude comforts.

"You will find it comfortable enough," remarked his mother.

For one of the few times Blair could remember his proud, cold mother softened. She gave her attention again to the slight wound above the temple, bound it gently with her handkerchief, kissed him, and sighed. The unhappy Blair sobbed and impulsively embraced his mother. For one brief moment he faltered, and then his mother pointed in silence to the hiding place and he stepped within, the great chimneypiece swung into place, and he was in semi-darkness, hidden and secure.

At the doctor's cottage the first expression of authority by the sheriff was that nothing should be touched in the study where the doctor sat dead in his chair "till the coroner came." The broken guitar had been handed the sheriff. It could not be denied that when Arthur had been with the young people on the doctor's porch earlier in the night he had had the guitar with him. It was known he and the doctor had had high words earlier in the day over the fact that Arthur, who had squandered his means, had added to his other extravagances by ordering from abroad a costly French racing automobile without consulting the usually leniently inclined old doctor, who as one of Arthur's guardians had borne with the young man's wild extravagance with the patience that was part of Dr. Lee's kindly character.

But the return of Hagar, conscience stricken also, after eighteen long years, the return of Hagar again, bringing with her the sweet and blooming Esther, the rightful heir to the patrimony the gypsy changeling was squandering, and the arrangement for her adoption by Dr. Lee, as had long been intended, had wrought a right about face in the doctor's attitude toward the reckless, supposititious young master of Stanley hall. It had also wrought a great change in the character of Arthur Stanley; from the first meeting with lovely Esther, Arthur had abandoned his wild and spendthrift ways.

As for Esther, in the midst of depressing, morbid turmoil that followed the discovery of the doctor's death in his study, she had moved as one in a most unhappy dream. Under the cold, suspicious eyes of Blair Stanley's mother Esther had felt herself an interloper. The judge's widow had arrived upon the scene as soon as she had been sent for. Although her relations with the doctor had been distant and constrained for years, yet the judge's widow was next of kin. With the usual delay characteristic of the easy going doctor he had delayed making out the legal adoption papers for Esther. He had only insisted that she be called Esther Lee. What her real name was the polite Virginians had not asked, but it was whispered that it was Harding. When questioned by the puzzled sheriff as to what procedure he should follow after the identification of the broken guitar, found by the footprints in the flower beds, the judge's widow had coldly replied, "Do your duty!" and the sheriff, with his deputy, set out for Stanley hall to apprehend Arthur Stanley II. on suspicion of the murder of Dr. Henry Lee.

At their parting there had been one gift of Hagar's that Esther had since lovingly cherished. It was a pair of carrier pigeons.

"Take these, my dear daughter," Hagar had said. "If you are ever in trouble and need me, send a message by the birds. Their homing place is our gypsy rendezvous in the Blue Ridge. Even if I am not there when the message comes, some of our tribe will be. They will know where I am and fetch me the word."

So Esther, under the open espionage of Blair's mother, had taken one of the pigeons from its cage on the porch and had hastily written the message to send by this aerial carrier to Hagar. The message read briefly, "Come at once, dear mother; I need you." She simply signed it, "Esther."

From her lattice window she released her feathered messenger, and with a beating heart she saw the bird wheel twice above the housetop and then dart, high up, swiftly to the west, straight as the arrow flies.

The sheriff and his deputy were not long in reaching Stanley hall. They alighted with a businesslike clatter, and the sheriff clumped up the steps and across the wide, hospitable portico and made the great iron knocker wake the echoes of the silent mansion. With an indicative gesture of his thumb he had sent his deputy to guard the rear.

Joe, the natty and worldly wise colored man servant of the until recently wild young master of Stanley hall, was wondering at the impudent urgency of the clamor that had aroused him as he reached the bottom of the staircase, when he stood stock still, shaken for once out of his usual superior airs and self-possession, to behold his young master, wild eyed and disheveled, rush from the library and seize him, exclaiming as he did so: "Don't open that door! I have killed a man, and they are after me!"

With chattering teeth and shaking knees the erstwhile dandy darky clung for support in the weakness of his fright at the pedestal of the balustrade at the foot of the old colonial staircase.

Still the sheriff hammered at the door, crying stentoriously, "Open in the name of the law!" and still the frightened darky clung to the balustrade, divided in his terror between the awful authority of the law that he was disobeying and in fear of the fate that might befall his young master.

One glance from the low French windows that looked from the library upon the grounds at the back of Stanley hall and Arthur was aware of the watchful deputy, with drawn pistol.

At this juncture the automobile agent from Richmond came with honking horn up the driveway, with one of the first automobiles that had ever essayed the roads of Fairfax. With the agent, who proudly drove the red French racer, was an oily and grimy garage mechanic driving a low, old, but powerful one seated garage handy car, battered and scarred from much hard service, but still strong, speedy, and dependable.

The sheriff hammered and kicked unavailingly at the stout, great white door as these "new fangled contraptions," as he called them, drove up to the portico steps. "I am the sheriff," he explained to the wondering automobile man. "I am after a man for murder, and I summon you to aid me." The taciturn garage mechanic brought a heavy iron jack from his battered old car, and he and the sheriff soon had the stout oak door shattering beneath the battering ram blows they dealt it with this heavy instrument of iron.

As the door gave way Arthur darted from the library, past the still quaking negro in the hallway and into the dining room. He passed through the dining room into the conservatory at its back that overlooked, as did the library, the grounds at the rear of Stanley hall. But here his way was blocked by iron and glass; there was no egress from the conservatory save through the dining room. As he turned to retrace his steps the sheriff, with the frightened automobile man at his back, appeared at the door of the conservatory with leveled revolver and demanded Arthur's surrender. Arthur's reply was to seize a heavy rustic chair and with one swinging, sweeping blow thrust aside the leveled revolver and then smash the heavy glass and the metal frames of the rear wall of the conservatory. He leaped unhurt through the aperture thus made and fled around the corner of the house, followed by a fusillade of shots from the sheriff and his deputy.

At the front of the house stood the two automobiles deserted. The new French racer stood throbbing under power at the portals of Stanley hall.

Arthur jumped into the throbbing new racer. He had little thought when he had ordered it in a fit of reckless extravagance that its first service for him would be in a need like this. He sensed the use of its levers, and in the instinct of fear and self-preservation it may have been chance that aided him, but the machine bounded away on highest speed, and Arthur turned the steering wheel and made the turn to the gateway safely. He gave one glance back and saw the mechanic endeavoring to start the other car, while the sheriff stamped and swore futilely.

Now came the other car in a cloud of dust. On sped pursuer and pursued. Now at the railroad crossing the one armed watchman waves his warning flag. The gates are down, a long freight train is thundering up. At his highest speed Arthur takes the gates, that smash and splinter at the impact of his swift machine. He is gone and the freight train blocks pursuit. Then pride has its fall. Around a bend of the road workmen are digging a great culvert. On one side is a sloping bank of the river. On the other the embankment of the roadbed across which the open culvert cuts. One glance shows Arthur that this way lies death. He will trust the river.

With a mighty effort he turns the steering wheel and the great, plunging auto swerves at the brink of the newly dug culvert and, atilt on two wheels, plows its way through the soft earth of the roadbed on the stream side and hurtles a rocking, ponderous mass of mechanism down the sloping side of the river bank, swifter than it takes to tell.

That eve at early dusk the new risen moon beheld a quiet face floating down the stream. Half submerged, at times the dank body rose slightly to the surface; then it was the moon saw, gleaming on that wave wet breast, the half hidden, half showing jewel, the "charm against harm" of the Stanleys—the diamond from the sky.

AT YOU HAVE SAID ABOUT ESTHER, YOU OR I MUST DIE

SHE SAW THE DOCTOR IN HIS DRESSING GOWN STRETCHED ACROSS THE TABLE

Without the Footlights

by Thomas T. Hoyne

Remorse Gives Courage to Kitty for the Utterance of a "White" Lie Which Preserves the Sweet Illusions of Youth Though She Loses All Herself.

WOMEN get the worst of it in unhappy love affairs. A jealous man aims at his sweetheart; a jealous woman strikes at the cause of her jealousy—a woman again. This is the law, as any police reporter will lay it down with copious citations from infamous cases. Shakspeare proved the truth of it, so far as masculine jealousy is concerned, with "Othello." An unknown playwright—unknown, perhaps, because his play was wrong—might have proved the second allegation with "The Sacrifice" if audiences would have listened.

"The Sacrifice" was a play that provided opportunity for training in every known emotion. It provided, also, an opportunity for Kitty Jordan to make good in a real part. This was the only reason she left New York late in March to go on the road with a Number company. To leave New York was hard enough, but the real, raw, uncapsuled quinine in her departure was bidding good-bye to Jimmy Bashford, a well bred, well financed, well meaning young man who had been in love with Kitty for nearly six months.

With arms around his neck and cheek against his she wept over him at the parting, which took place in private, for Jimmy felt that Kitty was a bit too demonstrative. It pleased him that she was so; but it disturbed him, too. He believed that, in real life, the grand passion should be staged in seclusion. Kitty liked an audience.

After she was gone Jimmy grew lonesome. He longed for Kitty as a spendthrift longs for money. She had been his comrade, and the places where they had dined and laughed together seemed cold and selfish; places where she had talked to him all the intimate shop talk of the stage, a strange, fascinating jargon with which he had become as familiar as any chorus man who walked Broadway. He missed her childish pleasure over gifts he made her. He recalled how she had gone quite wild with delight when he gave her a little electric car, and how they had ridden about in it all night because she could not bear to leave it in a garage.

Seeking solace for his great loneliness Jimmy returned to his own kind. Gradually the little actress became a hazy shadow to him. Then she vanished into transparent air, and early in June—rare month for brides and brassies—he found himself in love with Ethel Priestly, a girl so different from Kitty Jordan that it was impossible for the same masculine mind to think of both of them at the same time; and yet exactly like Kitty in this very respect, for she required all the thought of a masculine mind all the time.

On the first day of their engagement, while it was still a vital secret withheld from an anxiously waiting world, Jimmy and his fiancée came out of the Plaza late in the afternoon. They had been dawdling over a little table pretending to enjoy their tea. Jimmy sniffed the warm, summer odors that swept to his nostrils from waving trees and shrubbery.

"We must have an apartment near the park, Ethel," said he joyously.

"Of course we shall, you dear, queer boy," said Miss Priestly, smiling, as they stood at a corner of Fifth avenue looking at the rushing motor cars drive by in two strong counter currents, with which a policeman struggled at intervals to make a safe fording place.

"Shall we walk through the park?" she added, with a pretty air of presenting some grave question to a king.

They crossed the street and passed through the gate, following the broad driveway along which the motors whirred smoothly and endlessly. Jimmy felt the peace of deep affection. He looked with tolerant superiority upon the philosophers who crowded the benches. He warmed generously to the common lovers who passed them. He gently saved from falling a little girl on rattling roller skates.

"Jimmy," said Miss Priestly, "I'm very happy."

And then she asked him that ever new, ever thrilling question. "Am I really the only girl you ever loved?"

And Jimmy gave that ever convicing answer, "Really and truly," and he meant it.

"There never was anyone else?"

"Never."

"I'm glad," she said, with a satisfied little laugh.

"Don't you understand that there never could be anyone but you, Ethel? It was all arranged long ago—away back at the beginning of things.

He looked eagerly at the profile of his beloved—the straight delicate nose, the clear cut chin, which had in miniature a firmness that suggested martyrdom to an idea or an ideal. All the old pictures had been swept from the screen of his mind—Kitty Jordan, brilliant lights, cabarets, and pounding taxicabs. The film was a new one. It showed quite domestic scenes, shaded lamps, books, easy chairs, and always Ethel and himself doing the same things, caring for the same things in the happiness of perfect harmony. Such is love.

With the startling shock of a cobblestone hurled through a jeweler's plate glass window came a clear voice calling, "Jimmy, O, Jimmy."

Both of them heard, and both of them turned quickly. Kitty Jordan in her little electric coupé was drawing up at the curb. In all her radiant finery she was leaning out of the window unmindful of spectators, her face bright with smiles and eagerness.

"Is she calling you?" cried Ethel aghast. But Jimmy closed his mouth tight. She knew the truth, and the firmness of her chin was emphasized as she turned away from him.

"Jimmy," cried Kitty insistently, "come here." Ownership sounded in her voice. "I just got in. I've been looking all over town for you."

"I don't know what she wants, Ethel," mumbled Jimmy in a panic. "Wait a minute; I'll speak to her."

Miss Priestly, white with anger, looked him out of countenance.

"I hate you," she said, almost with fury. "You—you whited sepulcher. Don't dare to walk with me. I want to be alone."

She left him withered with humiliation beneath her scorching contempt. He stood like a fool, fingering with one hand the brim of his hat which he had reached to take off. And then deep in him, below the wreck of his shattered poise, began to burn a great anger at the cause of his miserable undoing. He strode to the little coupé with quick, aggressive steps."

"What do you mean by calling to me like that?" he cried roughly. "You've made a show of me. You've smashed up everything I care about."

Kitty drew back hurt in every nerve until her whole body ached. She looked at him stupefied; but for only a moment. Then her face flushed red, as understanding flooded her mind. With it came an ever hardening purpose.

"So it's true that you're engaged?" she sneered. "I wouldn't believe it."

"That's strictly my own business," he retorted recklessly, "and has nothing whatever to do with you."

She looked at him steadily and insolently.

"Is that so?" and on the question she leaned forward so suddenly that he took a step backward.

"She doesn't know about us! She'd never marry you if she did! But she's going to know."

Kitty wrenched at the lever under her hand. The coupé shot forward with a jerk, leaving Jimmy angry, bitter, and sick with disgust.

All the joy in the warm evening air had died for him.

He went directly to his rooms, raging and knowing full well that his anger would leave him sore with sorrow. For half an hour he walked his bachelor sanctum like a caged bear that stupidly goes over the same ground again and again hunting for a way out. Three times the telephone bell jingled before he picked up the receiver and gruffly cried, "Hello."

He hoped, against his conception of Kitty's character, that she might want to tell him she would never trouble him or Ethel in the future. But it was not Kitty's voice that came to his ear, although it was a woman's. Neither was it Ethel's, but it brought him news of her. Shocking news, too. She had been struck by a motor car near the park and had been taken to the hospital. She wanted him to know.

His ride to the hospital in a taxicab seemed like those "races with Death" described in many-editioned newspapers. He was on the sidewalk before the chauffeur could glance at the meter. Up the low steps he stumbled in his haste. As he reached for the door it opened, and Kitty Jordan, with trembling lips, stood facing him.

"I brought her here in my car," she said, detaining him with her hand as he tried to pass her.

All of Kitty's art must have called to her, for she held him waiting on her word as if she were playing her part in "The Sacrifice." Some flavor of the playwright's emotion which she had poured out nightly for twelve weeks upon art famished audiences in one night stands must have clung to her.

"She's not badly hurt," she said, slowly. "But there'll be a terrible scar. I told her all about you, Jimmy. I said you were my best friend—had helped me like a brother. I lied for you, Jimmy; but I made her believe me. Go up to her."

She did not want to hear the gratitude that shone in his eyes and ran from him down the steps. No art could give her courage to tell him whose car it was that struck Miss Priestly down.

YOUNG AMERICANS

Conducted by Terry Ramsaye

THE TRAIL OF THE BOY SCOUTS

The most immediate need of The Boy Scouts of America is for an adequate number of scoutmasters—the men who assume charge and guidance of the troop activities of the scouts.

In the City of Chicago alone there are now places for not less than 25 scoutmasters to direct boys now belonging to the organization. Further, there are not less than 700 boys waiting to join, just because efficient scoutmasters cannot be found.

This is a big opportunity for big brothers, fathers and the friends of boys generally. Those who are interested in this phase of the work should communicate with the Boy Scout headquarters at 425 New York Life building, Chicago, or 200 Fifth avenue, New York, for territory outside of Chicago district.

THE BOY BUILDERS.

OUT on the Desplaines river west of Chicago, near the site of a famous Indian camping ground, a whole army of Boy Scouts has built a remarkable camp. This camp, designated Week End camp, is a place where boys from the crowded city can go for outings. A 5 cent car fare takes them into the country in easy hiking distance from the camp.

The camp is the work of the boys, aided only by Scoutmaster Spies. In the space of hardly two weeks the camp has been erected and practically completed. A building that would have cost by contract construction about $1,200 has been put up at a total cost, including even the last drop of paint, of $450.

"And the great big idea back of it," remarked Mr. Spies, "is that, having built the camp themselves, the boys will value it more and take care of it. Any boy who cuts his initials on the walls of this camp might as well leave the country at once. These youngsters by the business of making things with their hands are receiving some idea of the value of labor. While the camp is of great value to the boys whom it serves, its greater value has been in the making of it. No less than 150 troops have been represented among the builders, taking in perhaps more than fifty boys."

The camp building is intended as a sort of administration building and official center for the tent village that will surround it on the scouts' fourteen acre tract through the summer season.

A short distance away from the camp is the Desplaines river, where the boys have canoes, a motor boat, and rowboats, all made by their own hands.

The force of Mr. Spies' argument about the value which boys put on the things they have made themselves is illustrated in a canoe which the boys of the camp have in service. This canoe was built by the boys five years ago and today it is in as good condition as the day it was completed.

At this camp boys who have never before been off the asphalt of the brick walled city cañons are learning the names of the birds and trees and flowers, filling their lungs with the breath of the woods, and acquiring their first coat of healthy tan.

The camp is not necessarily for poor boys—it is just for boys, regardless of whether they chance to be poor or not. It happens that because there are more poor folks than rich folks at least half of the boys who belong to the Boy Scouts of America come from families in most modest circumstances.

There is a pronounced tint of discipline in this Desplaines camp, but, curiously enough, the uniforms and regulations do not create that somewhat oppressive strait-laced atmosphere of the military camp.

The scoutmasters have arrived at a scheme that works out into practical self-government for the boys. The big half open grove is as clean as a patch of Lincoln park and as well cared for as the brightest spot in Central park. Papers are not allowed to blow about. The garbage is promptly disposed of and the paths and trails even avoid the patches of wild flowers that illumine the grass carpet under the trees.

One of the boy workers and a view of the camp which the boys are building as an administration center for the week end camps of the summer on the Desplaines river.

"Here, you kitchen detail, beat it to town and get that milk and bread!" the scout cook sings out. "And don't lie down to sleep in the grass on your way back, either," he adds in admonition.

The fresh country air and unwonted exercises fill the city youngsters with unlimited capacities for food and sleep.

The sound of hammers rattles on the roof of the camp building in a staccato answer to the drumming of a yellowhammer or golden shafted flicker calling his mate on a dead limb tomtom in the big oak.

"Hold on there, you roofers!"

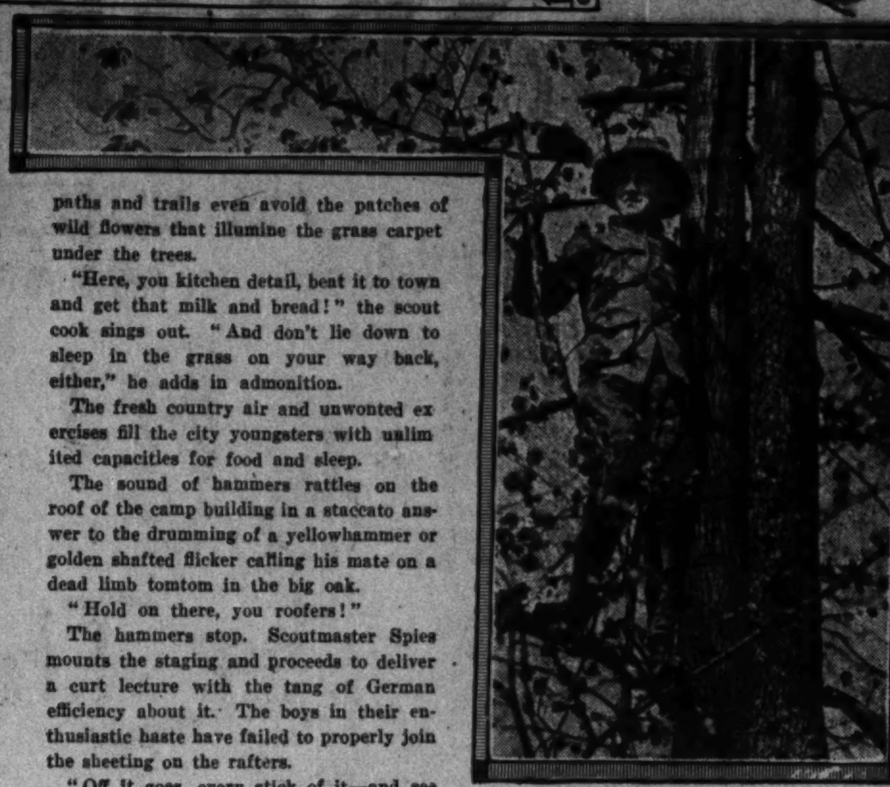
The hammers stop. Scoutmaster Spies mounts the staging and proceeds to deliver a curt lecture with the tang of German efficiency about it. The boys in their enthusiastic haste have failed to properly join the sheeting on the rafters.

"Off it goes, every stick of it—and see that you get in on right!" This sternly Then "Hurrah!" from the scoutmaster, who always makes it a point to finish with a smile even his sternest speeches.

"The Trail's" photographer, camera in hand, spots a boy that looks like good "copy."

"Wait a minute, youngster; take this pose for me."

"Have to get a detail from Mr. Spies; I'm workin'," the boy replies. Whereupon Mr. Douglas and his camera repair to headquarters in dutiful compliance with camp discipline.



Boy Scout in the "signal tree" at camp to send a message across the woods to a distant "outlook" on the edge of the town.

About this camp a baseball diamond for the scout camp series, tennis courts, and a river harbor are being laid out. There will be a procession of city boys going to and from this camp all summer. There will be no dull days.

It's a gay and busy life in the scout camps. There is a camp within reach of every scout, and every boy of eligible age can join the Boy Scouts of America.

My Adventures as a Spy

BY SIR ROBERT BADEN-POWELL

Founder of the Boy Scouts

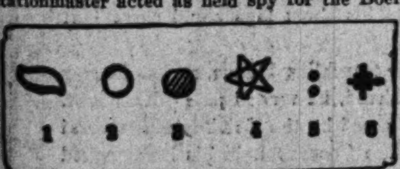
EARLY in the present war the German field spies had their secret code of signs, so that by drawing sketches of cattle in different colors and sizes on gates, etc., they conveyed information to each other of the strength and direction of different bodies of hostile troops in the neighborhood.

As a rule, these are residential spies, who have lived for months or years as small tradesmen, etc., in the towns and villages now included in the theater of war. On the arrival of the German invaders they have chalked on their doors, "Not to be destroyed. Good people here," and have done it for some of their neighbors also in order to divert suspicion. In their capacity of naturalized inhabitants they are in position, of course, to gain valuable tactical information for the commanders of the troops. And their different ways of communicating it are more than ingenious.

In some cases both spies and commanders have maps ruled off in small squares. The watchful spy signals to his commander, "Enemy's cavalry halted behind wood in square E 15," and very soon a salvo of shells visits this spot. A woman spy was caught signaling with an electric flash lamp. Two different men (one of them an old one legged stonebreaker at the roadside) were caught with field telephones hidden on them with wire coiled round their bodies. Shepherds with lanterns went about on the downs at night dodging the lanterns about in various ways which did not seem altogether necessary for finding sheep. Wireless telegraphs were set up to look like supports to iron chimneys.

In the South African campaign a Dutch stationmaster acted as field spy for the Boers for a short time. It was only a short time. His town and station were captured by my force, and, in order to divert suspicion, he cut and pulled down the telegraph wires, all except one, which was left in working order. By this wire he sent to the Boer headquarters all the information he could get about our forces and plans. Unfortunately, we had a party of men tapping the wire, and were able to read all his messages, and to confront him with them shortly afterwards.



The gun code for the concealed fort map. 1—15 cm gun. 2—Howitzers. 3—Q. F. disappearing guns. 4—12 cm guns. 5—Machine guns. 6—Searchlight.

Another stationmaster, in our own territory, acted as spy to the enemy before the war began by employing enemies as gangers and platelayers along the line with a view to the destruction of bridges and culverts as soon as war was declared. There was also found in his office a code by which the different arms of the service were designated in terms of timber for secretly telegraphing information. Thus: Beams meant brigades, timbers meant batteries, logs meant guns, scantlings meant battalions, joists meant squadrons, and planks meant companies.

Except in the case of the traitor spy, one does not quite understand why a spy should necessarily be treated worse than any other combatant, nor why his occupation should be looked upon as contemptible, for, whether in peace or war, his work is of an exacting and dangerous kind. It is intensely exciting, and though in some cases it brings a big reward, the best spies are unpaid men who are doing it for the love of the thing, and as a really effective step to gaining something valuable for their country and for their side.

The plea put forward by the German spy, Lieut. Carl Lody, at his courtmartial in London, was that "he would not cringe for mercy. He was not ashamed of anything that he had done; he was in honor bound not to give away the names of those who had employed him on this mission; he was not paid for it, he did it for his country's good, and he knew that he carried his life in his hands in doing so. Many a Briton was probably doing the same for Britain."

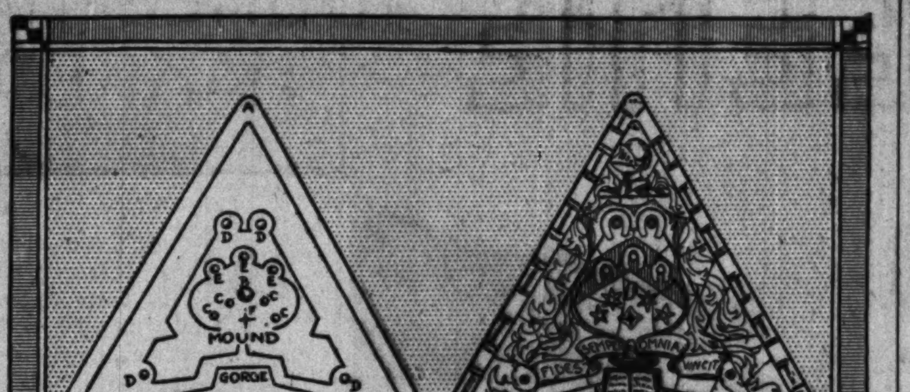
He was even spoken of in our house of commons as being "a patriot who had died for his country as much as any soldier who fell in the field."

To be a really effective spy, a man has to be endowed with a strong spirit of self-sacrifice, courage, and self-control, with the power of acting a part, quick at observation and deduction, and blessed with good health and nerve of exceptional quality. A certain amount of scientific training is of value where a man has to be able to take the angles of a fort, or to establish the geological formation, say, of the middle island under the Forth bridge, which was shown by Graves to be readily adaptable for explosion purposes.

For any one who is tired of life, the thrilling life of a spy should be the finest recuperator!

Quite another class of spy is the traitor who gives away the secrets of his own country. For him, of course, there is no excuse. Fortunately, the Briton is not as a rule of a corruptible character, and many foreign spies in England have been discovered through their attempts to bribe officers or men to give away secrets.

On the other hand, we hear frequently of foreign soldiers falling victims to such temptation, and eventually being discovered.



Here is one of the methods by which I concealed the plans of the forts I made. First of all, I would sketch the plan as shown in picture (at left), giving the strength and positions of the various guns as shown below: A—Kaponiers with machine guns. B—15 cm gun cupolas. C—12 cm gun cupolas. D—Quick firing, disappearing guns. E—Howitzer cupolas. F—Searchlight.

Having done this I would consider the best method of concealing my plans. In this case I decided to transform the sketch into that of a stained glass window. Decorations signify the sizes and positions of the guns (at right).

Cases have only recently come to light in Austria where officers were willing to sell information as regards a number of secret blockhouses which were built on the frontier of Bukowina last year. Details of them got into the hands of another power within a few days of the designs being made.

The espionage system of the Germans far exceeds that of any other country in its extent, cost, and organization. It was thoroughly exposed after the war with France in 1870, when it was definitely shown that the German government had an organization of over 20,000 paid informers stationed in France, and controlled by one man, Stieber, for both political and military purposes.

To such completeness were their machinations carried that when Jules Favre came to Versailles to treat about the surrender of Paris with the headquarter staff of the German army he was met at the station by a carriage, of which the coachman was a German spy, and was taken to lodge in the house which was the actual headquarters of the spy department. Stieber himself was the valet, recommended to him as "a thoroughly trustworthy servant." Stieber availed himself of his position to go through his master's pockets and dispatch cases daily, collecting most valuable data and information for Bismarck.

Somehow, on the surface, suspicion of the German spy methods seemed to have subsided since that date, although at the time widely known throughout Europe. But their methods have been steadily elaborated and carried into practice ever since, not in France alone but in all the countries on the continent, and also in Great Britain.

POPULAR SCIENCE

BUILDING ELECTRIC BATTLESHIP.

AS an important departure in naval design the United States battleship California will be driven by electric power.

The great ship will carry the usual coal-steam power equipment, but the power will be converted into electricity through dynamos and delivered to motors, which will drive the propellers.

One important advantage in this design is the elimination of the long heavy steel shafting which ordinarily transmits the energy of the turbines or engines to the screws that drive the ship. Along with elimination of this frequent source of trouble and continuous source of friction with loss of power is a gain in power efficiency.

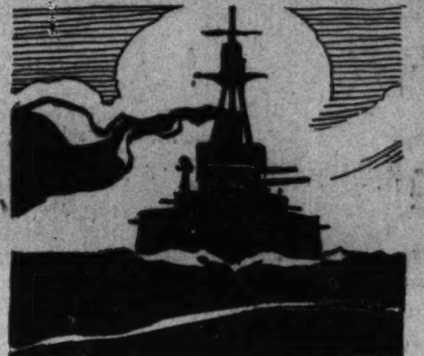
The superdreadnaught California will be added to the navy in about two years. It is to be constructed at the Brooklyn navy yard and will cost about $7,000,000.

Electricity in the service of the navy has been made to do about everything aboard ship from turning turrets to drying dishes, but now it is to be put to the major task of driving the vessel.

The plan, while relatively new to naval design, is not entirely new to marine architects. In fact, Chicago has a fireboat, the Graeme Stewart, which is propelled by electrically driven motors, which are in turn actuated by a steam-electric power plant on board. This arrangement, however, grew out of the necessity for a flexible power stream which might be diverted to the big rotary pump supplying the vessel's fire fighting apparatus.

The naval officials have been encouraged to this step in the building of the world's first electrically driven dreadnaught by the successful operation of the new collier Jupiter, the first naval vessel of the type ever built.

This move, following closely upon the United States' authorization of the construction of oil burning battleships, has given the nation a sort of leadership which is attracting the attention of all the powers of the world. In this connection it is interesting to recall that the United States was the first nation to design the superdreadnaught type, but that England was the first to build it. There is something of a parallel with the history of the war aeroplane and the submarine.



Particular interest attaches to the coming efficiency tests of the California in view of the mechanical advantage gained in the nonreversing, continuous motion of the power plant, the action of reversing being accomplished in the controller boxes through which current is delivered to the driving motors. That will tend to eliminate trouble in the blading of the turbines, which, in direct connected installations where the driving turbine is affected by reversal of the ship's motion, have been subject to constant damage and heavy repair expense. Also the increased speed at which the turbines may be driven because of the electrical transmission system will give an added efficiency. As is well known, turbines are highly efficient only at their top speeds.

The California will carry a twin set of power plants, each driving one pair of the four screws.

Saccharin has been widely condemned as dangerous in food, but late evidence tends to show that it is harmless as a substitute for sugar. The referee board of the United States government, which investigated the alleged harmfulness, finally decided that in small quantities up to 4.6 grains daily it produced no injury, but that several times this quantity, especially if continued for months, might affect digestion. As this quantity, however, is equivalent to 550 times as much sugar, or 5.8 ounces, not more than 4.6 grains is likely to be consumed. A report by R. O. Neumann of the German Institute of Hygiene, covers a long series of experiments, showing that fifty-seven grains of saccharin daily—equivalent to nearly three and one-half pounds of sugar—can be taken without symptoms indicating harm, and that, therefore, saccharin is quite safe for use in food. As a concentrated sweetening it forms a valued part of the equipment of the German soldier.

All experts on exercises for boys agree that the more exercise and the less conventionality about athletics for boys the better. A favorite for boys in camp and boy organizations is the army "setting-up" drill.

Three of the fifteen regular exercises of this drill are shown here. They require no apparatus and very little room.

INTERESTING BOYS

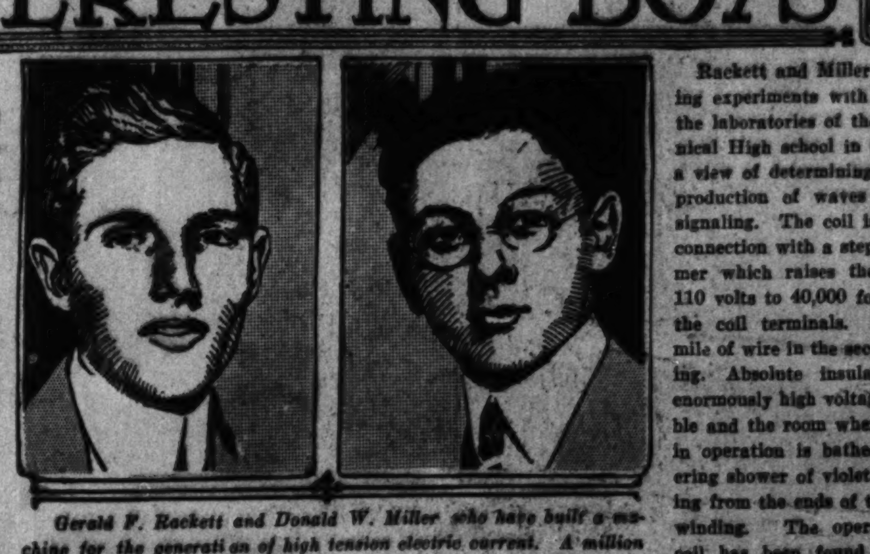
MAKE OWN LIGHTNING.

WHEN Ben Franklin wanted to investigate lightning he went out and captured some of it with a kite. In this period of progress we have two boys who have set out to make their own lightning to order.

Gerald F. Rackett and Donald W. Miller, high school experimenters, have completed a Tesla high frequency coil which takes current at the ordinary commercial power lighting voltage and transforms it into artificial lightning at between 450,000 and 500,000 volts, producing a spark across a gap of about twenty-four inches.

Most boys are familiar with the ordinary induction coil of the type used to produce the spark on gasoline engines, gas lighters, and similar devices. This form of coil has a soft iron core, wound with a coarse wire in the primary winding, with a fine wire winding superimposed upon it. The Tesla coil—named after the Italian inventor and electrical research expert—has no core, and the primary winding is of an exceedingly heavy conductor insulated by air gap and at a considerable distance from the secondary winding, which is contained within the primary.

A few of these coils have been made—certainly no other device of equal capacity has been turned out by boy electricians. Tesla has such a coil in his laboratory capable of producing a spark twenty-two feet in length.



Gerald F. Rackett and Donald W. Miller who have built a machine for the generation of high tension electric current. A million volts or so are nothing at all to them.

Rackett and Miller are conducting experiments with their coil in the laboratories of the Lane Technical High school in Chicago with a view of determining its value in production of waves for wireless signaling. The coil is operated in connection with a step-up transformer which raises the commercial 110 volts to 40,000 for delivery to the coil terminals. There is a mile of wire in the secondary winding. Absolute insulation of the enormously high voltage is impossible and the room where the coil is in operation is bathed in a quivering shower of violet sparks flaming from the ends of the secondary winding. The operation of the coil has been found to seriously disturb the workings of the wireless sets in the offices of the school's radio association. These same young men have set about the building of an electrically operated moving picture projecting machine, modeled after the biggest and most complicated professional machine in use in the big theaters. Their past performances give assurance of success. They estimate that it will require all of their spare time for two years to make this machine.

The Speaking Bird is found.

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS.

BY DONAHEY

SYNOPSIS OF THE TALKING BIRD.

The two elder sisters of the sultana of Persia become jealous of their royal sister and steal her babies, two boys and a girl, as soon as they are born. The sisters set each baby afloat in a basket on a canal, and all are found and adopted by the governor of the sultan's gardens. After they are grown an old woman tells the princess of three marvels, a talking bird, a singing tree, and the yellow water, and the brothers determine to get these for their sister, the eldest setting out in search of them. Before his departure he gives his sister a knife, telling her that as long as the blade remains bright he will be safe, but if a stain appears he will be dead. Some time after his departure a stain of blood appears on the blade.

PRINCE BALMAN, after bidding his brother and sister good-by, traveled straight toward the east. On the twentieth day he met a horrible looking old man sitting near the road. His hair was snow white, and his beard hung down to his feet. His finger nails were long and sharp, and for clothes he wore a sort of shirt made from twisted grass. On his head was a broad, flat hat which threw a deep shadow over his face.

Remembering the old woman's directions to ask questions of the first person he met, the prince drew rein and shouted, "Good day, sir."

The old man tried to speak, but his words were so mumbled that Prince Balman could scarcely hear him.

Jumping from the saddle, the prince tied his horse to a tree, and, approaching the old man, said, "Good sir, your beard is so thick and heavy I can scarcely hear your voice. Let me cut some of the hair away, for you look more like a bear than a man, and, besides, I have a great many questions to ask."

The old man nodded his head, and the prince, producing a pair of shears, soon cut away the heavy beard.

"You now look quite handsome," cried the prince, stepping back and surveying his work.

The old man seemed pleased with the compliment, and, motioning the prince to sit down, he said: "You have been very kind to me, sir. All the people who have passed have never offered to do anything for me, although all of them have asked favors of me. Now, if there is anything that I can do for you I will be very glad to do it."

The prince then told the old man of the old woman who had informed his sister of the speaking bird and the other wonderful things.

"The old woman's directions were," cried the prince, "to travel twenty days toward the east and on the twentieth day to ask the first person I saw where I should find these wonderful treasures. Now, as this is the twentieth day and as you are the first person I have seen, I ask you where I am to find the speaking bird, the singing tree, and the yellow water."

"Ah, my son," said the old man, sadly shaking his head, "you had better give up this mad hunt. If you do not, you will surely go to your death. I have directed a great many young men to the place where the treasures are to be found, but none of them has ever returned. I did not warn the others, but as you have been kind to me, I ask you again, if you value your life, do not continue the search."

"I thank you for your kind advice," said the prince, "but I have firmly made up my mind not to return to my brother and sister until I have secured the treasures."

"Well," said the old man, taking a bowl from a bag that lay at his feet and placing it in the prince's hand, "if you will not listen to my advice, I will tell you. When you have mounted your horse take the bowl I have given you and throw it before you. It will begin to roll rapidly. You must follow, being careful to keep it in sight. It will lead you to the foot of a great mountain, where it will stop, but you must climb the mountain. As you climb higher and higher you will notice a great many large stones. You will hear a great cry of voices screaming at you and taunting you. They will hurl vile names at you, and you will hear footsteps coming up behind you. But, whatever you do, don't look back. If you escape this danger, keep on until you have come to the top of the mountain, where you will see a cage in which is the speaking bird. Ask the bird where you will find the singing tree and the yellow water, and it will tell you. That is all I have to say, and if you follow my advice no harm will come to you. But, remember, do not look back, or all will be lost."

Prince Balman thanked the old man and threw the bowl on the ground. It began to roll at a great speed, and, putting spurs to his horse, he galloped after it, and soon disappeared from view.

When Prince Perviz and the princess saw the stains of blood upon their brother's knife they were filled with horror and grieved for some time, for they knew that Prince Balman was dead. Prince Perviz, anxious to get the treasure and to find out what had happened to his brother, now made up his mind to take the journey. The princess tried to persuade him not to make the dangerous trip, but despite her entreaties he was determined to go. As he was about to set out on the journey he gave to his sister a necklace and told her that as long as the beads were loose upon the string all would be well with him, but if the beads stuck and could not be moved she would know that he was dead.

Prince Perviz traveled for twenty days. On the twentieth day the first person he met was the old man his brother had seen. The prince questioned the old man and found that his brother had been there and had gone on up the mountain in search of the treasures. The old man give the prince a bowl with the instructions for finding the talking bird, and, throwing the bowl before him, Prince Perviz followed it, disappearing down the same path his brother had taken.

It happened that shortly after Prince Perviz had disappeared down the path the princess, sitting at home and thinking of her brother and what he was doing, brought out the beads to see if all was well with him.

The beads moved freely when she touched them, but as she held them in her hand they suddenly became fastened to the string, and she then knew that her brother was dead. The princess did not give herself up to useless weeping, as some girls might have done, but determined to learn the fate of her brothers. She dressed herself in one of Prince Perviz's suits and followed in the direction the two princes had taken. On the twentieth day she came to the old man sitting by the roadside. Riding up to him, the princess described to him her two lost brothers and asked the old man if he had seen them.

"Yes," answered the old man, looking sadly at the princess, "I have seen them. In spite of my warning they have followed the fatal footsteps of all who have searched for the treasures."

The princess asked him which way her brothers had gone, and for a long time the old man would not tell her, for he knew that she was a woman, in spite of her disguise, and that she was not strong enough to climb the mountain. The princess would not be put off, and finally the old man placed a bowl in her hand with the same instructions he had given her brothers.

"No matter what you hear," shouted the old man as the princess rode off after the rolling bowl, "don't look back."

The bowl rolled faster and faster, until it fairly spun over the ground, and it was all the princess could do to keep it in sight. At last the bowl stopped rolling in front of a narrow path which led up into the mountain. The princess had advanced along the path only a few steps when she heard some one calling her name, and just as she was about to turn around she remembered the old man's warning and kept straight ahead.

She heard footsteps sneaking quietly up behind her, and a voice screamed, "Kill her! Kill her!" Trembling with fear, the princess kept on her way.

As she climbed higher and higher the voices grew louder and made such hideous sounds that the blood ran cold in her veins and a great fear seemed to freeze her heart. In spite of the old man's advice, she felt as if she could not stand it another minute, but must turn and run. Suddenly it occurred to her that by putting her fingers in her ears she would not hear so much of the terrible din of voices. In this way she soon passed the great noise, and presently all grew quiet about her.

Soon she drew near the top of the mountain, and hanging to the tree she saw the cage of the talking bird. As she stepped up to the cage the bird suddenly looked past her down the mountain with startled eyes and in a loud voice he screamed, "Princess, look, look! They are killing your brothers!"

(To be continued next Sunday.)

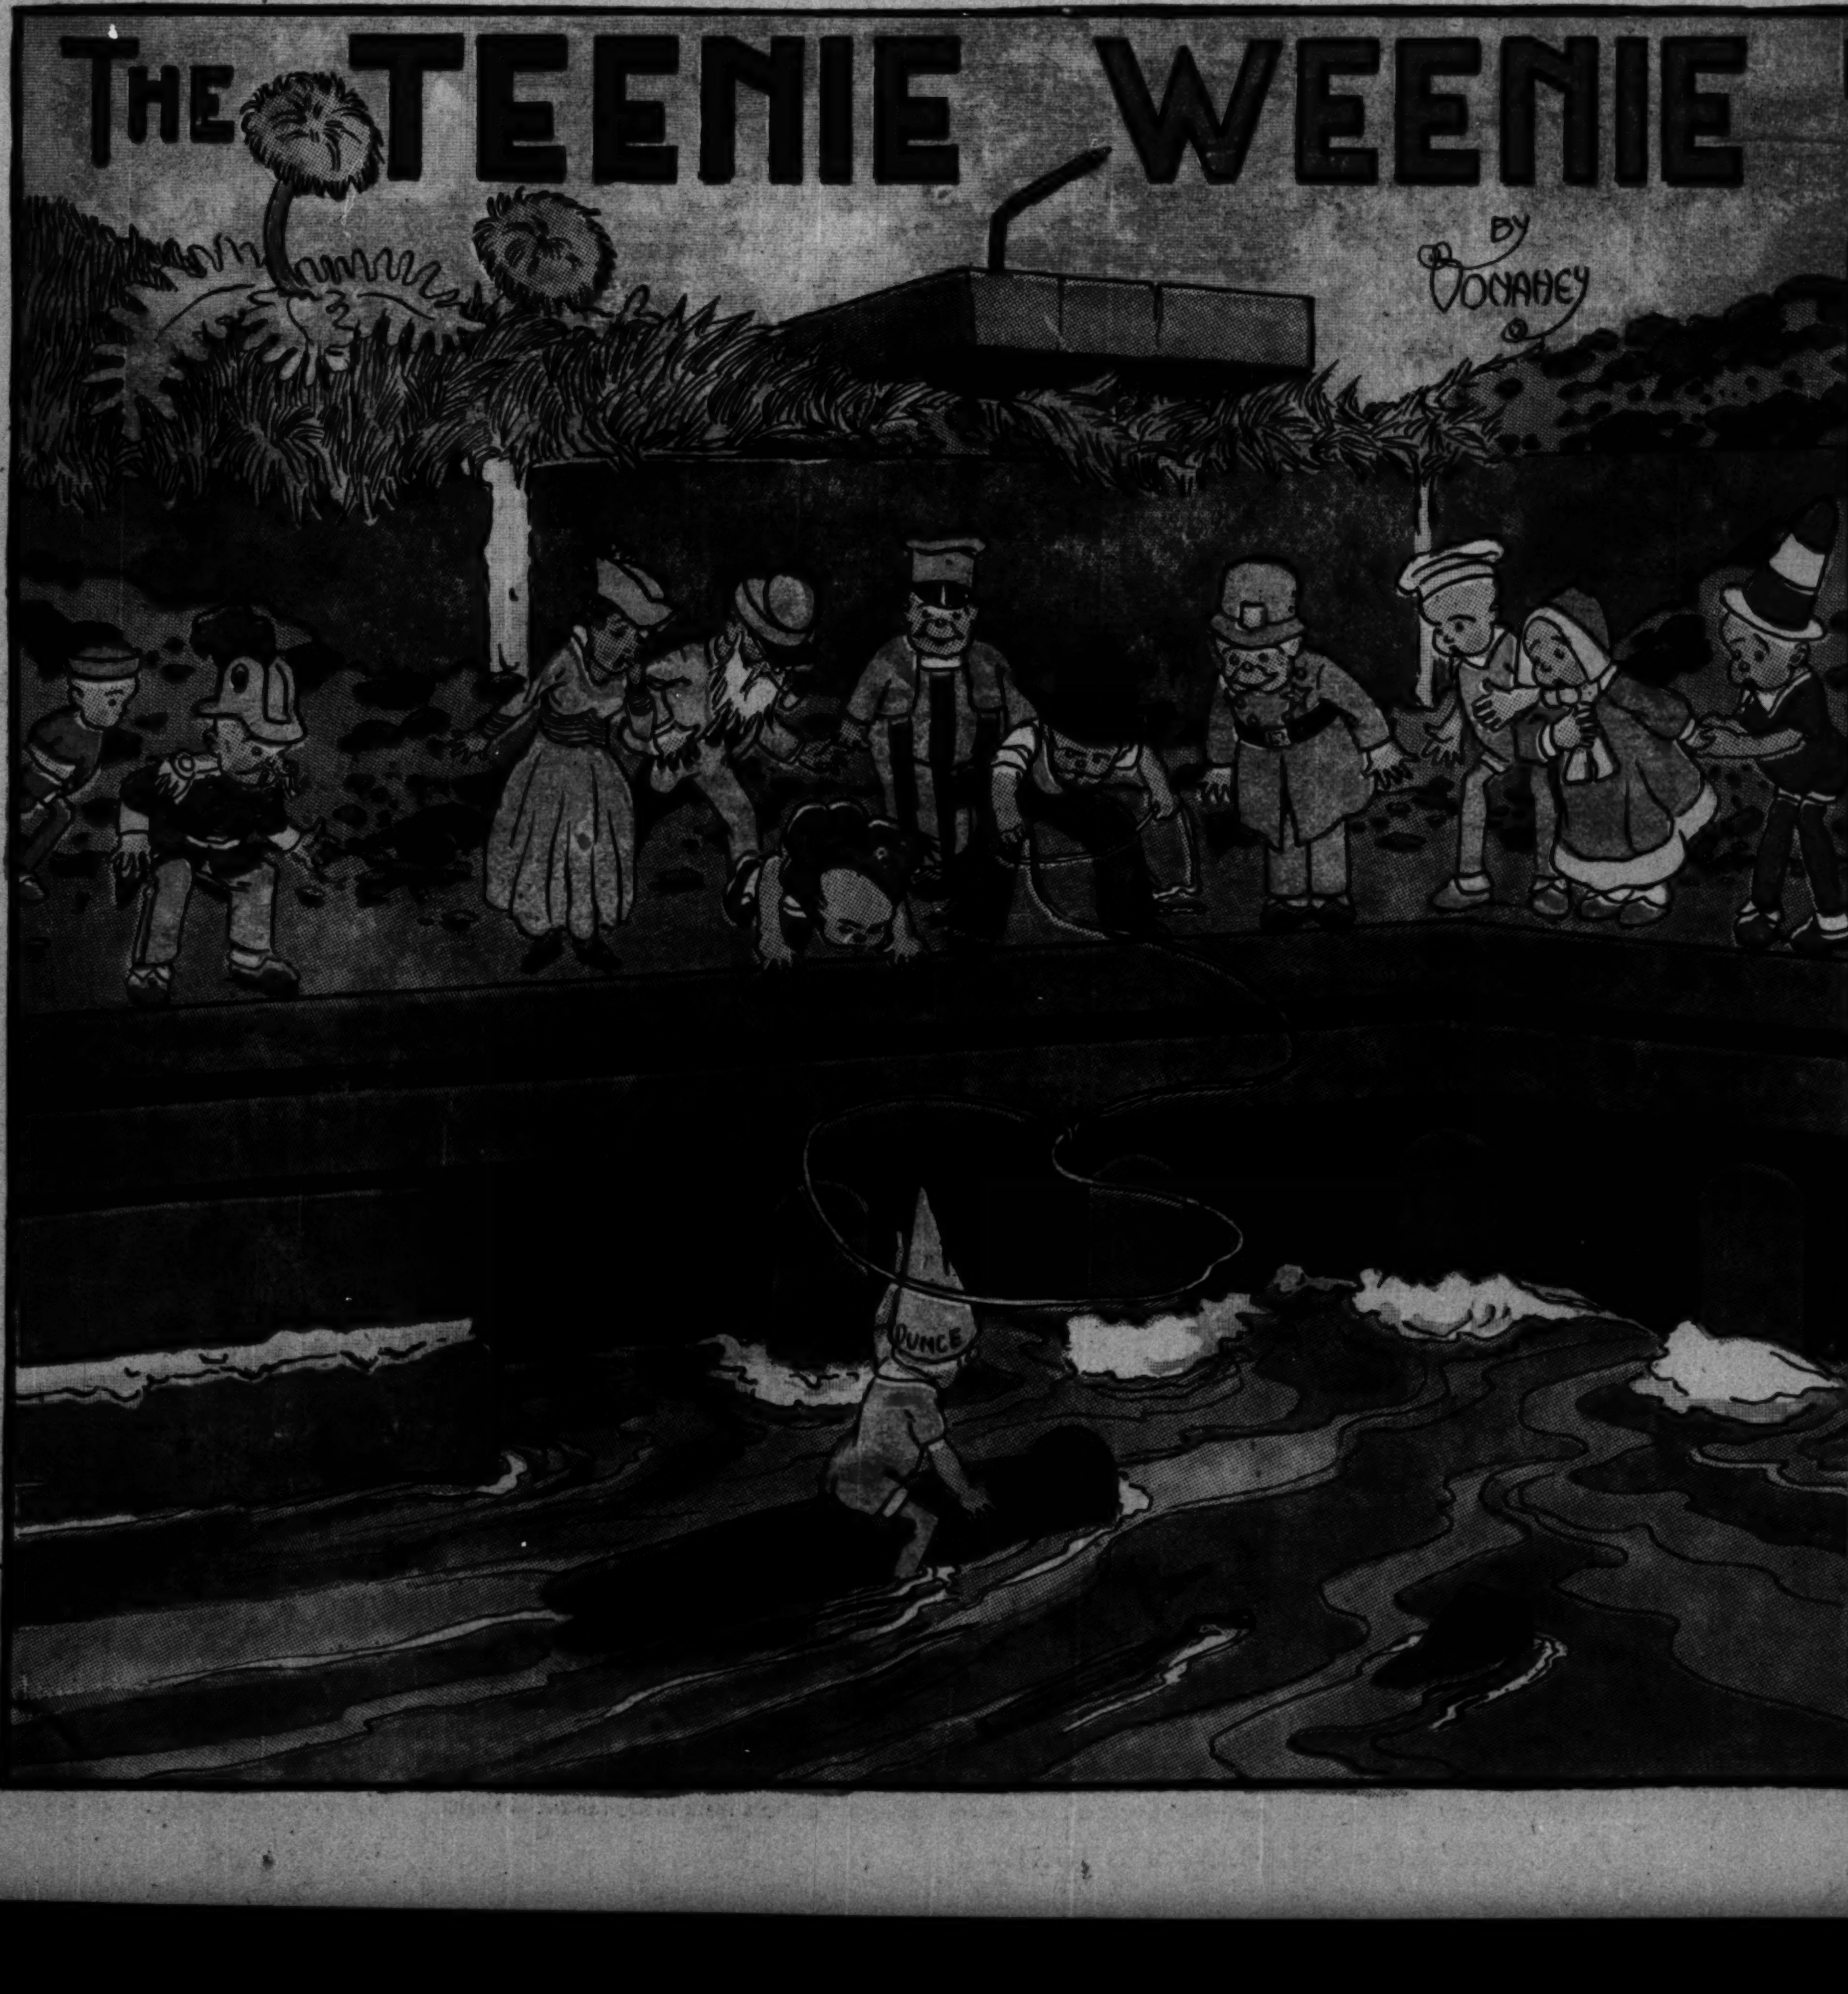
THE TEENIE WEENIE

DUNCE HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

BY DONAHEY



"MY, BUT that's a hard rain," remarked the Old Soldier, as he watched the rain drops splash against the sitting room window of the Teenie Weenie house.

"Say, fellows," yelled the Dunce, dancing up and down the room so gayly as to almost bounce a Teenie Weenie vase from the mantel, "when the rain stops, let's all go out wading."

"Yes—yes—let's go wading," cried several of the other Teenie Weenies, grabbing the Dunce and dancing around with him.

Presently the rain stopped, and most of the little people hurried out of doors. The Dunce and several of the children pulled off their shoes and stockings and began to splash about in the water.

"Say, dear," said the Teenie Weenie lover, putting his arms around his little sweetheart, "let's go over to the sewer and watch the water pour down there, will you?"

"Yes, I'd just love to," cried the Teenie Weenie sweetheart, and very soon they had made their way over to the drain. They sat down on the edge of the sewer and watched the yellow muddy water as it rushed by.

"How perfectly awful it would be to fall in there," shuddered the little sweetheart as she watched the swirling water.

"Look—look!" cried the lover, jumping to his feet and pointing wildly up the gutter.

On the raging water, sitting astride a clothes pin, floated the Dunce, being carried to a certain death. Instantly the lover jumped to his feet and as fast as his short legs could carry him ran for help.

Nearer and nearer floated the trembling Dunce, and as he saw the great yawning black sewer ahead, he turned pale with fright. Suddenly the lover appeared, followed by the Cowboy and several of the other Teenie Weenies. The Cowboy held his lasso coiled in his hand. Throwing it over the Dunce's head, the Cowboy pulled him from the clothes pin, just as it shot down into the sewer.

"How did it happen?" the Teenie Weenies asked the dripping Dunce as he was pulled to safety.

"Why—I—I—found the clothes pin and was riding it around the water, and—and—it got caught in the c-c-current, and I couldn't get off when I wanted to, 'cause the water was too swift, and—and—then you saved me," stammered the Dunce.

"O dear me, how perfectly dreadful," cried the Lady of Fashion, with tears of sympathy in her lovely eyes.

"You can bet I won't ride any more clothes pins," cried the Dunce as he was walked off to be put into dry clothes. "And—and—I think the Cowboy is a hero and ought to have a life saving medal, I do."

"So do we all," cried the Cook, as the Teenie Weenies cheered the blushing Cowboy.

1915 Bathing Suits Extreme in Cut and Startling in Color

Says Louise James

Drawing by MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

Bathing suits this season might be divided into two classes, those that are for display and those that are for use. The former are vivid in coloring and daring in cut. The latter are delightful in shade and charming in design. Whether you are a conservative or a radical, in your tastes sartorial, you may be prettily and becomingly attired in your 1915 bathing costume. Following current styles in other lines, bathing suits are short and full of skirt, scant of sleeve, and boast a waistline anywhere desired. It may be high, low, normal, or again, may not be at all—for the bathing suit with no waistline at all is one of fashion's newest whims.

NEPTUNE'S domain promises to be more popular than ever this summer, and the costumes therefore are already avowedly daring in color and extreme in cut. Besides this, they are all embracing in the wide gamut of styles they run. No matter what cherished fancy of fashion you have, you may incorporate it in your 1915 bathing suit and rate yourself promptly as most properly attired.

Before deciding on any special style and any particular goods, however, you must frankly answer the question of whether or not you want your costume for purposes of display or for those of use. For this season there is a distinct line drawn between the two. Women who bathe in Lake Michigan waters do not appreciate this difference as much as those who indulge in the sea bath. Many women have a genuine horror of a salt bath, and the promenade suit has become a custom not to be disregarded.

These suits which are more or less for show, though an occasional dip in them is by no means impossible, are really fantastic. They are fantastic in color, fantastic in material, and fantastic in line. Other adjectives might be employed to vary their descriptin, but none is so utterly apropos. Because all bathing suit skirts have grown short and full to conform to the short full skirt along other lines, these are exaggeratedly so. Because the sleeves have grown scant, their sleeves are allowed practically to disappear. And because the bathing suit of the moment may have a waist line high, normal, or low, in moyen age effect, they have no waist line at all, but fall straight from the shoulders in chemiselike simplicity, and then stop considerably above the knees, flaunting trouser effects below.

Since the length of the skirt has been shortened the increased revelation of the undergarment has resulted, and this season, instead of a bloomer effect, the newest suits are shown cut like a boy's trouser leg, plenty wide through the knee for comfort, and finished with a simple hem. This trousers idea is usually carried out where the bathing suit is cut on the Russian order, the skirt and blouse in one piece and the belt placed low, and is especially becoming to the slender woman.

For a suit of this sort taffeta is the most satisfactory material. Black, of course, is the prevailing color, but this fact is by no means prohibitive of other shades, if other shades are preferred. Dark blue is well liked by many people and tete de negre brown and dull green are quite possible colors this season. A brilliant red is also attractive for the young and particularly adopted by those who indulge in sand promenades rather than real water dips.

Plaids, checks, and stripes are all to figure, and when these materials are used conjunctively with plain goods the effect is by no means too startling for the woman of refined tastes to enjoy. There are pompadour and Dresden designs that appear in taffeta, satin, and foulard materials, and in some of the novelty silks also, which serve prettily for trimming if they are not incorporated into the bathing costume as a whole.

Perhaps one of the newest bathing suits offered this season is one which is not entirely different from that worn by the masculine members of the family. It may be of silk jersey or fine wool; has knee trousers, a shirt effect, a round neck, and extremely wide armholes. This model is not very different from that of the Annette Kellerman variety, which is built on the combination order and intended for women with their own bathing beaches or who bathe where mixed bathing is not indulged in. Mohair, taffeta, and satin duchesse are all fine material for this type of suit.

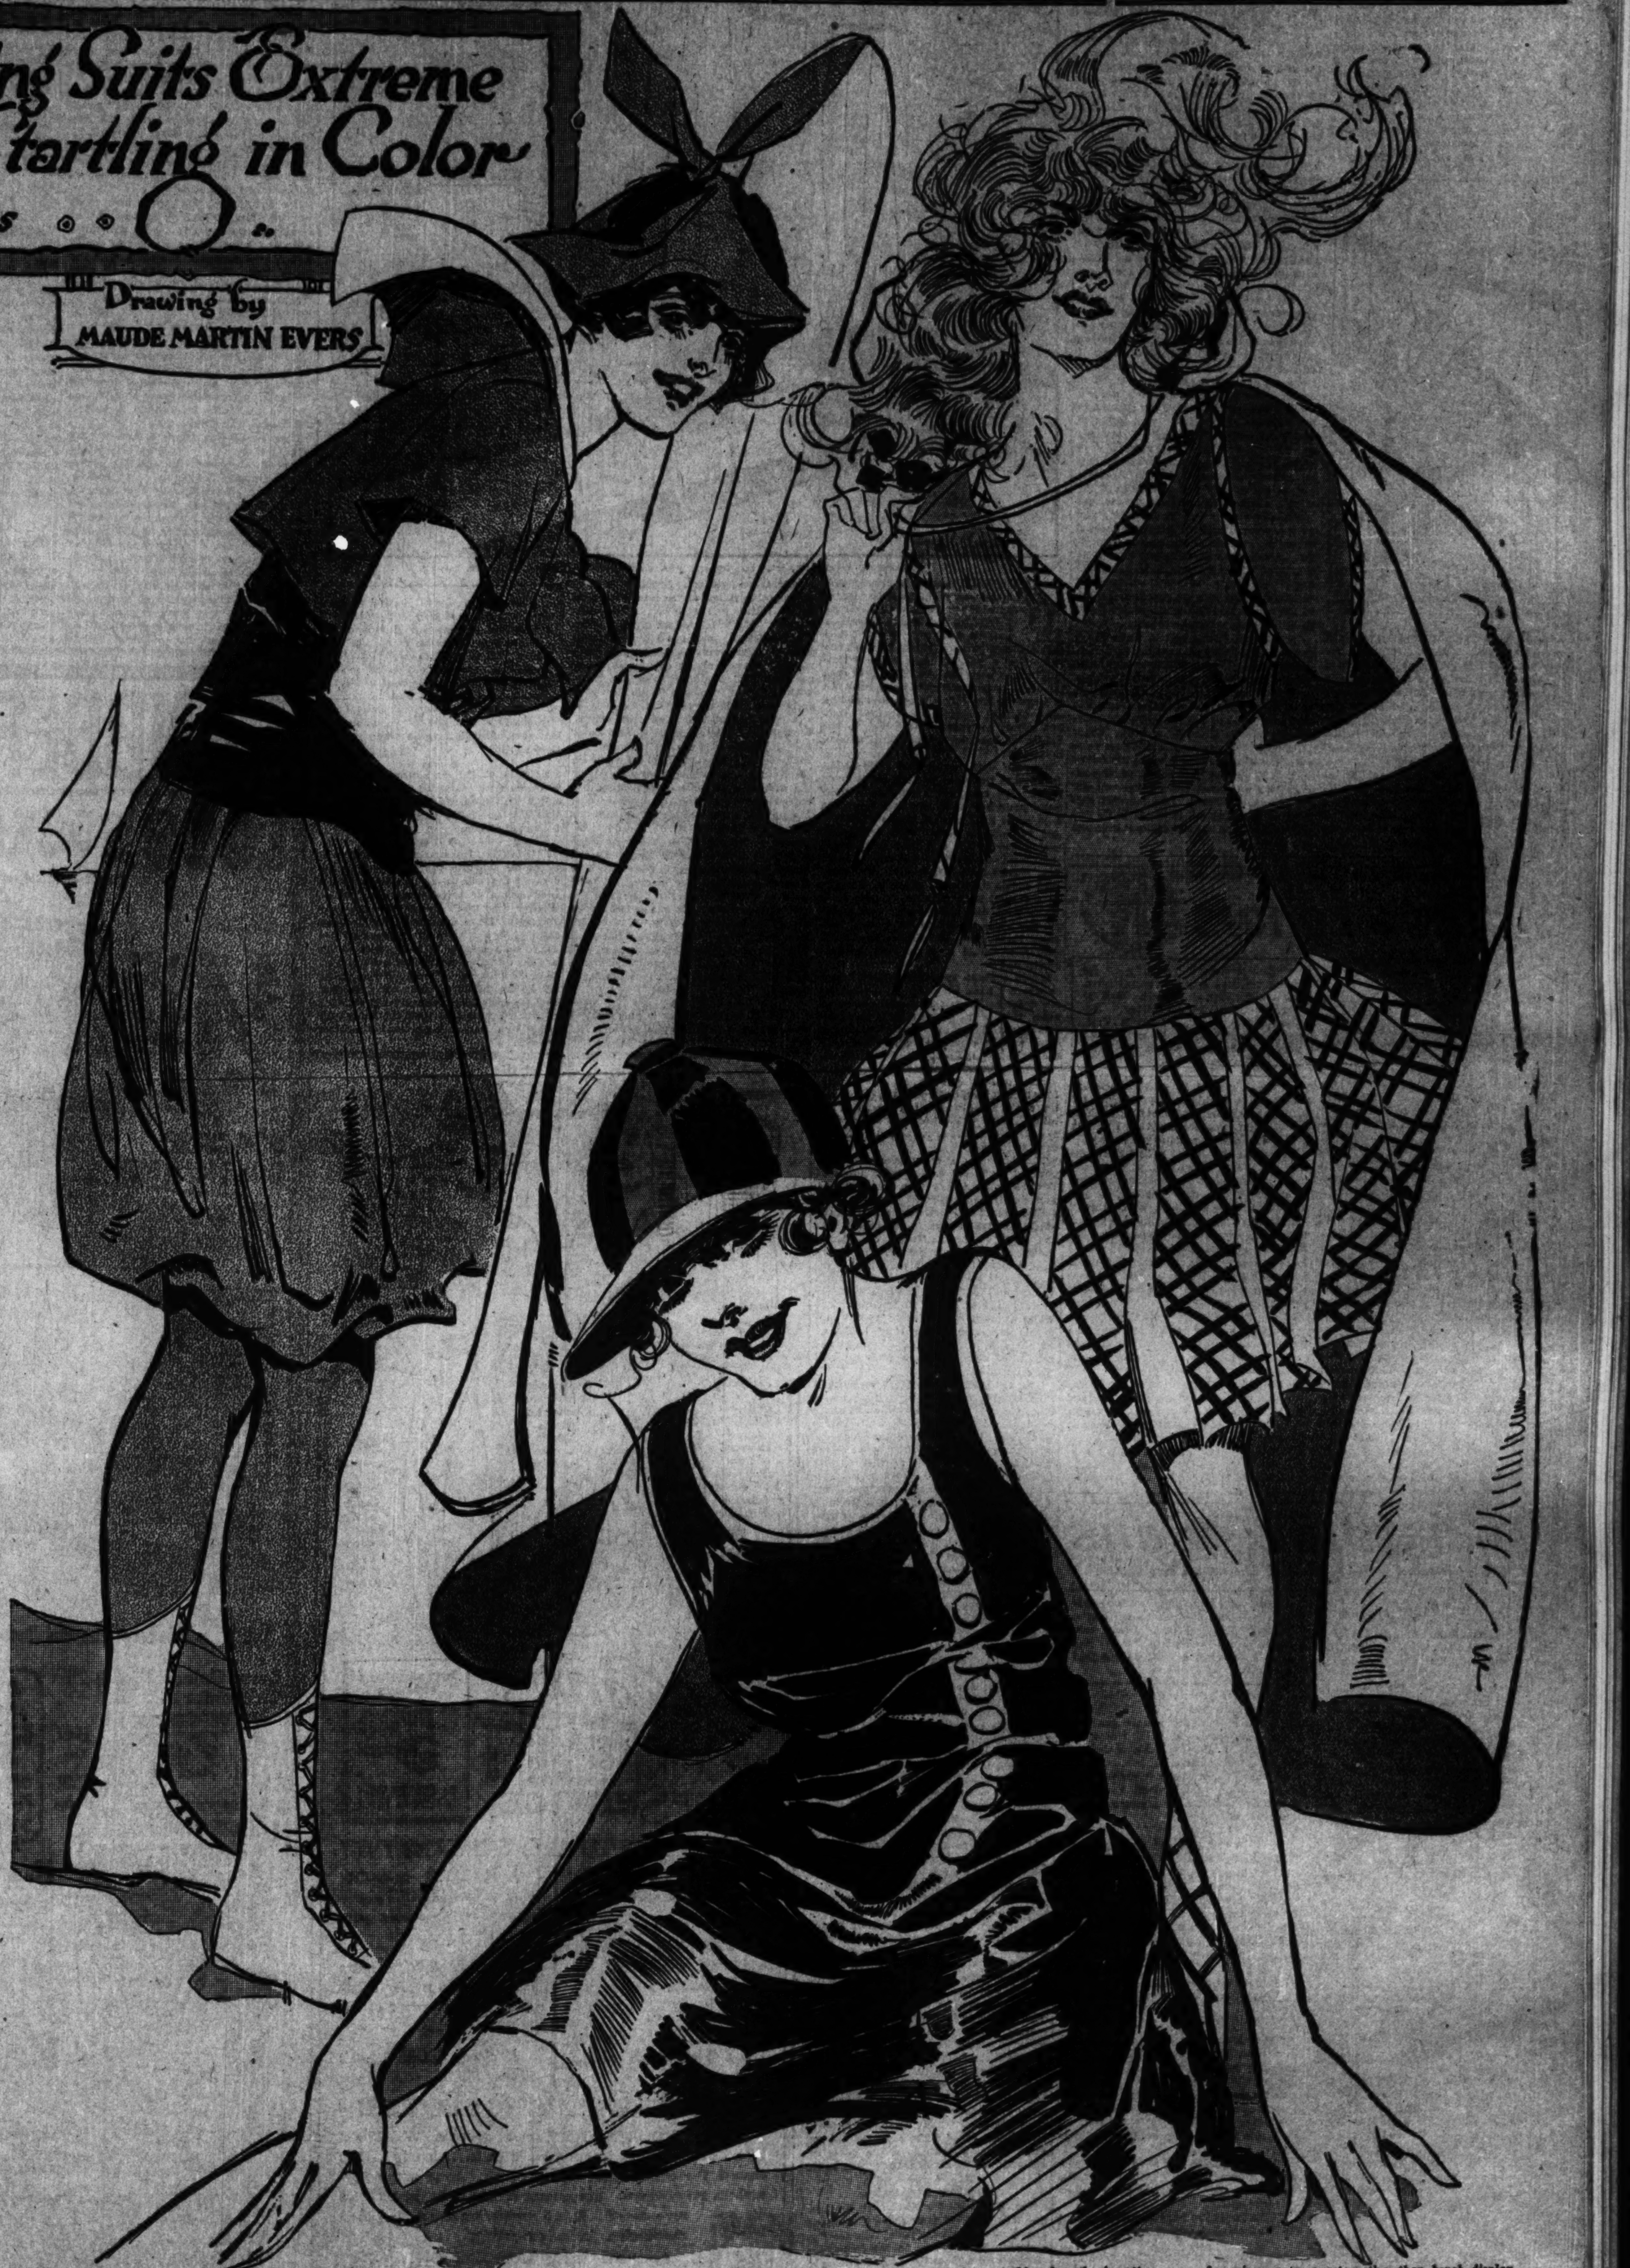
There are many accessories which go with the bathing costume, and these are to be had in a variety so vast as to be almost bewildering. High shoes are smarter this season than low ones, and good looking white canvas models trimmed with different colored kid are to be had lacing up either the back or the front. There is no reason why these should be more stylish except they are newer. And the fact that they are extremely difficult to get out of when they are wet does not add to their desirability.

Of the low slippers and sandal effects, which are universally liked, they may be had in canvas, in satin or in sateen. Whether they are dark or light, whether they match or contrast with the bathing suit with which they are worn, depends entirely on the woman in the case. Of the three, the sateen is the less desirable, since it is not nearly so substantial as canvas and does not look nearly so well as satin.

As far as the hosiery is concerned, fine silk or lisle in the dark colors is adopted by the conservative woman. But if one wishes to grow radical and to indulge in vivid colors and patterns, this season is offering ample opportunity. They are to be had in checks, in stripes, and even in plaids, to say nothing of designs in embroidery and drawn work that are actually weird.

Last, but far from of least importance, are the bathing caps. Most of these are in rubberized silk and cotton materials and are trimmed with roses, feathers, ribbon bows, and ribbon bands. All these trimmings are of the same rubberized goods, and consequently quite as serviceable and full of wear as the cap proper or the garment with which they are worn. These come in many shapes. Some of them are in turban style, with a single rose for trimming. Others are in jockey mode with a visor in the front, especially suitable for keeping off the rays of the sun. There was a time when a brim effect or a visor shape would have been scorned as incompatible with keeping the hair dry, but this day has passed, and these models in no way interfere with the practical sport of bathing.

In the accompanying illustration I have had sketched one of the bathing beach capes which are not to be overlooked among bathing requisites. It may be made of the same material as the bathing suit, or may be of more substantial material if desired. They are more serviceable if they are of ankle length, but many women prefer them of knee length, and in both cases they are stylish. Mohair or serge is equally attractive for these capes, and often they have a hood attached which may be slipped on the head or may serve the purposes of ornament alone.



1. Green taffeta has been brought to play in this wide girdled model, the belt of which is fashioned in black satin. The bizarre but modish bathing cap is of black rubberized silk with brim and bow of the same shade as the green in the suit. High and properly laced are the white canvas shoes with lacings that are green in the illustration, but which might be black or white if preferred.

2. A model in black silk jersey fashioned on the Annette Kellerman order of a combination suit and without trimming of any sort. The large armholes and the sleeveless waist are designed for comfort and for the woman who enjoys water sports rather than beach display.

3. Here a plaid and a plain silk combine to effect a delightful bathing suit with a stylishly full skirt, a wide girdle, short sleeves, and a wide round neck.

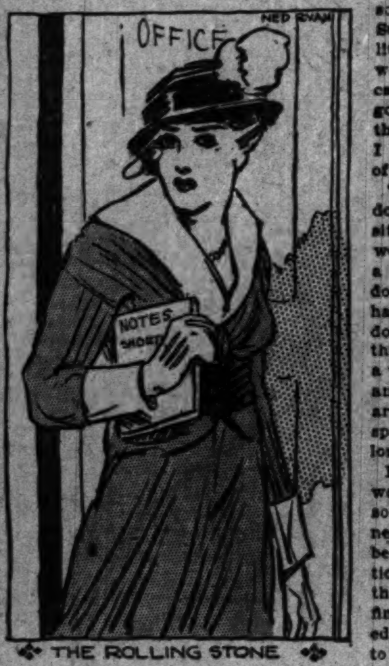
Rolling Stones Always Beginners.

INABILITY to stick to a position for any length of time is the reason that some girls do not get on in the business world. I know several girls who tire of positions quickly. After being in one place for a few months they become restless and feel that they want to go somewhere else, and as a consequence sometimes give up a place that might have become a most lucrative one just simply to make a change.

Of course they are not always fortunate enough to secure a new position right away and are often without work for weeks at a time. When they do succeed in landing a position they are usually obliged to start at a smaller salary than they have been earning, certainly not for more, and then just when they are beginning to be worth more money to their employers the restless spirit possesses them again and they leave.

These rolling stones never get far beyond the beginner's class and work for little money when they could demand a much better salary if they had remained long enough in one position to become a useful and valued employé. It is surprising they do not seem to realize they are making a mistake and are not getting as much as they could get out of their work.



THE ROLLING STONE

The writer of the letter which follows could not be classed as a rolling stone:

"Dear Miss King: I am 22 years old, and I need your advice in regard to my position. I have been a saleswoman for several years. My parents moved to a small town two years ago and since then I have been doing housework for the same people. I am getting so discontented doing this kind of work.

"I rise at 6:30 in the morning and am busy until 8:30 at night. The day seems so long and I am so tired at night. My Sundays are short. I also find people have little respect for a girl who does housework. I am always here at night taking care of the children. I can never plan on going out for an evening until I know if the people I work for expect to stay home. I do not have much freedom for a girl of my age.

"Will you please advise me what to do? Would you suggest changing my position? Do you think clerking or housework harder on a girl? Can a girl live on a salary between $8 and $10 a week? I do not care for fancy clothes. I always have my clothes made plain. I am so downhearted please advise me. Do you think I need a change? I am earning $5 a week here. I have friends I could room and board with. The people I work for are good to me, but I would not think of spending an evening with them in the parlor. Please advise me. ROSE."

It is no wonder you are tired of the work you are doing and are anxious to get something else to do. Undoubtedly you need a change and if I were you I would be on the lookout all the time for a position as saleswoman, since you have done that kind of work; or perhaps you could find clerical work. Watch the help wanted advertisements in the papers and apply to the stores and offices where you think there is a chance for an opening.

I would not advise you to leave where you are now until you have another position assured. You ought to be able to do clerical work well, as your penmanship is good. You are fortunate in having friends with whom you can live after securing a new position, and I think you could manage to live on $8 or $10 a week. Other girls do it. Of course you will have to be careful and economise in many directions in order to make your salary cover your necessary expenses, but I judge you will be willing to do that. I do hope you succeed in securing other work to do and that you will be happier doing it than you are now.

Love Letters

"The Tribune" will pay $5 for every original love letter published. No letters copied from a book or magazine will be considered. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune." Letters must be written on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

In Nautical Terms.

Dear Big Husband-to-Be: Lover, I have prayed for you, hoped for you, wished for you all day until I know you couldn't possibly do anything but "make good" with that big contract.

That "making good"—that means you and I shall soon be sailing into the harbor of our day. What a wonderful trinity, our day, means to you and me—our union, our home, and therefore our happiness.

Your little helmsman, dear, is trying so hard to be patient, and trying, too, to guide the ship safely into that harbor without grounding upon the sands of despair, once.

God bless you, dear big you, and good night. Your little WIFE-TO-BE.

Arrived Too Late.

Dear Lost One: I arrived in Chicago this morning early. It was raining and dark and cold. But I did not mind it, for me the sun was shining, and even the birds seemed to say, "I'll soon be with her, and for us there will be no rain."

Although it was two years since we parted, O, my dear, how well do I remember that day; how brave and sweet you looked when you promised to wait for me. That is the picture I have carried with me for the last two years, and now, for the rest of my life, which I hope it is God's will won't be long, for, dear lost one, it almost seems impossible to live without you. That picture of your sweet, innocent face and the thoughts of you helped me through sickness and almost death. Yes, it made for me a fortune that I was to give to you and help make you happy.

I received but one of your letters; the rest must have gone astray. I did not know at the time you were mourning me as dead. Today, dear lost one, when I heard you were another's wife, I turned into another life, one I had never known before, because you were not there. My last hope and words are that you will be happy, for you deserve all that could make you happy, and to tell you that I am still your friend, for "a friend in need is a friend indeed."

I have fought against sending this letter to you, but my selfishness won. All I ask is that you give me a little thought once in a while; that little favor, surely, is not wrong.

I am leaving tonight to return to the land of my dreams—yes, to the land where every hour I dreamed you were near me, and to live only to see that picture again. May God watch and guard you, dear lost one, until we meet again.

Yours in the Far Off Land, LEO.

Doris Blake Says

"Woman's favorite writer is the man who writes her checks."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

Is She Too Young?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16. I was out with a boy the other night. He is a very nice boy, but there was a certain person who said that I was too young to talk about fellows. My parents do not object to me going out once in a while. Do you think I am too young? X. Y. Z."

If your parents do not object to your accepting an invitation occasionally from a young man, of course you may go. I do not approve of the average girl of 16 acting as though she were 20 and going around to places of amusement with young men, but sometimes a girl's parents don't object, and it's a matter to be decided in the home circle.

They Quarreled.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 18 years old. I am in love with a fellow. I love him very much, but we had a falling out one night, and now I am going with another fellow. If he wants to make up should I leave the other fellow for him? Give me your advice. M. R. F."

I see no reason why you shouldn't be friends with both of the young men. Until you are engaged to be married it is perfectly proper for you to have as many callers as you wish, and I always think that it's better for a girl to have more than one boy friend.

Handsome in Spite of Freckles.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18. Although I have many friends among the opposite sex, none of them ever treats me seriously. Now, I am not seriously inclined myself, but recently I met a young man whom I like very well.

"He, like the others, treats me anything but seriously. Will you please advise me what to do? Although I don't love him, I think I could learn to, as he is a good, industrious fellow.

"I am considered good looking in spite of red hair and freckles. Although he has treated me so indifferently, he tells others that he could love me if I would only grow up. FRECKLES."

You don't really want the boys to be seriously in love with you, Freckles. Let that wait until you're older. I think that it's awfully nice for you to have boy friends who aren't silly. It shows that you must be a good, sensible girl. It doesn't sound sensible, though, for you to wish that this particular boy would grow serious. Let your friendship go on as it is and don't spoil it by trying to make it into love now.

Alas He Went Away.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 21 years old and have been going with a young man for about six months. He left six weeks ago, and before going told me he would send me some views of the place. I have not heard from him; neither have I received any views. Would you advise me to write to him first? I like him real well. "READER."

Don't write him. If he really cares anything about you he'll write to you.

She Quit Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man and have been going with a girl two years my junior for about six months. A short while ago she quit me.

"She always speaks to me and of late has become quite conversational. She even accepted an invitation to take an auto ride with some other girls and myself.

"Now, I think quite a lot of this girl and I believe she cares for me, as she has never gone with any other fellow since we quit.

"What would you advise me to do about it? How can I go with her again? L. C. G."

Why not go on just as though nothing had happened? Invite her to go riding and to places of amusement and be extremely attentive to her, and you will be good friends again.

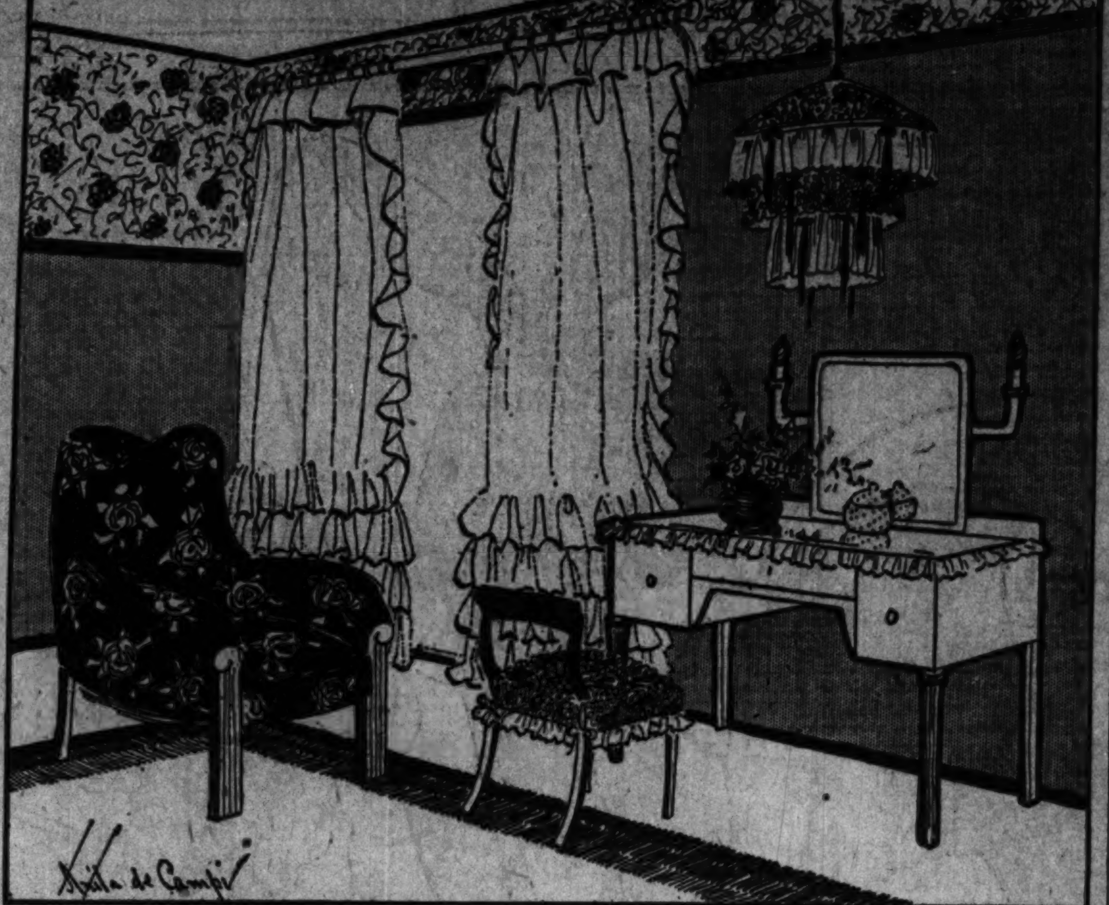
Dress & Furniture Fashions Related

Anita de Campi



Ruffled curtains, ruffled lamp, chair slip, and ruffled dresser cover.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

WHETHER fashion in dress determines our fashions in furniture, or whether fashions in furniture formulate fashions in dress, is a mooted question. Certain it is that a direct relation exists between the two. For a year at least extreme simplicity has been the cry. But now that the tight untrimmed skirt has passed out of vogue it has gone out accompanied by some simple decorative schemes that had surely endeared themselves to the hearts of the average practical minded housewife.

We sigh with regret and yield to the inexorable mandate of this mysterious force. We take down our dearly cherished plain casement curtains, line them with some light colored silk or silkaline, and ruffle them about with flounces to match the lining, and then with downright feminine inconsistency we smile and say, "Isn't that just lovely? I'm right glad ruffles have come in again. They're so soft and fluffy looking. Severe lines really were dreadfully trying. Let's ruffle the white undercurtains, too, and cross them over, and drape them back. And how would it do to loop the draperies up?"

If you wish to know the utmost extent to which I have seen the fad carried, let me describe to you a newly decorated room that is fairly startling in its abandonment of flouncing. Fancy a dining room with a round table in the center and a ruffled table cloth! It sounds almost grotesque. The cloth is made of fine white linen and is trimmed with three four inch ruffles, one above the other, the top one coming exactly to the edge of the table. With the other two superposed and flaring, a sort of ruche twelve inches deep is formed.

The chairs in this room have ruffled slip covered seats, the covers being made of flowered chintz, having a black ground and dull rose and green flowers. The ruffles are of dull rose silky material, the shade of the flowers in the chintz. At the windows are curtains of chintz, matching the chair covers. They are lined and ruffled with pink, and in addition to this they have above them a full valance of the pink material. The undercurtains are of ruffled white Swiss. The white curtains are allowed to fall together, but the figured ones are held back by three inch bands (cuffs they are called) of chintz, with a pink ruffle at their lower edge.

Over the table hangs a large lamp shade that is just one mass of inch wide rose silk ruffling. The side walls are putty colored and the woodwork white enameled. The tiles in the mantel are glazed a deep emerald green, the bricks being set upright, and put together with narrow lines of white cement. The floor is enameled white and almost entirely covered with a velvet carpet of flat grayish blue.

In the accompanying illustration I have sketched a corner only of an up to date bedroom, showing the application of the ruffle in a variety of ways. The curtains are a billowy mass. Made of silk mull, they have a ruffle at the top, at each side, and four ruffles at the bottom. Below them lies a glass curtain, that hangs without fullness, and is finished simply with a wide hem. The curtain pole and rings are of white enamel.

The little dressing table is as cunning as can be. It is made of white enamel, with sconces adjusted hornlike to the sides of the mirror. Another French glass mirror, with beveled edge, covers the entire top of the table, and peeping from beneath it may be seen the ruffled edge of a dresser scarf.

Sufficient dressing light is given by means of a hanging lamp. This has the dome top covered with figured cretonne, ruffled around with amber colored silk, encircling another flounce of cretonne, which in turn encircles a third flounce of silk. The cretonne shows small black figures, and the lamp is further trimmed with bows of black stovepipe ribbon, with short loops and long ends.

The color scheme of the room is unique. The floor is olive green and the rug is dull blue, with a border shading almost to black. The side walls are papered in an invisible stripe green and white, and the upper wall is in figured paper stamped with small clusters of olive leaves, and touches of coral flowers, on a fabric ground of the palest lemon tint. The ceiling is white, faintly toned with lemon. The yellowish tinge is again introduced in the huge spread that covers the two single white-enameled beds, drawn close together. The odd looking arm chair is covered with black velveteen figured with olive green leaves and big plum colored roses, conventionalized almost out of all semblance to real flowers. The frame is of white enamel. On the little dressing chair is a slip cover of cretonne and silk matching the drop light.

Answers to Queries.

MRS. W. E. F.—To begin with the last question first. If your porch is enclosed use glazed chintz curtains. Choose the strongest color to go in the room furnished with mahogany. If you have light olive in the mahogany furnished bedroom choose a lighter and more pronounced green for the old ivory furnished room, and a bluer green for the room furnished in Circassion walnut. See that neither of the other rooms are as intense in tone as the rather yellowish olive of the center one. If you tell me what subject you like in pictures, perhaps I can help you better. Your query is too general, as it stands. Rattan chairs cushioned in figured material would not be objectionable with the other furniture. You can choose as large a table as your space allows, to accommodate books and magazines. Whether window seats are cushioned or not is probably a matter of taste. If they are of good wood, cushions, while attractive, are not really necessary. For the draperies on your French doors, use soft material, shirred on double rods, having the upper rod placed at least one foot lower than the top of the door, allowing a transom like space through which the light can come freely. Do not have a number of pieces in your hall. The simpler your hall the better. A table with a drawer for writing material is almost necessary, with one or two chairs placed at either side of it. A closet for hats and coats is better than a hat rack. Old fashioned wardrobes have come into popularity again. They are placed in the back hall, in homes where closets are not built in.

MRS. E. S. R.: Repp is an excellent material in which to upholster colonial furniture. If the furniture is carved, satin damask is often used. Yes, I am afraid you would tire of so much red. However, change it again when you get tired of it.

MRS. B. C. R.: In your pink flowered bedroom with mahogany furnishings select a dull blue rag rug. In a room of that size one fairly large oval rug would be a good choice.

DUBIOUS: In arranging the toilet articles on the dressing table and on the dresser the rule is, as in almost all arrangements of bric-à-brac, etc., put on display only such things as are really requisite. Have the merest few pieces on the dresser and have all arranged as formally as possible. If your toilet things are beautiful no doubt it is a temptation to make a display of them. However, my advice would be to leave out only such articles as suggest themselves for the use of your guests and keep the things for your own personal use in the dresser drawer.

Treatment for Scalp.

My 12 year old daughter has an unusually fine head of hair. This is the way I began caring for it in her infancy:

An ointment consisting of ten grains of resorcin to one ounce of petroleum was spread on soft linen and placed on her head fresh twice daily, then covered by a muslin cap to remove the brownish, scaly substance on her scalp. Once in twenty-four hours her head was washed with olive oil and as much of the scaly substance removed as possible, followed by a fresh application of the ointment.

After four days of this treatment her head was washed with warm water and castile soap. Apply ointment again if any more crust is seen. After the scalp is entirely clear use ointment one night for two or three weeks to prevent a return of the trouble. Usually the ointment may be discontinued altogether.

For the first year baby's head was washed daily at bathing time, after that I washed it every two weeks with pure soap and warm water, rinsing in cooler water, and massaged the scalp with the finger tips. Her comb and brush were kept scrupulously clean and her hair was "bobbed" until she was 9 years old.

Likes Wholesome Literature.

My 6 months old daughter would not drink water, warm or cold, from bottle, spoon, or cup. A friend advised flavoring the water with enough sweet orange juice to give it a taste. I did so and found it a satisfactory method.

I wrote the Boy Scouts of America, 200 Fifth avenue, New York, inclosing stamped addressed envelope, for advice regarding books for her 9 year old brother. I wrote a description of his interests, moral qualifications, faults, delinquencies, stating how he loved to spend his time, the characteristics of his favorite companions, etc. They sent me a list of books that have been invaluable in forming good ideas of life in general.

I read to him until he was old enough to read them himself; now he reads aloud while I sew, and his appreciation for wholesome literature is assured and I do not worry about his reading "dime novels," for he never formed a taste for them.

MICHIGAN MOTHER.

When a Child Is Ill.

The following may be helpful to mothers nursing a child through an illness:

If the child refuses to drink milk, etc., paste a bright colored picture on the bottom of the glass on the outside, so that it shows through. When the child has drunk the milk he will see the picture. By changing it and letting him guess what the next one will be, his curiosity will spur him on to take his nourishment regularly.

Let him eat his meals at a little table, using chop sticks or wooden spoon; dress in Japanese or unusual fashion; "make believe" you are gypsies, princess, etc., and decorate bed and room with paper chains the patient can help cut out and paste. Keeping a child amused will aid in his recovery.

NURSE.

Strengthens Weak Neck.

It sometimes happens that baby's neck is not strong enough to hold up his head, even after he is old enough to want to sit up. Always handle him carefully, supporting the head with your hand. Sit baby on your knee and, with only the ball of the foot upon the floor, trot him gently up and down, letting him tilt first to one side, then the other, also backward and forward, just a little, only enough to cause him to stiffen his neck. Do this a little while each day, increasing the exercise as he grows stronger. It will wonderfully help to strengthen the muscles of the neck. It is also beneficial and restful to the back. Rub the back gently night and morning when dressing him.

Good Scrap Book Helpful.

Every mother should make a scrap book for her child. Not the old fashioned idea of a scrap book with crude, bright colored cats and dogs or purple cows in impossible meadows, but one made from pictures cut from the magazine advertisements or book catalogues, where one will find truly artistic things in reproductions of the masterpieces in painting or famous architecture or the faces of people well known in art, letters, or history. Surprisingly early in life a child will learn to know the faces or pictures, and it will always be a source of pleasure and benefit to him.

I started one of these books when my child was not more than 2 years old, and she soon learned to take the keenest interest in it, and when in the city with me would often see in the shop windows a picture which she would immediately recognize and call my attention to with the utmost triumph. Later when in Europe the pictures which she had practically grown up with were as old friends.

If a picture has a story the mother should know it and tell it to the child in his own language. Doing this proved of great assistance to my daughter when she was in college, and in one instance was the means of her answering a final examination question which she would otherwise have missed.

Aside from the reasons already given for this kind of a scrap book, there are many others. The early association with the best the world has to offer has a refining influence on a child and teaches him to despise that which is tawdry or inferior. His love of good literature is quickened and the truest ideals are inspired and uplifted.

Sun loving plants are the California poppy [eshcholtzia], poppies, salpiglossis, petunias, mignonette, and heliotrope.

Gay color for September is made by scarlet sage or salvia, asters in pure color or mixed, verbenas, zinnias, candytuft, and pot marigolds. Blue and white colors are found in lobelia, cornflowers [centaurea cyanus], anchusa, linum perenne, myosotis, larkspur, and nigella [Miss Jekyll].

Novelties for boxes or pots are schizanthus [butterfly flowers], tigridias, zephyranthus, and gloxinias.

IN THE PARKS.

PARK superintendents are proud of their masses of shrubbery. Conditions have been right to force out fine shows of bloom. Today the snowballs and the bridal wreath are in their prime. The shrub viburnum opulus sterilis and the Japan snowball are adorned with clusters of white bloom. Bridal wreath, the spirea Van Houttei spreads out perfect sprays of white flowers and green leaves between. Few bridal wreaths were winter killed, the spring developing almost perfect stands of bloom.

Bush honeysuckles have been grateful for the rain. The Lonicera Tartarica and Japanese bush honeysuckles are great bouquets of pink or white tinted dainty flowers. In protected locations on the lakeside or in the west parks some are in full bloom, while in more exposed situations the buds appear like pearls on the tips of the twigs. One species is fragrant.

It is the season to feast the eyes on the expanses of grassy fields, an English landscape in Washington park. The golf courses in Jackson park, at the west and on the north shore, have a springtime beauty with handsome backgrounds of shrubs and trees. They should be visited now. Next week Jackson park will boast of peonies, Lincoln park of iris and primulas, and Washington and the west parks of the budding perennials.

PERDITA: Tuberoses [dwarf or tall] may be planted in the flower beds or grown in porch boxes. The bulbs, set two inches below the surface, need little care.

MRS. V. JONES: Sunflowers are handsome when massed. The globosus fistulosus, growing 6 feet tall, with the dwarf multiflorus in front, is a good arrangement.

MOTHER: Gourds are quick growing vines. The dish cloth Hercules club and dipper gourd vines will climb on a fence or any support you give them.

KATE H.: The Datura, or trumpet flower, is a bushy, strong plant. It needs space. The cornucopia has three funnel shaped flowers, one within another. Seed is 5 cents a paper.

WHAT IT COSTS TO BE A GOOD FELLOW

by Lillian Russell

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

[Copyright, 1915, by Lillian Russell.]

YOU take your first drink just to be a good fellow, but you never consider that it's going to cost you something to be one.

It will cost you ugliness—ugliness of body and ugliness of soul—to be a good fellow.

It will cost you a face disfigured with pimples and blotches.

It will cost you a nose that will become red and unsightly.

It will cost you dark circles and ugly puffs under your eyes.

It will cost you indigestion, headaches, and biliousness.

It will cost you heart trouble and Bright's disease, eventually.

It will cost you a broken down nervous system.

It will cost you a bad temper.

It will cost you the loss of your own self-respect.

It will cost you, perhaps, the loss of your senses, and mayhap be the means of completely wrecking your life.

It will cost you a picture of yourself in the minds of your friends and acquaintances that will be disgustingly revolting.

It will cost you the capacity to work.

It will cost you the friendships that are most worth while.

It will cost you your youth.

It will cost you a mature and slovenly figure.

It will cost you disease of the liver.

It will cost you a dulled mental capacity.

It will cost you a dim and lusterless eye.

It will cost you wrinkled and lifeless corpuscles.

It will cost you a derangement of all the natural functions of your body.

It will cost you insensibility to modesty in appearance and conversation.

It will cost you shame and degradation.

It will cost you beauty of mind and body and soul.

Is it worth it?

You take your first drink just to be a good fellow.

But you never stop with just one drink. You take a second and you take a third.

With the first few drinks your heart beats faster, your tongue is "glibber," and you think you are having the time of your life.

As time goes on the effect wears off quickly and larger quantities are necessary to make the heart beat and the tongue loose.

Perhaps your beauty does not perish with the first drink.

But you can't be a good fellow for long without losing your fresh complexion and converting it into an eyesore.

You can't be a good fellow for long without changing a sweet breath into a repulsive one.

You can't stay out late and carouse without adding years to your appearance.

It doesn't take many good fellow jaunts to turn a clear, healthy eye into a bloodshot, bleary thing.

It doesn't take many drinks to make you ugly and old in body, mind, and soul.

Think it over.

It costs to be a good fellow, and there is no way of escaping the toll.

Is the game worth what it costs?

Styles in Clothes.

Any question about styles in clothes, whether for babies, girls, boys, women, or men, will be gladly answered through the columns of "The Tribune" or by mail. Address Miss Louise James, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

MISS ELEANOR: Cotton voile and net is a combination that makes up prettily and inexpensively for a graduation dress. Mull would serve well for the lining. It might be high waisted, the skirt joined to the waist with a cord and outlined with small muslin roses of pink and white or red and white. They could outline the edges of the elbow sleeves, too, and the front of the underwaist. Both sleeves and underwaist could be of net, while overblouse, cut with the stylish round neck, as well as the plain, full, circular skirt, could be of fine washable voile. Such a dress as this could be used many times afterward for festive occasions.

MRS. MARGARET G.: When you take the measure for your skirt pattern take your hip measure seven inches below the normal waist line. Should your waist happen to be smaller or larger than the pattern you can easily regulate the fullness at the waist line to fit it.

Annual $2 Waist Sale

LAST March we held a sale of waists at $1—and it was a wonderful event. When the doors opened, thousands of women rushed into this store, hurrying to our Third Floor waist section for their share of waists in that remarkable sale. Inspired by the success of that event, we have gone into the market prepared to make our annual $2 waist sale the most sensational we have ever held. That we have been successful in securing some of the most remarkable values ever offered at this price will be convincingly demonstrated, tomorrow, when we present to the women of Chicago the most exquisite creations that they have ever seen at this price.

Manufacturers Made Tremendous Concessions

THAT it would be impossible, under ordinary circumstances, to sell waists at $2 requires but little argument. When you see the styles and examine the materials and trimmings, you will understand that great influence was brought to bear upon manufacturers to secure waists like these to sell at this price. We induced the makers to co-operate with us, sacrificing their profit in order to make this occasion one long to be remembered.

About 8,000 Waists in This Sale

THERE are crepe de chine waists, pussy willow waists, lace waists, Georgette crepe waists, organdie waists, voile waists and pongee waists. Of the 8,000, about 3,000 are lace and silk; many of these would be exceptional values at $5; and not a blouse in the entire lot would sell regularly for less than 2.95. You may choose from a grand assortment of white maize, flesh silks, fancy shadow laces over flesh chiffons, colored chiffons, allover embroidered voiles, trimmed with new laces—long and short sleeves—new collars—sizes 34 to 46 (none sent on approval or C. O. D.)—on Third Floor—your choice at

Summer Blouses to Please the Practical Woman

1134. 1133. 1132.

No. 1134—The blouse with revers is one of the new ones, and the frill at one side makes a fashionable feature that must not be overlooked. This one is charming for summer silks. The high collar with the open neck at the front combines to make a most becoming as well as smart feature, and the frills over the hands are always attractive. The pattern is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 inch bust measure.

No. 1133—Everything that gives the overblouse effect is especially fashionable this season. This garment consists of a complete blouse with overblouse, and this overportion can, of course, be made from any contrasting material. In the illustration, Georgette crepe makes the blouse and lace the overblouse, with bands of satin ribbon as a finish. The collar is joined to the overblouse and the neck edge of the blouse itself is left plain to be finished with picot edge or in any manner preferred. The sleeves are finished with flaring cuffs that are eminently becoming. The pattern is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 inch bust measure.

No. 1132 is a plain shirt waist adapted to sports and to general wear. The sleeves are new and especially interesting. The back is extended to form a yoke at the front. It can be finished plain or with a pocket in true sports style. Suitable materials are many and tub silks especially popular. The pattern is cut in sizes from 34 to 44 inch bust measure.

THE wise bride and the wise woman spend an equal amount of time on the question of blouses for summer wear. There is nothing more invaluable for sport purposes of all kinds than the pretty washable blouse to go with the separate skirt. There is no garment more indispensable for traveling use than the blouse which harmonizes prettily with the traveling suit. Sometimes it may match the silken lining of the jacket. Again it may match in color the suit proper, or still again it may contrast strikingly and effectively with the color of the coat and skirt.

The blouses which Clotilde has sketched today and which she has furnished patterns for are all designed essentially to serve two masters—style and service. One of them is dressy, one of them is practical, and one of them is intended primarily for sports wear. They are, like all of Clotilde's patterns, simple in order that they may be easily made by the home needle woman, and stylish that they may please the most fastidious feminine taste.

The blouse with the revers and with a frill at one side is one of the newest models and is destined to be much worn these coming months. The frills over the hands are no less desirable. For every short sleeved blouse that Paris turns out she turns out at least twelve that are long sleeved. This one, however, is so made that the sleeves may be slipped up to the elbow if wished and still be pretty and effective.

All of the summer silks are charming for a blouse of this kind, and also all the many varieties of cotton fabrics. Handkerchief lawn and organdy are perhaps the sheerest of all the materials, but cotton voile and dainty cotton are extremely attractive.

In the overblouse model a note is struck which is particularly stylish this year. In the illustration the blouse proper is made of Georgette crepe, while the overblouse is of lace with bands of satin ribbon. There are other combinations which would be equally attractive and not so expensive. For instance white cotton voile could be used with the overportion made from handkerchief linen and finished with scalloped edges.

As for the sports blouse the suitable materials are many. There are all the striped, checked, plaid, or plain tub silks, as well as crêpe de chine, linen, madras, voile, and cotton crêpe. Probably of all awning striped voile and tub silks are the smartest and the best liked.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

Some Tactless Remarks.

What was the most tactless remark you never forgot? Maybe you made it yourself. Maybe you heard somebody else make it. Maybe it "got you in wrong," or maybe it got some one else in the same predicament. Everybody either makes or hears tactless remarks made. What was yours? Tell us about it. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper only, make your anecdote short, and address it to the Tactless Remarks Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts will be returned.

Hurled Kitty Skyward.

It was summer and I was calling on a new girl and was standing on her lawn and feeling gay and playful. Suddenly the most disreputable looking cat in the world came purring across the lawn and rubbed up against her dress. Now I hate cats. And I hated this one particularly. Seizing the purring pussy by the tail I gave it a swing or two and sent it flying over the fence, where it lit in a haystack.

"I have about as much use for the people who keep cats as I do for cats themselves," I said.

"Well—that was my cat!" she cried indignantly.

Hostess Among the Absent.

A young bride and groom were being entertained at dinner at the home of one of my friends. The groom remarked that his wife had made twenty-seven calls the previous afternoon and was so delighted to find many women away, as she could get so many more calls over with. The hostess was one of the women who had not been at home when her dinner guest called!

Wasn't Gay About It.

While at a reception last summer our crowd decided to go down and see a rather rough dance hall, having heard so much of its beauty, etc. Upon arriving, one of the boys asked me to dance, and I, thinking that the rest of the crowd would join us, danced one dance. No one else ventured out, and when we got back no one said a word. Later in the evening at the restaurant one of the girls said: "You have no idea how glad I am that I didn't get out on the floor and dance. I wouldn't be seen dancing in that crowd." Needless to say I didn't feel very gay about it.

It Was Far Enough.

Any one who has commuted on the esteemed I. C. ought to appreciate this. I had just taken my seat in the express when a young lady friend came in and sat down beside me. I assured her that it was a fine opportunity for a nice talk. She agreed, only, unfortunately, she was only going to the first station. I fervently remarked, "That is plenty far enough." We have never been quite as good friends since.

Do You Know a Great Spender?

Did you ever know a great spender—one whose idea was that the cost meant nothing so long as he was having a good time? Write on one side of the paper, and if your letter is published you will get $1. Address the Spenders' Contest, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. No manuscripts returned.

Aimed at Saxophones.

"A friend of mine whose sole ambition was to spend all the money his father could make, was the greatest spender I ever knew. He frequented the downtown cafés at night. One evening while one of the entertainers, a young lady, was playing a saxophone at a table quite a distance from his, he threw a silver dollar towards her. Accidentally the coin fell in the end of the saxophone. He was so pleased over the feat that thirty-one silver dollars followed the first one. He changed a twenty dollar bill to accomplish the feat. None of the other coins fell in the saxophone, but it's a safe bet that they reached their destination.

Was Some Party.

When at college my close friend and roommate one day received $5,000 from an unexpected source, and he determined to spend it all in having "a real good blowout," as he expressed it.

He accordingly hired the local opera house for one evening and employed a musical comedy company to present a performance to which he invited every one connected with the college. Needless to say, the house was packed as was the banquet at a local hotel given in honor of the theatrical people, some forty in number. Every available auto in the town was chartered to see the show folks to the train, the entire student body assisting. Each of the chorus girls received a five pound box of the best candy as a parting gift. The $5,000 legacy had melted in one night, but if there were any regrets the host of the evening refused to express them.

"Blew" Her to Roses.

This spender, who really couldn't afford to be prodigal with his earnings, called the day before Easter to find that another admirer of mine had sent me some violets and a small box of candy. Easter Sunday the spender sent dozens of roses, so many, in fact, that the florist, thinking they were for a big function, sent vases and a man to assist in the decorating. I never saw so many roses in my life; there were more than enough to decorate the twenty room boarding house where I lived. And with them came a ten pound box of candy.

Was Splendid Host.

He was a man about 50 years old, a widower without any children. As a birthday celebration to his niece he entertained her with eight girl friends at his home for a week. The niece and her friends lived in another city a day's ride from his home. He paid the railroad fare to and from his city for all eight girls and hired extra maids for the occasion to assist the girls.

He gave nine box parties to the theater for the best shows, a dinner, and a dinner-dance at the most exclusive hotel. He entertained sixteen couples at a skating party, taking them all to the lake on which his summer home is located. The expenses to and from for the entire crowd were paid by him.

Besides the parties that were given away from the house there were also several in his home. It was the busiest week I ever spent and the most royally I was ever entertained. As a souvenir of his house party he gave each of the girls a little finger ring, set with a small diamond and rubies—a ring he had designed and especially had made and which had a significance.

But he's married now.

Have Color in Your Cheeks

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets.

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

The Confession I Wish I Had Not Made.

Did you ever make a confession to a friend, husband, wife, or the one you promised to marry that you lived to regret bitterly having made? Or have you suffered because of a confession you should have made and didn't? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

Aunty Wouldn't Believe It.

I was in doubt once, wondering whether I should tell my aunt of the flirtation of her husband with my chum. I finally made a confession to her one beautiful summer evening while taking a walk. I told all that I knew, and that night she made me leave her house never to return. I had no place to go, having no parents or home. That one confession I wish I had not made.

Loved the First One.

Eight years ago an honest, ambitious young man proposed to me, but I confessed I did not love him and that I never could. After repeated entreaties which were all in vain he left the state. Along came a man whose wealth attracted me and with whom I was sure I would be happy. After a short acquaintance we were married. But all his money did not bring me any happiness and I found as the days went by that I really loved my first lover and that I could not forget him. Wealth and easy living have grown abominable to me and I would give up everything to have my true love back again and my confession unsaid.

What Beauty Tricks Transformed You?

Vinegar Bandage for Double Chin.

To dispense with my double chin I made a thick, heavy bandage, which I saturated with vinegar, applied it under my chin, and, bringing it up, pinned with a safety pin on top of my head. I wore this every night and do not have that troublesome double chin any more.

Rubber Bands Straightened Teeth.

I can't say that I ever entirely transformed myself from an ugly duckling, but at least I've made a marvelous improvement. My upper front teeth used to be very unevenly spaced, some crowded together and some far apart. By careful consideration I placed rubber bands between first one crowded place and then another until now my teeth are quite even. I kept the bands in only at night, as I didn't like the looks of them. In less than a month there was a marvelous improvement.

Dry Salt for Eyebrows.

Once my eyebrows were thin. I tried dry salt, rubbing it in thoroughly every night at bedtime. At the end of a month the result was splendid. That was years ago, and I have never had to repeat the remedy.

Rid of an Oily Face.

As I grew up my figure was good and my features became regular, but my complexion was always oily looking, powder as often as I would. Finally I hit upon the scheme of throwing two tablespoons of washing soda, twice a week, into the warm water in which I washed my face. The effect was immediate, for the greasy shine disappeared, likewise the blackheads and I looked much better groomed than formerly.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

PLEASE be patient, you who are asking me for recipes for bran bread. There are some experiments I hope to do before I say some things about bran.

I have promised this time to answer after my own fashion the request, "Won't you publish a list of foods that will help people to reduce without causing wrinkles?" This is a large order. I can eat all sorts of things and take off flesh because I know food values. The latest opinions are that anybody who has the fat making habit can make fat out of any food, but this idea needs many modifications, as every single set plan for eating to reduce does. No one can reduce and stay reduced by following some superficial plan like eating one slice of bread, one egg, and a cup of coffee for breakfast, etc. They must go about the business more intelligently, and with some idea of the great problems involved. They ought—

First, to learn the general composition of foods. There are numerous food tables to be had for little money.

Second, not suddenly to drop from overeating to undereating. To do this is hard on the digestive system, keyed up to wearing overwork. They ought not to lessen too suddenly either food bulk or amount of nutrient. The bulk can often be increased to advantage if that bulk is made up of the bulky foods which have but small nutriment. In the following summary put vegetable before gelatin: "All our gelatin desserts, all our fruits, all our lean meats, white fish, oysters, lobsters, eggs, even our potatoes, are three-fourths, seven-eighths, and nine-tenths water, and therefore, at the best, cannot touch 1,000 calories to the pound." Nature smuggles a lot of water into foods, for nothing can grow without it. The range is illustrated by the fact that lettuce contains but eighty-five calories of nutriment to the pound, while oil has over 4,000. The mineral matter of the lettuce, however, compensates. There are a great many foods which are "thin stuffs," and these in general are for those who would reduce.

Third, to remember that fat does not accumulate in a minute. Any one reducing is more likely to stay normal if fat is taken off slowly.

Fourth, to remember that no one of overweight is normal, and therefore should not expect normal results instantaneously when changing from bad to good habits.

Fifth, if digestive troubles are present, to be more than careful to choose especially nourishing foods among those eaten and those which do not arouse these troubles, but scant the quantity. Yet whatever is done know how much or how little nutriment is taken. The weakest digestions can usually tolerate custards, which contain just the sort of food value anybody needs, reducing or not. All foods which are indigestible in general, and to an individual in particular, should be avoided. Body fat from indigestion is of the deadest sort.

Fried Bananas.

Fried bananas are without doubt one of the exceptions to fried foods which may be indulged in because the fat must not be overhot and the work must be gently done. Put a tablespoon of butter in the frying pan and let it melt and get hot, but not smoking hot. Slice the bananas diagonally across, fry gently on one side, and then turn and fry on the other. If careful they will not break. When something hot for breakfast is wanted to replace the more concentrated cereal, the hot bread and even the hot coffee, this is one of the good things.

Fish Chowder.

Fry out a little salt pork, put over it a layer of potatoes, then add a layer of onions, and finally one of small pieces of halibut or any chowder fish, which is one not fat, then potatoes again and salt to taste. Cover with water and cook until potatoes and onions are done. Add a little milk to make a food which is bulky and gratifying, but of low nutrient value.

Bermuda Onions.

The Bermuda onions, large, of fine grain, and excellent flavor, are now in the market. All onions, because of their bland or laxative qualities, are good for the stout. They are both wholesome and of slight food value, but rich in some essential minerals. To cook them so they will satisfactorily replace both a meat and a vegetable at a meal, peel and blanch five minutes in boiling water, drain and cool, then put to cook in a rather thick, well seasoned meat stock, enough to cover, and cover kettle. Cook gently until liquid all cooks away and leaves the onion as tender as it can be.

Thin Cream Soups.

Use only a little butter but the necessary flour for thickening if you want to eat cream soups, and only a little milk but rather the water in which the vegetable used was boiled.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

THERE is often a question as to what is the proper dress to wear at a luncheon or dinner. In this matter we are partly governed by English custom and partly by our own. The English always don full dress for every function after 7 o'clock in the evening, whether it be dinner, theater, supper, dance, or any other social occasion. But the American fashion of large and elaborate luncheons only for women is practically unknown anywhere else in the world. To match this feast American women have evolved the handsome luncheon costume, a part of the wardrobe which corresponds to a European's afternoon toilette which she never puts on until 4 or 5 o'clock.

We follow English custom for evening dress part way, but many women prefer not to wear full "costume du soir" to the theater and instead have as part of their wardrobes pretty half high dresses for such occasions and for quiet evenings at home.

MARY—A nice menu for a simple luncheon is six strawberries (plump and luscious ones) with their hulls on, set around the edge of a plate with a little neatly molded mound of powdered sugar in the middle; after which nicely broiled chops, new potatoes, and fresh peas would go well, with muffins or corn bread served at the same time. Some cold boiled asparagus with a French dressing and cheese crackers could be served next, and then a baked custard with a caramel sauce or a coffee jelly with whipped cream would top off the meal, which would not be difficult for one maid to cook and serve. After dinner coffee in small coffee cups could be served either at table or in your sitting room. A quarter's worth of spring flowers prettily arranged in a low dish or bowl in the center of the table would add charm to the occasion. Put the guest from out of town at your right—and don't worry! If you enjoy your party others will also.

F. C.—If you want to give a little dinner of six at a restaurant arrange so that your table is engaged and your dinner ordered beforehand. It is awkward standing about waiting for a table to be assigned to you, and still more trying to ask people what they want to eat and making it necessary for each one to consult the menu. Have your dinner at 7:30 or 8 o'clock and then you won't need to provide a theater or other entertainment for later in the evening.

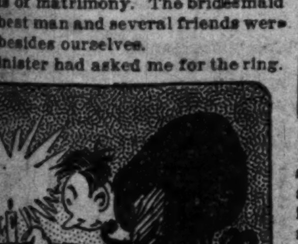
My Most Embarrassing Moment.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When ——." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

He Crawled for It.

It happened in the parlor of the parsonage during the marriage ceremony that was to unite my wife and myself in the bonds of matrimony. The bridesmaid and my best man and several friends were present besides ourselves.

The minister had asked me for the ring.



I reached in my pocket for it and just as I held it out to the minister it dropped through my fingers to the floor. It seemed as if it would never stop rolling. After overturning several chairs, I finally located it under the couch, where I secured it by crawling on my hands and knees. This certainly was a humiliating position for a bridegroom. All during my search the attendants were very busy stuffing handkerchiefs down their throats in an effort to keep from laughing outright.

'Twas Some Bargain.

I was traveling for a carbon paper concern. It was on a Monday morning that I called on my prospective. I greeted him and began my usual sales talk. I had my sample case on the counter, and as I was opening it I said: "Did you ever see such carbon paper at $1 a box?" As I threw back the lid of my case, to my embarrassment the sample case was filled with laundry. Evidently the joke had been played on me by fellow salesmen at the hotel the night before.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

He Passed the Beans.

He was always polite to me. When we were dining he would help me to everything before he ate anything himself. One time when he spilled something on my coat he spent nearly an hour scraping it off. Now we are married and as soon as dinner is announced he rushes to the table and has nearly everything eaten before I get there. This morning when I reached the table a dish of baked beans was swiftly disappearing. "Pass the beans," I said. He paid no attention to me, but went on eating. After I had repeated my request several times I simply yelled. My better half looked up from his plate with an injured air and passed the beans; that is to say he gave the dish such a shove that it slid across the table and landed upside down in my lap, spoiling my new silk dress. When he saw this he said: "A cow would have more sense than to wear silk at home." Then he went on eating as swiftly as before.

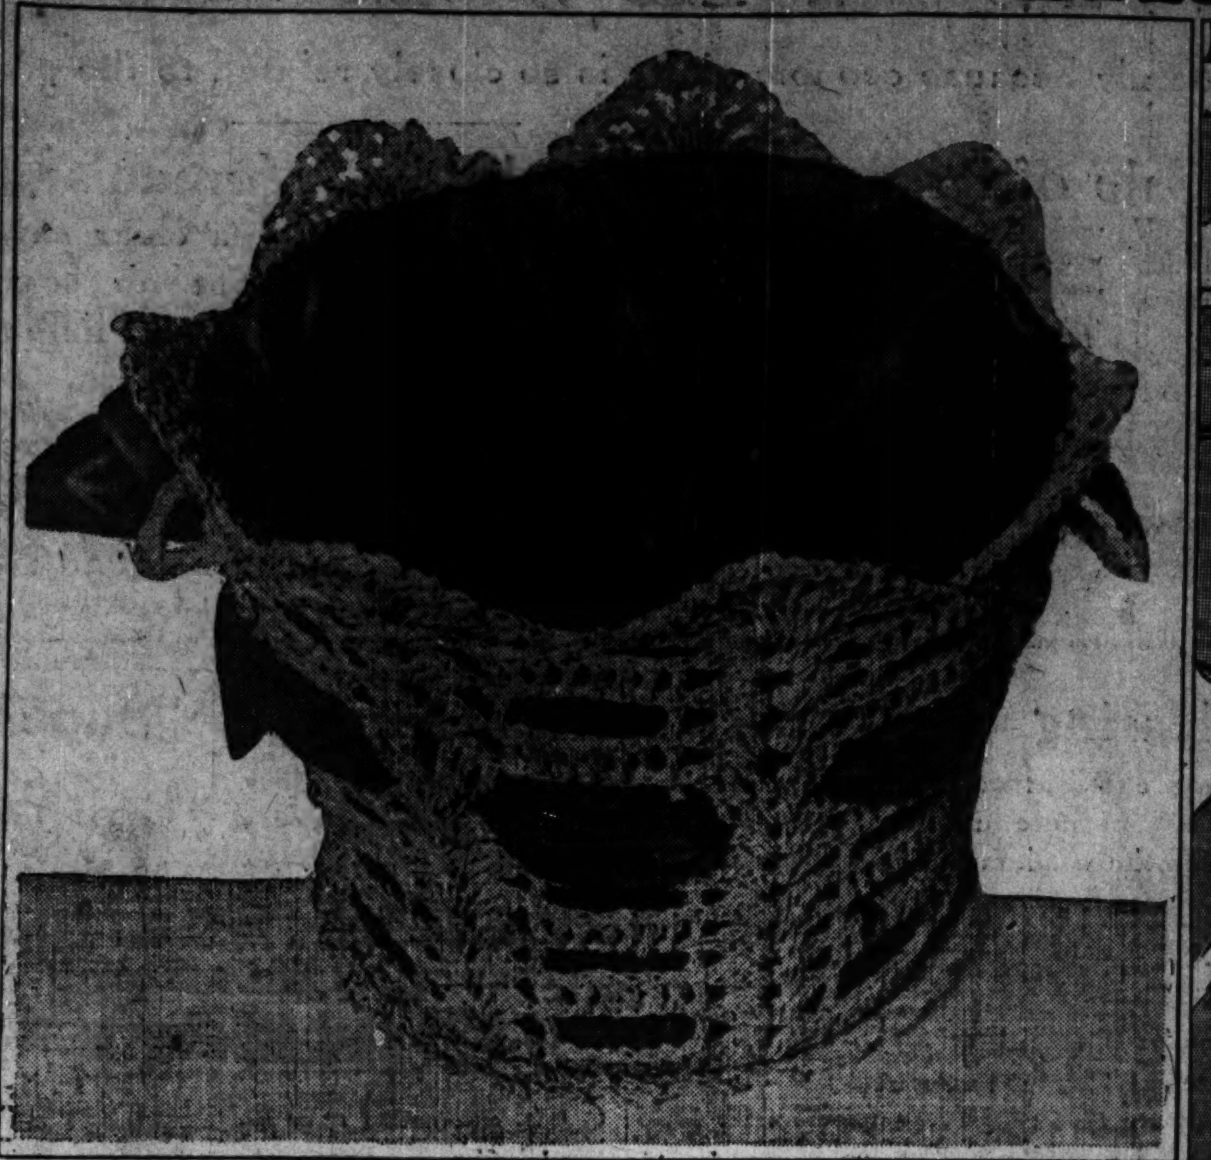
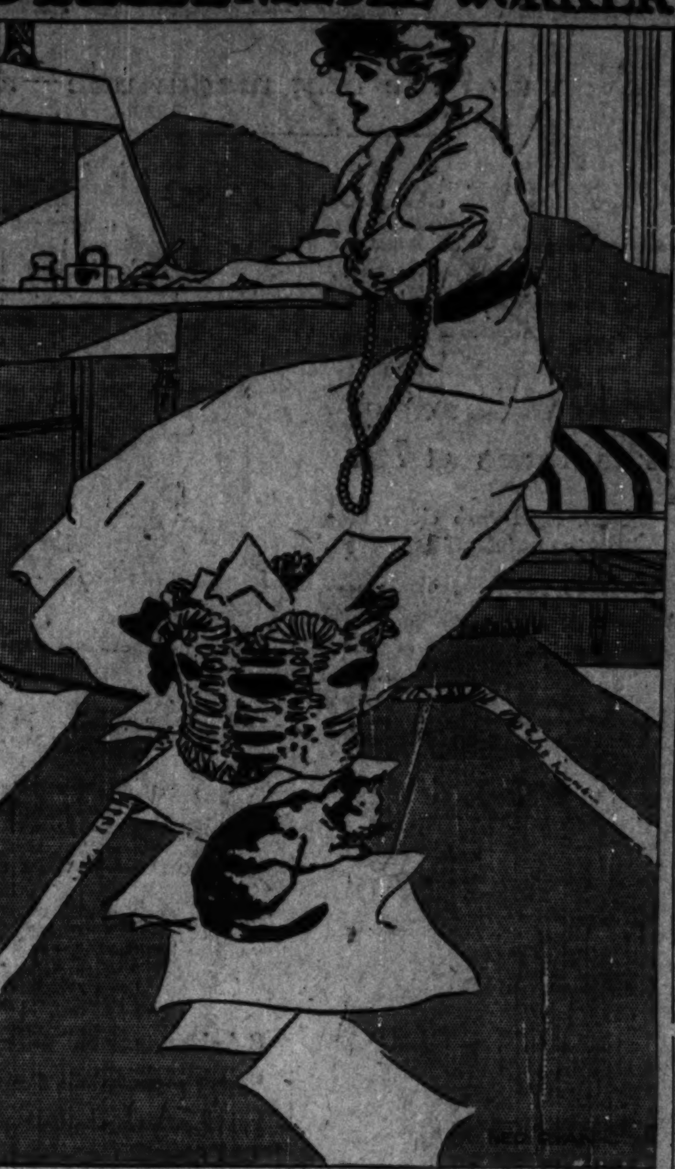
CROCHET·WASTE·BASKET for the CLEVER NEEDLE WORKER





Directions for Making.

Here are the directions for the crochet waste basket which is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is a handsome affair. After it is finished as far as the crochet goes it is ready for stiffening. Purchase 15 cents' worth of glue. Pour the boiling water over it and let it wet the basket thoroughly. Then put it over a crock or a willow basket the same size and stretch it into shape. Fasten and leave until dry. Afterwards remove it and give it one or two coats of shellac. Then it is ready for the ribbon and the lining if you wish to line it.

Here are the directions:

A chain of 8. Join in a ring.

First row—Four chain tr cro [thread over once] 20 times in the ring. Join.

Second row—Five chain, tr cro in every st with one ch between each tr. In each round don't go through the st, just take up the back half of each tr.

Third row—Four ch, 2 tr in first st, 1 tr in next two; there will be 2 tr in every third st; repeat around. Join.

Seventh row—Four ch, tr cro in third st three times, ch 3 sts, tr cro three times in same st, making a shell of 6 tr with 3 ch between; skip 2 st, 1 tr in next 3 sts, skip 2 st, shell skip 2 st, treble in next 3, continue around, and join.

Eighth row—Four ch, shell in shell, 1 tr in first tr, ch 6 sts, 1 tr in last tr, shell in shell, repeat around, and join. Continue these two rows until you have 7 cro shell rows in all. The next row is for the ribbon, made just the same, only you throw your thread over needle three times; next four rows same as first ones of shell and treble; the next row, ch 1, double tr [thread over twice], 12 times in shell, 1 ch catch in the fourth st of the eighth tr, ch one, repeat around; last row, ch catch in every st of shells all around, cut thread and fasten. Now, on the round of the bottom hold the basket part toward you and make 1 tr in every st, catching in first half of st. Join.

Second row, ch 3, tr in same st and catch down in third tr of last row; ch 3 in same st, 1 tr in same st, and catch down in next third tr. Continue all the way around.

To make the handles ch 15 sts and put the chain between second row of 6 tr shell from the top, join in a ring, 1 ch, double cro around the ring until the ring is filled; move your ring as you fill it. Cut thread and fasten. Make another handle opposite this one.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"WILL you please give me the address of the woman who has silk pieces to give away? She signed herself Mrs. H. I will more than appreciate your kindness and will do what I can in return.

I am sorry to say that the silk pieces have already been bestowed in other quarters. So many requests have come for them that we could have used far more than Mrs. H. possessed. Is there not some one else in the Corner who can take up this inquiry and supply the need of this correspondent?

Request Met Generous Response.

"Let me thank you for passing on my address to some kind persons who have responded generously to my request for books for my children. Two of the books which came were especially appreciated and then loaned and will probably pass through several other hands and be read and reread. If my mention and request have been so liberally answered what must be the good and the joy the Corner is spreading all the time to those who are more deserving than we or whose needs are more urgent. Thank the Cornerites also for their inclosures of cards and their letters with offers of reading matter. To some of these I will write myself. Your helpful department is most interesting. I have tried several of the recipes and found them excellent. As to the sunshine and cheer spread by the Corner, there is no means of measuring. Let me thank you again for the real pleasure you have given me.

Mrs. E. A. T."

This letter gives me genuine happiness to print as an appreciation and an indication of the good constantly wrought by our faithful Cornerites. Never was there a finer and more helpful band of workers than ours.

Embroidery to Exchange.

"I would like to exchange an embroidered centerpiece for a Bible, slightly used. I would pay postage. I would also like to do Hardanger embroidery on half shares.

Mrs. C. F. F."

I suppose the desire to do the embroidery on half shares means that one person will supply the material and the other do the work. I am not altogether positive that I am correct in this surmise, but I will be glad to give the address of this correspondent to any one who has a Bible to give in return for the embroidery or desires to correspond relative to the shared work.

Wants a Banjo.

"I have been wondering if some one of the Helping Hand has a banjo that is no longer cared for and that could be passed on. My son is a cripple and fond of music, and especially of the banjo, and if he only had one it would be a pleasure to him and help him pass the long lonely hours he is compelled to spend by himself. I am trying to make a living by sewing, and am of course unable to buy him anything which is such a luxury as a banjo would be. We could pay for the express on it. My boy is an enthusiastic 'scout' and perhaps some other scout would help him gain his wish.

Mrs. M. W. D."

What a hurt there must be in seeing one's son crippled! Is there anything too much for the well and strong to do to help such a condition? I hope soon to have a request for her address and the offer of the banjo.

Wheeled Chair Would Help.

"My husband, who is in the '60s, has been sick for more than a year with anemia. I have to work for our living at great inconvenience, since he is too sick for me to leave him alone, so I have the washing I am able to do for the neighbors brought to me in order that I can do it at home, where I can be near him. What I feel the need of most is a wheeled chair for him to sit in so that he could get about by himself and so I could push him about with less difficulty than now. He is able at times to sit up in a rocker, and if any Corner reader has a wheeled chair that is no longer in use it would certainly be a great blessing to us.

"Mrs. M. J. M."

You see the plucky wife makes no complaint that the care and the support of the sick man as well as his nursing should come upon her. All she asks for is the chair in which the sick man can be more comfortable and which will enable her to help him from place to place with less difficulty. I will gladly give her address to any one who can aid her by the gift or the loan of the chair she desires.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address, Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Took to His Heels.

I have had the experience of being proposed to by a young woman. I had been keeping company with her for about five weeks. She was 19 years old and I was 20. It was a beautiful moonlight night and I was taking her home from a dance. We had stopped in the middle of a river bridge and, after looking at the water a while, she turned to me and asked, "Will you feel offended if I ask you a question?" I said, "No, I guess I won't."

Then she said, "Will you marry me?" Now, up to that time I never had thought of getting married and I was quite shy around girls, so this is what I did (I suppose it was because I was so flustrated). I said, "O!" and then I ran like some one was after me and left the poor maiden standing alone on the bridge. I have seen the girl a few times since, but she never speaks to me.

SEVERE ECZEMA ON HANDS AND WRISTS

Hands Swelled and Cracked. Torture to Put In Water. Itched and Burned. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Was Healed.

Bendon, Mich.—"My eczema began as small water blisters on my hands and on the outside of my wrists. My hands swelled and cracked, and how they did itch! It was torture to put them in warm water. The breaking out on my hands was very unsightly. It itched and burned so I would scratch until it would bleed. Then it would hurt worse than ever and the itching did not cease. Lots of nights I would scarcely sleep at all for the itching and burning.

"I got remedies but the trouble would return as soon as I quit using them. Finally I wrote for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which was promptly sent. The samples helped then I bought a box of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In less than a week the itching ceased and the eczema began to get well. Before I had used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and the Cuticura Soap I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Chas. Bowman, June 30, 1914.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVERS ARE DANGEROUS

Don't use poisonous so-called superfluous hair removers.

You may escape permanent injury if you use so-called hair removers, but you cannot escape an increased growth because after each removal the hair is bound to grow out more bristly and in time it will become so coarse that nothing will remove it but a razor.

The only safe way to remove hair is to devitalize it. It is useless to use pastes or rub-on preparations because they only remove hair from the surface of the skin. DeMiracle, the original liquid depilatory devitalizes hair by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin.

Imitations of DeMiracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that DeMiracle alone contains which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Remember DeMiracle is the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. Insist on the genuine DeMiracle and you will get the original liquid hair remover. Others are worthless imitations—refuse them.

DeMiracle is sold at all good stores, including the Public Drug Company and Buck & Rayner's five stores. The truth about the treatment of superfluous hair mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. B, Park Ave. & 129th St., New York. —Advertisement.

Love Letters of a Lonely Girl

This is the tenth of a series of "Love Letters of a Lonely Girl" which will appear every week in "The Sunday Tribune."

DEAR, Dear You: I am very angry with You—yes, dear You! Why, O, why, do you delay so long in coming to me when I need you so? Don't you know that I have more problems to solve than I have brains to meet them? And don't you realize that a dream man is sometimes very trying also by his very silence and that I can't always go on with just a visionary being for comfort? Not always can I the barren boughs of fact with the leaves and fruitage of my dreams adorn! I've done that for long now, and tonight I am heart hungry, weary in soul, tired in body, and depleted in brain. I need the One—just You—beside me to comfort, to give me out of your greater vision light for my path, direction for my acts.

Things just happen—I no longer try to find out why—and I need you, O dear Man o' Dreams, so please, please come to me soon. The whole of my heart, the devotion of a life, all the jewels of my woman soul will I give to you if you will but come quickly and claim them and lift me from the shadows which surround me into the sunshine of your love and the peace of your protecting guidance.

Time drags with "leaden feet" indeed! And loneliness aches none the less if in multitude or solitude. Who was it said that "One is never so much alone as when amidst the crowd"? I forget—but anyway I know that it is true.

Determined that Wellington Holme should never know how much he had hurt me, I've plunged into the seas of humanity, desperately endeavoring to forget his unforgivable act. It has been ten days since I've seen him or heard from him, and I've lived over hundreds of times in memory the scorching pain, the bitter humiliation of that last hour I saw him in the studio—and regret always attends such thoughts. Why, O, why, couldn't he have been different and remained just the good friend he was in the beginning when I so needed a friend and kind of help he gave to me? Why? Why?

I haven't cared very much this past week about anything. I've drifted with the tide as it came. Perhaps I am growing a little reckless or indifferent, or is it that I feel my helplessness against a fate and a world too big for me to cope with alone? Anyway, in my loneliness I have accepted things as they came.

After that morning's gallop with Floreau and listening to his impractical but beautiful dreams, and then in the afternoon of the same day to be dismissed by the aunt of Malcomb Dorr as a "young person" unfit to be her companion because her nephew happened to be acquainted with me, I came home feeling something between an outcast and a "talking post" between the two.

Janet Dorr phoned me the next morning and asked me downtown to luncheon, saying: "Don't mind Auntie; she's a religious old crab—I'll tell you all about it when I see you."

Tired of my problems and my thoughts and myself—I was glad to go. I met her at a fashionable café in the heart of the loop. She seemed very much at home there. The waiters fairly jumped about to serve her, even the maitre de hotel coming to our table to see that she was pleased. Her arrogant insolence toward the waiters surprised me—it was a new phase of her. Our own negro servants had always been commanded or spoken to so differently! Catching sight of my expression, she laughed.

"O, fee, fi, fo, fum, Apple Blossom, don't look so horrified at me. When you have lived up here as long as I have you'll do the same thing. These servants don't work for love, and they are trying to please for the fat tip which they expect—and will get if they earn it. I despise them all; I know them. If I don't put them in their place they will put me in mine—according to their estimate, be sure. It's a necessary evil I'm practicing. you see."

While she ordered the luncheon I watched th panorama of life in the street below, of which I never tire, in Chicago; it is so sweepingly impressive.

Presently the waiter put before us glasses filled with the prettiest pink stuff, with a tiny green leaf floating the creamy top. "What is it?" I asked Janet.

"Drink it and you'll find out and like the answer," she replied.

I did drink it, but its sweety bitter I didn't like, and the fire of it ran through my veins unpleasantly and blazed into my cheeks. Janet laughed at me and drank hers more slowly and to the "unsophisticated kid"—the Apple Blossom girl. I think she was trying to tease me a bit to lift me out of the doldrums perhaps.

"Now tell me exactly what happened between you and auntie," she said during luncheon.

I told her how kind her aunt had been until her brother came into the room and, recognizing, had greeted me.

MY SHOPPING CONSISTED MOSTLY OF "WINDOW WISHING"

"Just like auntie," she giggled. "She's a delicious old snob and my brother Malcomb her one idol. I suppose she had visions of danger to him in your pretty face. Just forget it. You see, father and mother are in Japan just now and auntie is looking out for us; when they return things will be different. Why did you apply for the position anyway? Must you work?"

Her sympathy and the stimulus of the pink drink caused me to lose my head a little. I blurted out the whole story of my utter aloneness in Chicago, that I must have work, and how it was I had no longer had work within the studio of Wellington Holme and what we had quarreled about.

"Is that all? Is that all he said or did to you?" asked Janet.

"Why—yes; that was terrible enough, wasn't it?" I replied.

"Terrible? Well, that depends upon the point of view—you funny little old fashioned kid, you. Don't you see the man is in love with you—crazy about you? Why, half the girls of our set would give their head to make Wellington Holme lose his head over them like that. Do you know who Wellington Holme is, anyway?"

I confessed that I did not.

"Couldn't you judge by the studio that he must be of some importance in the artist world at least? Did you never ask any one about him?"

I shook my head, feeling very gauche and foolish somehow.

"Well, you don't deserve it, but I'll tell you about him. He is one of if not the greatest of our American painters. He is a veritable hermit; his studio is his cloister and art his god. It's next to impossible to coax him even to the border of society; he hates it. Outside of his art his whole devotion is given to his old mother. I know them both well—his mother and mine are great friends. And if he had kissed me like that, either within or without his studio, believe me, I'd not have sulked about it," and she laughed merrily.

"You—of course with you it would have been different. You have wealth, position, home; I have none—I was only his model."

"What a lot of silly pride it has in its foolish head," she mocked. "Just you get those notions of class and caste out of your pretty pate once and for all. Our men up here may be different in some ways from the chivalrous gallantry you've been accustomed to in the south, but we have just as for-sure-true gentlemen here as there. And because a girl works for her living she is, if anything, the more honored by them for it. And you may be quite sure that Wellington Holme is above all else a gentleman."

"But your aunt—she felt differently because——" I stopped, half choked trying to swallow the tear lump rising in my throat.

"O, auntie," she said carelessly, "she belongs to another age and she is absurd on the question of Malcomb and her Mayflower ancestry. And she wants Malcomb to marry none less than a princess of old England—fat chance!"

"Princess?" I gasped.

"O, there you go again, silly, taking everything in such deadly earnest. Come out of it, can't you? Joke—j-o-a-k—joke—can't you see? You'll be the death of me yet." But she gave my hand a squeeze across the table and added: "Come on, now, let's go shopping for a while."

My shopping consisted mostly of "window wishing," but Janet bought for herself a lot of lovely frou-frous. I was too occupied with my thoughts of what she had just told me of Wellington Holme to have more than a vague thought of longing for the beautiful things.

Afterwards we went to tea and Janet phoned her brother to call for us with the machine. We had a long, lovely drive and dinner in an inn set on the very edge of the lake. And we sat out under the trees and watched the stars come out and the moon arise until quite late.

I regretted to leave the loveliness of the night and come within doors—I would like to tell you of all the things we talked about, but it is too late now. I began writing you immediately we returned, and it's now after midnight—good night. Next time I'll tell you of things and people more interesting perhaps. One thing I want to know—was I silly, foolish, gauche, and all wrong in being so resentful toward Wellington Holme? That's the question puzzling me. Janet Dorr thinks so. Perhaps I will wake up with the answer in the morning. Sometimes answers come that way.

Dear, dear You, wherever you are this night, may a kiss from me in blessing rest upon your lips from your BETH.

Dear You: I wrote you until very late last night, but I just want to say "Good morning" to you this glorious day! At 5:30 Bonnie Dandy and I were in our little park across the way. Not a soul abroad at that hour—the world in its fresh, radiant loveliness was ours alone! And how rich we felt in being the sole possessors of all that wealth of beauty before us!

The seats, the fountain, the parterre of tulips are now quite hidden from outside view by the thick foliage of the many trees. Once within the little park square one is completely hidden in a fairylike, translucent veil of undulating greens as the wind lifts and lays the leaves, shimmering and sweet scented, in the early morning.

It's like a small world within itself—this park! In the earliest morning hours the stragglers—the "beloved vagabonds"—possess it; then come the workmen filing through with their "hundred hands of labor" clutching their dinner pails and with faces unaware of "the golden gates of morning"; after them come the halt, the lame, the ill, and the old to bask in the sunshine and read; then the school children gayly trooping through, their voices enhancing the bird music, always there. After these the nursemaids come and transform the place into a nursery and playground. By 10 o'clock these have disappeared and the chronically idle, the lazy, and men from whose worried faces and low toned earnest talk one knows are strikers, and men who have "causes" to exploit, talking in loud, belligerent tones, and who usually, the greater the "cause" he carries, the fewer and worse his clothes!

It is as if the caldron of life were brewing out there in the heart of the open, and from which the nearby churches and great educational Newberry arose only as vapory, shadow substance from the real life forces!

The 7 o'clock whistle scattered my thoughtfest and reminded me, too, that I was hungry. We hastened homeward.

At my breakfast plate I found—what do you think? A long stemmed exquisite creamy white rose! Attached was a card on which was written "For the east window of Miss Beth." That was all—no name whatever!

I questioned the servants; all they knew was that a boy had delivered it, without a word.

Who, O who can it be? Have you, dear You, found my living place and me and are announcing your coming by this method? I'm so curious and excited about it! It's so mysterious and so wonderful, because I know so few people! If it be dear You, how did you find out where I lived and my name? Tell me that! I've kissed each velvety petal, hoping, wishing, praying it may be You, my dear, wonderful, beautiful Dream Man, who has sent this white messenger that breathes a sweet hope of happier, coming things!

O dear, dear You, surely it must be you alone who could find the way and in such a beautiful way announce your coming to me. I will wait and see! And today, what will it bring to your own BETH.

Miss Mildred Whiting Dennis, Whose Engagement to Wed Morris E. Hughes Is Announced.

News of Chicago Society

By Mme. X.

AN ingratiating, affable April has been followed by a rather grouchy, unfriendly May. Fur boas have been as much in evidence as if it were January. The white fox neck piece is especially à la mode and promises to be a regular part of the summer wardrobe and will be worn with muslins and other diaphonous costumes. I don't think, were the power of original vocal utterance restored to all these white fox boas, that they would bark. I fear that some would baa-baa, other meow, while still others might emit the rabbit's timorous cheep cheep.

In England summer furs have always had a decided vogue. The fur cape and cotton gown of the British dame or damsel a quarter of a century ago excited the amused comment of untraveled Americans who were not familiar with the asperities of the English climate.

Lady Algernon Gordon Lennox, who visited Chicago the year before the Columbian fair and who was acclaimed the best dressed English woman of her day, created much talk during her sojourn here by sporting a sealskin skirt and thin muslin waists. The skirt was cut in the sheathlike shape made fashionable by Mrs. Noah (according to the Noah's ark tribes in modern playrooms), but it was considered as the height of extravagant luxury by awestruck Chicagoans.

The chief social event of the last seven days was the vaudeville dance benefit given at Mrs. John Borden's residence on Friday afternoon and evening to help raise a fund for the Mrs. Borden Turner's French flying field hospital. This was a great success both from an artistic and financial point of view. Contrary to most undertakings of a similar nature, more money was raised than the most sanguine of its promoters had ventured to hope for.

A number of gay dinners were given at the Casino to fill in the interval between the afternoon and evening sessions of the entertainment. The Casino is having its final fling before the many distractions of summer draw its devotees in other directions. The work on the tennis courts is nearly finished. Such summer residents of Chicago as Eames MacVeagh, Howard Gillette, and Clive Runnells expect to have daily games there as the sun sinks to rest behind the Gothic pile immediately west of the club grounds.

It is with real regret that Casinoites learn that "Harry" Howard, who has done so much to promote and set the club going, has been obliged to resign from the vice presidency of the club and chairmanship of the house committee. This is owing to a nervous breakdown consequent on a severe attack of grip in February, an attack which was undoubtedly aggravated by the fact that he had really worn himself out in the service of the young organization. The great success of the Casino has been largely due to Mr. Howard's untiring efforts in its behalf. Mr. and Mrs. Howard have gone west and will probably spend the summer in southern California.

The regular Wednesday evening club dinner at the Saddle and Cycle was an especially large and gay affair last week, in spite of the northeast gale and pelting rain. Among the out of town guests there was Mrs. Harry Gordon Selfridge, who has arrived recently from England. She said that her husband had not long ago made a trip from London to Berlin and back to London again via Holland. The expedition was safe, comfortable, and without hindrance. The bread tickets issued daily to every one were the only unusual and curious signs of the war he noted in Germany.

One of the most interesting of the week's visitors was Mrs. Bryan Lathrop's guest, Mrs. Edward Wolcott, of Buffalo and Genesee valley—and the world, for she is a social favorite in most of the capitals of the world, and, as the term goes, "knows everybody."

In spite of being not far from three score years and ten, she is active mentally and physically and has just returned from visiting the war hospitals in England and on the continent. She had many experiences and much opportunity for enlightened insight into conditions over there, which she describes with great convincingness and unusual power of racy, brilliant narration.

She became especially interested in the work being done by the American volunteer ambulance corps, of which Henry James is president. It was practically started by Charles Eliot Norton's son, Richard Norton, who was on his way to some archeological investigation in Asia Minor when the war broke out. He got near enough to the battle lines to realize the imperative need of some speedy and systematic transport for the mangled wounded if any French manhood was to be rescued for the future of the country, and he, with some rich young college mates, organized this corps.

From October to March they transported between 7,000 and 8,000 wounded from the battlefields to hospitals in the rear. Many of these wealthy young Americans furnish the ambulances and run them themselves. They are now asking for more ambulances and more volunteer chauffeurs. As no assistance of any kind is accepted in France unless it is under some recognized organization, this corps is working under the leadership of the Knights Templar of England, that ancient and honorable band of helpers organized at the time of the Crusades.

By her own efforts Mrs. Wolcott has raised $7,500 for this undertaking since she returned to this country in March. She was entertained during her stay here by the Arthur Aldises, Mrs. John Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, who gave several dinners and luncheons in her honor.

Still other claims on our sympathy and attention come from an English couple, Sir Arthur and Lady Herbert, who arrived on Thursday bringing letters to many Chicagoans. They want to enlist interest in an Anglo-American relief fund. Verily one has to be a Rachel to glean anything in our thoroughly harvested and thrashed out fields.

One of the unique and interesting social affairs of the week was the tea that Mrs. William J. Calhoun gave on Friday afternoon to the visiting delegation of Chinese merchants. Her house on Astor street is a real museum of rare, curious, and beautiful Chinese things, so that her celestial visitors must have felt more or less at home in a foreign land.

A quite Chinese touch was given to the affair by the guests of honor. The tea was to have been on Thursday afternoon. The Chicago friends invited to meet the citizens of the "middle kingdom" were bidden, the refreshments were prepared, when Thursday at noon the visiting Chinese telephoned to Mrs. Calhoun that as the weather was so bad (and it was bad!) they would come Friday instead of Thursday. As there were fifteen Chinese and as many more local lights, it took all Mrs. Calhoun's well recognized executive genius to switch the party off to twenty-four hours later—but she did it.

The plans that Dangler & Adler are making for the now famous colony on Lake View avenue, near Diversey parkway, are taking form and shape and promise a charming bit of eighteenth century English architecture of the Adam period. They are to be an English basement, three story, two with mansard roof, and are to be built of black brick with white joints and painted white stone trimmings, facings, and cornices. Green shutters and flower trimmed iron balconies will give color to these typical London exteriors.

George Porter's house on the north and Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's to the south, with their greater size and mansard roofs will flank the row of dwellings with a certain extra imposing effect. Their balconies are to be supported by pillars, while those on the intermediate houses will be held up by stone brackets.

Balconies are rather a new fad in Chicago architecture. Considering their charm as outside adornment and the pleasure they add to city life by affording a place to sit out in the air and sunshine, it is a pity they are not more used.

In the apartments at 909 Lake Shore drive that Ernest Walker put up two years ago, besides the glassed and screened-in sun parlors at the west end of each apartment, there is on every floor a quite open balcony in a sheltered niche near the east front of the building which makes an ideal spot for a sun bath or a quiet breathing spell in the open air. Even on frosty winter days, if the sun shines, one can sit out in these nooks quite comfortably. Many of the residents in this building have their morning coffee there behind the protecting screen of the massive stone balustrades.

To return to the Lincoln park colony, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's house and those of Abram Poole and Harry Dangler will be begun immediately. Already the red brick dwelling that stands on the site to be occupied by Mrs. Ryerson's residence is being rapidly pulled down. So swift is this work of demolition that the wreckers nearly wrecked young Perry Smith's automobile that had had a refuge in the ancient stable to the rear of the vanishing house. The car was rescued somewhat the worse for wear.

David Adler also plans erecting a small and chic "maisonette" for himself to the west of Mrs. Ryerson's house. George Porter, the Frederic C. Bartletts, and Ambrose Cramer are not quite so precipitate in their building. In fact, Mr. Cramer is rather undecided as to whether he will build at all, and may relinquish his part of the property to some other more eager would-be home builder.

George Porter's mother, Mrs. H. H. Porter, is planning to move out of the large Porter mansion on Erie and Cass streets and to occupy the house just south of her daughter, Mrs. George Isham's handsome residence on North State street. This new abode will be remodeled inside and out, the scheme being to make it outwardly harmonious with the striking Georgian exterior of the Isham house, one of Gamble Roger's chef d'oeuvres.

By the way, the charming rims of growing pansies on the edges of the Isham balconies make one wonder why more people do not contribute this mite towards a city beautiful. In New York and Boston and, above all, in London, flower boxes give a delightful finish to almost every house of any pretense to elegance and to many an otherwise plain and simple dwelling. Nothing so adorns and makes beautiful a city as such a floral house trimming. Some of our downtown business blocks are adopting this custom. Especially are banks beginning to vie with each other in decking window ledges with green growing plants and vines. It has an extraordinarily happy effect on the hurrying pedestrian in those crowded, clamorous streets to look up and see masses of verdure smiling out from a background of grim, grimy walls.

Fancy Chicago with every window ledge and balcony rim adorned with flower boxes—even the inconspicuous back balconies where lurk the icebox and clothes basket. Wouldn't there be a moral effect on the populace, one perhaps impossible to measure or predicate, but nevertheless perceptible?

Creeping furtively up Rush street and upper North State street is a quiet, commodious jitney bus. It bears no sign on it as to whence it comes or whither it goes, but if you hail it it will stop and take you up north near where the polar bear doth roam the arctic circle or south as far as State and Madison streets. For a time it boldly ran unchallenged through Lincoln park, but now it, with great delicacy of feeling, runs on a parallel street because the park board is considering its case with a view to granting it a permit to take the park in in its route.

If this unobtrusive little bus line, posthumous heir to the old carettes (of blessed memory) should be the forerunner of a smart, up to date, double decker motor bus line that should connect the university with Buena Park, it would be a matter of real moment to the community. Even more than we need the connecting boulevard link, the Field museum, and other promised delights, we need such a line of public carriers that would serve the people alike for business and pleasure.

Such a line is promised. A company is said to have been organized with a capital of $200,000, which will have a herd of double deckers driven by responsible chauffeurs. Midsummer should see the cars running. Let us motorless people hope that both the city and park will give them permits to run in streets, boulevards, and park roads. Think of being able for 10 cents to take a ride of miles through green avenues and gardens!

The "angel" of the scheme is Miss Emily Larned, who has for months devoted herself, in a purely disinterested way, to furthering this or any other project to bring such a transportation scheme to a realization. She has interviewed city councilmen and park commissioners and argued with them.

When she found that Montague Ferry, head of the public service in the late municipal administration, had laid out twelve motor bus routes for the city, not one of which touched the long eastern tangent, she went to him and fiercely demanded why he had omitted the route with the most crying need of all. He crumpled up and proceeded immediately, with her connivance, to plan such a route. She got up a petition signed with 1,300 names, which she presented to park boards and the city council praying for such busses. She received letters from milliners, shop girls, clerks, stenographers, and all sorts of people saying that such a bus line would be an inestimable boon to them as a means of taking an airing under pleasant conditions along attractive routes.

New York has no more delectable a treat than a ride on the top of a Fifth avenue bus up that famous thoroughfare, over to Riverside drive, and to Grant's tomb. Tracy Drake says that many of his hotel guests ask as soon as they arrive if there isn't such a bus line to enable them to see something of the city.

Among those who helped Miss Larned were Mrs. Roy McWilliams, Mrs. W. Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Lockwood Honoré, Mrs. J. D. Fallow, Mrs. H. A. Bischoff, Mrs. Heaton Owsley, Mrs. Samuel Chase, Miss Eleanor West, Miss Helen Clark, Miss Mary Newberry, Miss Anna Morgan, and Miss Nellie Carpenter. Mrs. Ogden Armour was the first to sign Miss Larned's petition when it was brought into a meeting of the Lafayette Kit association. Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. R. Hall McCormick, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, and many other prominent north siders eagerly welcomed the idea.

One thing it would do, it would put the Chicago university on the map. If ever a great institution of learning was sequestered and made inaccessible it is this famous institution. Except to those who own motors it is a quite unattainable spot, far from all more humble means of transport. It is curious that all the twenty-five years of its existence here have not remedied by a quarter of an inch this serious defect.

News of the Chicago Women's Clubs

By Inez Travers.

SEVERAL important events have been happening in the Lake View Musical club. The annual luncheon was held at the Hotel La Salle, at which the list of new officers was announced. For the coming season the club will be governed by the following women: Mrs. William M. Thompson, president; Mrs. Charles F. Hagenaw, first vice president; Miss Pauline Stein, second vice president; Mrs. Gilbert Wynekoop, recording secretary; Mrs. O. W. Brecker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. G. Cook, treasurer; Mrs. C. B. Bartlett, auditor; Mrs. D. O. Hill, financial secretary. Three new directors were also elected, as follows: Mrs. J. W. Buell, Mrs. Cora Willis Ware, and Mrs. A. J. Ochner. Several members of the club gave luncheons last week for the incoming and outgoing boards.

The club's annual concert was held this year in the Lincoln park refectory. The program consisted of some numbers by members and the contest for the scholarships by the protégés of the club.

This year the club gave three $100 scholarships, one for violin, one for piano, and one for voice, which were awarded at the concert contest.

The judges of the violin contest were Bruno Steindel, Henry Weisbach, Franz Esser, Otto Roehrborn, and George Dasch. Of the piano contest the judges were Ella Dahl Rich, Mrs. Bruno Steindel, Howard Wells, Silvio Scionti, and Victor Heinze. The judges of the voice contest were Mrs. O. L. Fox, Lucille Stevenson, Mme. Linee, Gordon Campbell, and Charles W. Clark.

The contestants who received the scholarships were: Abe Sopkin, violin; Josephine Rogers, piano; Clara Schweinfurth, vocal.

Next year the club will again give the scholarships. The extension committee will continue its present work of arranging for municipal and charitable concerts and paying the artists who have applied to the club for aid. The sum paid on these occasions is never less than $10. When the concerts are given in out of the way places the club also pays the expenses of the artist and always pays for the accompanist. Men and boys who cannot become associate members of the club are also helped in this way if their ability is found sufficient by the club jury.

A new reciprocity plan has been arranged for next season by which the presidents and chairmen of the program committees of the various women's clubs have promised to engage student musicians for their programs at the suggestion of the Musical club.

A loan fund has also been established to give funds without interest or security for the continuance of a musical education or for living expenses of such young musicians as shall be recommended by the loan committee until such time as the musicians shall have become self-supporting. Then they may repay the loan in small amounts.

Many of the members who have gowns which they have discarded with the change of seasons rather than because of wear have promised to give them to the club sewing circle to be repaired and made over for some needy young woman trying to educate herself and needing all her funds for schooling.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Mrs. Marye, Wife of the American Ambassador to Petrograd Returns

by Mme. Y.

MRS, GEORGE T. MARYE

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Who should come walking in this week to New York on the Christianfjord but Mrs. Marye, wife of the American ambassador in Petrograd! I had known her over there this winter, and when I saw in the newspapers she was in town lost no time in calling her up to ask about all the folks in Siberia. This afternoon we had tea in her apartment at the Ritz, and I gleaned a number of exciting items. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Whiffen, he of the Associated Press and both of them formerly of Chicago, have taken a cottage in Finland for the summer. Mr. Whiffen will commute to Petrograd. If he has the same luck that I did in traveling through Russia he will succeed in getting to his work about three times a week.

If war has created barriers it has likewise made a new field of neighborliness. By reason of barring up all of the well known paths of travel it has popularized all of the out of the way places of the earth. Had there been no war I should never have gone to Russia, Mrs. Marye would not now be coming home from there, and neither of us should ever have been to Karumgi.

This is a metropolitan center near the north pole. Up to the time of the war nobody had ever been there except the inhabitants, about ten in number. Even the sun visits it only occasionally, and then for not more than an hour or so at a stretch. The popular way now for getting out of Russia is up the length of Finland and down the Scandinavian peninsula.

This afternoon the conversation ran something after the following:

"You remember that bridge outside Karumgi over the Tornea river?" Mrs. Marye was the speaker.

"Yes! Did any sleighs fall in when you went across?" Sweden absolutely declines to be connected with Russia by rail, and for this reason travelers by this overland route must drive twenty-five miles by whatever means at command to catch the last rail in the northernly Scandinavian railroad. When I made the trip four of the sleighs of our party went under.

"The one that carried my baggage was inundated all the way across, and I could see the trunk containing my best and only clothes drag through the water."

It was an undignified trip for the wife of an American ambassador to be subjected to. Sometimes I wonder what would become of queens and these titled people who cannot stir without a certain amount of ceremony if they would have to get from one place to another in times of war. Mr. Marye telegraphed for an automobile to meet his wife at Karumgi to drive her that bleak and bitter twenty-five miles across the Scandinavian frontier, and thereby he doubtless surprised the inhabitants of the town. They said what in their vernacular is equivalent to "Thraint no such thing."

The way Mrs. Marye finally did get transported those twenty-five miles was in a two wheeled cart behind a furry pony with lap covering of straw and smelly skins. For companion she had a perfectly strange man whom she has seen not before or since. Her four modest trunks came tumbling after in another more or less staple cart.

When she and the ambassador went to Russia the way was opened up for them through the warring areas, and the ambassador said to his personal aid: "Now remember we have twenty-four trunks, and I am going to be extremely disagreeable if one of them fails to show up." As a matter of fact, they all came clean through Germany, and Mrs. Marye showed up in the capital of the Russian empire as well dressed a woman as America could wish to represent us at a foreign court.

Travel hourly grows more difficult, however, and when returning Mrs. Marye issued no hard and fast proclamations regarding her four modest trunks. If they were lost, submerged, or abandoned then they were merely to be charged up to profit and loss.

As if there were not enough destruction going on by malicious human instigation and as if the wife of our representative had not had her share of hardship, did she not meet with an awful mishap on water. Having carefully selected a boat of the neutral Scandinavian line, it just naturally and quietly and without assistance from the Germans caught on fire. For most of two days the passengers traveled with their life preservers on and were threatened with destruction from hour to hour.

The question naturally arises, why, having accomplished the enormous task of arriving in Russia, does one not remain there until one's period of service ends? Mrs. Marye is ready with an adequate answer. She left the most charming of little daughters, as quaint as a conventionalized little girl of a colored illustration, at home. She has come over to spend the summer with her, and in the fall—if one may make plans ahead that have their setting in the warring nations—she will take the child back with her. They are going to California to spend the summer, and will probably return to Russia by way of Japan.

She will then take a palace of forty rooms that requires at least thirty servants to run it. That is to say, if it requires thirty American servants it will demand at least sixty of Russian nationality. It has two bathrooms, scores of gems of art, one bathroom unheated and furnished with a carved tub in which the water does not run.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker gave a dinner at Sherry's on Thursday evening at which they "put over" a complete surprise. They invited twenty-five guests and placed them round a heart shaped table in the center of which two hearts made of electric lights were intertwined. Beneath them stood a silver loving cup on which was engraved the words: "This evening the engagement of Marie Louise to Gurnee is announced."

Thus was made known the engagement of Miss Marie Louise Wanamaker, daughter of Mr. Wanamaker and granddaughter of John Wanamaker, merchant and philanthropist, to Gurnee Munn, son of Mrs. Charles A. Munn of Washington. Mr. Munn was graduated from Harvard in 1911.

Four Generations and the Oldest 90 Years Young!

IT is possible that somewhere about Chicago or its environs there may be found a more interesting family group than that shown in the accompanying picture, which comprises the family of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Rudolph of Highland Park, but it is doubtful. Mr. Rudolph is a native born Chicagoan, is president of the Chicago Guarantee Survey company, and his home in Highland Park is known as Linden park.

This group shows four generations. All the parents through the four generations are alive. The parents of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph, the great-grandparents of the little ones shown in the lower row, have in the case of the former celebrated their sixty-second wedding anniversary and in the case of the latter their sixty-third anniversary. The ages of these venerable couples range from 90 years, the age of Mr. Rudolph's father, Joseph Rudolph, to 83 years, the age of Mrs. Mark Canmann, the mother of Mrs. Rudolph. They all enjoy the best of health.

While Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rudolph were both born near Carlsbad, Austria, within a few miles of one another, and grew up there they did not meet one another until they had come to this country.

Mr. Rudolph was involved in the revolution of 1848 and became an object of vigorous search on the part of the authorities. He managed to evade them, however, and fled to this country, coming to Cincinnati, where, together with Fritz Massacrek, another refugee, he started one of the first German newspapers in that city. After remaining there about three years he went to St. Louis, where he met the one who was to be Mrs. Rudolph, and after a brief courtship was married. He came to Chicago in 1853 and for a time kept a notion store at North Clark and Michigan streets. Later he conducted a small jewelry shop at Clinton and Randolph streets, on the west side, where he remained until the early '60s, when he embarked in the furniture business at Randolph and State streets. He was put out of business by the fire of '71, after which he engaged in the manufacturing of furniture. He retired from business about twenty years ago, and with his wife and daughter resides now at 527 Briar place. He has been for many years a regular contributor to the Wochenblatt, a Chicago German paper.

Mark Canmann, Mrs. Rudolph's father, was born in Germany nearly 90 years ago. He came to this country in 1840, settling in St. Louis, where he was married in 1852. He retired from active business about twenty years ago. For a number of years he and his wife have resided with their son, Harry L. Canmann, vice president of the Guarantee Survey company, at 5446 Michigan avenue.

Middle row—Mark Canmann, father of Mrs. Rudolph; Mrs. Mark Canmann, Mrs. Joseph Rudolph and Joseph Rudolph, mother and father of Emil Rudolph. Lower row—Mrs. Albert Heller, a daughter, and husband, Albert Heller, of B. Heller & Co., manufacturing chemists. News of the Religious World

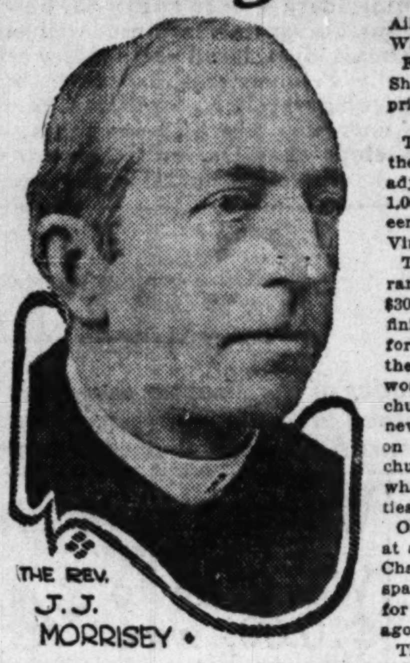
By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

A DOUBLE celebration will take place next Sunday at the Blessed Sacrament Catholic church, located at South Central Park avenue and West Twenty-second street. The Rev. John J. Morrissey, the pastor, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood and the pastor and parishioners, assisted by former members of the parish and priests who once served there, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the church building.

Father Morrissey became pastor of the Blessed Sacrament church three years ago at the death of the Rev. J. M. Dunne, who ministered to the parish for twenty-one years. Father Dunne was a cousin of Father Reardon, pastor of St. Elizabeth church, Forty-first street and South Wabash avenue, and of the late Archbishop Reardon.

The church building was erected under the pastoral labors of Father Dunne. Father Morrissey has erected a rectory which cost $13,000 and has in mind extensive plans for the erection of a new church or the enlargement of the present structure, which is proving itself inadequate to the growing congregation.



THE REV. J. J. MORRISEY

Father Morrissey was born in Rockford, Ill. He was ordained to the priesthood at Niagara, N. Y., where he completed his scholastic studies. Previous to his coming to the Blessed Sacrament church he was for more than five years pastor of St. Finbarr's church, 1356 South Harding avenue. He also served the Immaculate Conception church, Highland Park, Ill. Members of these parishes are expected to attend Father Morrissey's silver anniversary.

The services on Sunday will include high mass, at which Father Morrissey will be the celebrant; a sermon which it was hoped would be preached by Archbishop Quigley if his health permitted, and in the afternoon a confirmation service.

On Monday there will be a memorial mass for former members who are deceased.

On Tuesday pontifical high mass will be celebrated. Bishop Muldoon of Rockford will be the celebrant. In the evening a banquet will be served in the church basement and Bishop Muldoon will be one of the speakers.

Bishop Muldoon was assistant priest at St. Pius' church, South Ashland avenue and West Nineteenth street twenty-five years ago when the Blessed Sacrament parish was formed as a mission of St. Pius'. Father Conway, the present pastor of St. Pius' church, will also be one of the speakers at the evening entertainment.

A special feature to which the promoters of the celebration are looking forward with especial pleasure is the choral singing of those who were once members of the choir and are now living outside of the parish or have ceased for other reasons to sing in the choir. William Ryan, formerly the leader of the choir, will lead on this occasion. He has the names of 123 persons eligible to sing and has the promise of seventy to be present if possible. At his first rehearsal there were forty-five present. The choir will sing two choral selections. As fine as it is hoped the music will be, the chief delight is held to be the anticipation of a reunion of old time friends.

Priests who have at one time served as assistant priests of the parish who are expected to be present at the banquet are: Father Bennett of St. Patrick's church, Kankakee, Ill. assistant at the Blessed Sacrament church for thirteen years; Father H. M. Shea, assistant at St. Thomas' church; Father John Burns, pastor at Kinnan, Ill., and Father Philip E. Traynor, St. Ailbe's church, Ninety-second street and Washington avenue.

Father W. J. Ryan and Father T. H. Sheridan are at present the assistant priests of the Blessed Sacrament parish.

The children are also to have a share in the silver jubilee. A parochial school adjoins the church which has in it about 1,000 pupils and is presided over by eighteen Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The entire property of the Blessed Sacrament parish is valued approximately at $300,000. The church itself is the least finished portion of the group of buildings, for it was felt that the first necessity was the housing of the children and of the workers, the clergy and the sisters. The church is now to be redecorated. If a new building on a new location is decided on it is the purpose to devote the present church building to a parish house in which can be carried on the social activities of the parish.

One of those who expects to be present at some or all of the services is Mrs. Dr. Charles Broadway, who turned the first spade of sod when ground was broken for the church building, twenty-five years ago.

The father of the first altar boy, Michael O'Connor, is a member of the parish. John O'Connor, who was the first altar boy, is a veterinary surgeon under the government employ.

The parish has furnished one of its number to the priesthood. He is the Rev. William Cummings.

Men who are well known in political life who are members of the parish are William Ryan, former alderman; Frank Ryan, a member of the board of review, and William F. Brennan.

The following are the committee chairmen who are arranging the celebration: On arrangements, Thomas J. Garrity, chairman, and Mrs. Mary Delaney, secretary; executive, Nicholas J. Sennett; entertainment, Mrs. Denis Shanahan; resolutions, Edmond J. Sennett; invitations, Mrs. J. F. Mehren.

The officers of societies and organizations:

Chief ranger of the Blessed Sacrament court of the Catholic Order of Foresters, Dennis S. Shanahan.

President St. Vincent de Paul society, George Martin.

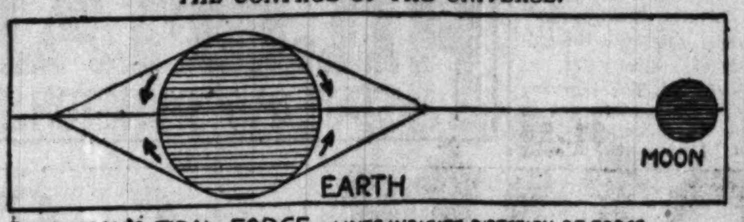
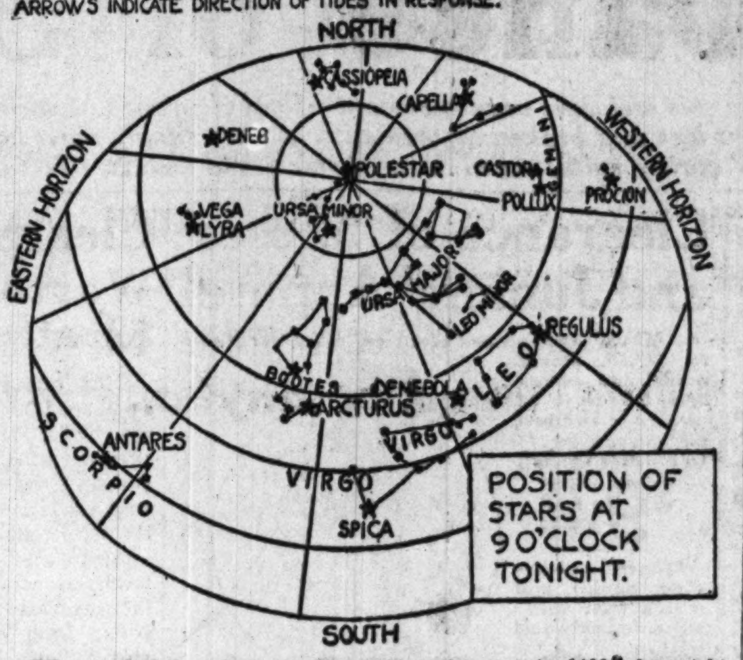
ASTRONOMY.

THE CONTROL OF THE UNIVERSE.



THE MOON'S TIDAL FORCE LINES INDICATE DIRECTION OF FORCE. ARROWS INDICATE DIRECTION OF TIDES IN RESPONSE.



THE control of the universe employs two factors. One is the original direction of celestial bodies, the direction they would take under their original impulse if their course were unmodified by any other force. The other force is that of attraction, gravitation, which modifies the original impulse.

This body, governed in part by its original impulse which, unmodified, would send it speeding ungoverned and unregulated through space, whirling past us once like a meteor or comet and on never to be seen again, bound for whatever expanses of space may lie beyond the imaginations of men.

This body, governed in part by its original impulse, is under the control of the earth's attraction. If the original impulse were wholly overcome by the attraction of the earth the moon would not continue to circle about us, but would fall to join the earthly mass which attracts it. It is constantly falling and constantly resisting the force which prompts it to fall. The conflict produces a stability of course and procedure. Enough of the original impulse remains to resist sufficiently the attraction of the earth. Thus the moon circles the earth, firmly held by the control of the universe.

The sun, thus attracting the earth and thus resisted by the earth, receives the circular devotion of this planet. The other planets, yielding to the same complication of conflicting and equalizing forces, retain their ordered places.

The great binary systems of suns submit to the same law. Look at Antares in the southern sky, the great red star in the south that looks like Mars and is therefore called Antares, and see a binary system, its companion hidden from sight, which represents two suns revolving about a common center of gravity.

The moon not only yields to the earth's attraction but it exercises upon the least resisting part of the earth, its oceans, a force of attraction itself, and the result is familiar in the tides. The fluids of the earth respond to this pull. The full force of the pull is directed toward the center of the body affected. Therefore there is a tendency on the part of the earth opposite the moon to draw away from the waters covering it and on the part of the waters nearest the moon to draw away from the earth in the direction of the focus of the lines of force emanating from the moon. The diagram above shows the lines of force as they come from the moon and the arrows represent the responsive trend of the tides.

The sun also exerts a force of this sort upon the earth, but, although its power of attraction is much greater than that of the moon, its tidal force is less. To state it mathematically, the force of gravitation is inversely proportional to the square of the distance, but the tidal force varies inversely as the cube of the distance.

If the sun exercised upon the waters of the earth the same force that it exercises gravitationally, the ports would be inundated with each tide and the seacoast would be swept with a wall of water.

"Moloch" at Powers'; News of the Stage.

By Percy Hammond.

Miss Beulah's Dix's thorough aversion to war strangely enough has led her to few excesses in writing about it in "Moloch." That is to say, few excesses that are not corroborated by the chroniclers who are on or about the spot. Perhaps it is for that reason that the play wavers on the rim of success fiscally and as propaganda—though the experts assert that its unrelieved mark of pessimism is its handicap. Her honesty "wears no disguise nor ornament"—an unprofitable virtue in the theater. Even the dialogue of "Moloch" has a straightforward colloquial quality without showy smartness or epigram—a sacrifice to sheer naturalness inimical to large royalties.

However, those who enjoy the gloom and thrill of the war correspondence in the weekly and monthly periodicals will find similar diversion double distilled in "Moloch." There is in it little of Gilbert's "animated rattle of a complicated battle and the rum-tum-tum of the military drum"; and the hopeless romance of it is not smeared with vendible sentimentality. It is just a picture of war as it is seen by a woman who broods over its madness and devastation, and who is able to write of it tragically and equitably.

Still at the risk of cheapening her work a bit, Miss Dix might bestow upon it a glimmer of brightness as a concession to those who need it. The audiences thus far show themselves to be eager to laugh at lines not comic in themselves but merely inconsequential against the stark background of the fable. One of the few gaudy devices of the play—that of the foreign doctor on his knees reciting the child's prayer and then recalling it in the delirium of battle—might be waived for something lighter and less tawdry. It seems, too, that the hatred of this doctor by his former friends after the declaration of war is too abrupt to be reasonable. He has saved their child from diphtheria, imperiling his own life in the process, and mere nationality appears to be insufficient cause for their abrupt enmity. So heartless a household, you feel, does not deserve your sympathy. This malignity might well come later, as a brutalizing effect of war; it is one of the weak spots in the construction.

In case you plan attendance on "Moloch" it may be well to know what you will see therein. Soldiers in the prologue go forth to war with valor and confidence. The home they leave is invaded by other warriors, humanely enough, until a servant frenzied at the death of her kin, slits the throat of one of the invaders. She is then shot and the household is wrecked (somewhat superfluously) and burned, causing a sick child to die. A noble surgeon, now an enemy aviator, blinded, captured, and in unspeakable agony is told that he has thrown a bomb upon a hospital train, killing hundreds of his own country's wounded. His former pal and captor, bestialized by war and drink, tortures him by refusing to shoot him—and as he cries, "Please, God, let up on me!" his friend's wife, a nurse, pities him and poisons him. There is a battle in the trenches—a spectacular thing with smoke and the sound of guns and shrapnel—and a falling wall, very real. A harmless conscript, weakening at the thought of further killing, is shot by his colonel, and through it all a small waif wanders in and out of his ruined home, pleading for his father, who is hanging from a tree in the orchard, a discovered spy.

In the epilogue Miss Dix has achieved something like "Socratean irony." The victorious nation is going to war again as an ally of the land it has just conquered and against its former friends. The men of the family are eager to take part in the new war, but they are unable so to do because of what they sustained in the old; one of them is a drunkard, the other a helpless cripple, despairing as he hears the soldiers go by to the march music, while his mother—a symbol of suffering from war—utters the words, "Marching! Marching!"

News of the Stage.

Arnold Daly and Miss Dorothy Donnelly have been quarreling as to which of the two was responsible for what both call the "original hit" of "Candida." Neither gives the slightest credit to George Bernard Shaw. Miss Donnelly, engaged by Mr. Daly to play in the comedy last week in New York, withdrew as a result of the squabble, and her doing so gave to Miss Hilda Spong, who has been in Australia for some seasons, a chance to renew her appeal to American audiences. The American history of "Candida" has always had to do with an actor. The late Richard Mansfield first possessed the right to play it in this country, but he dropped his plans for it when he failed to find an actress whom he regarded as suitable for the name part. Afterward, when he had engaged Shaw's own choice of an actress—Miss Janet Achurch of London—Mr. Mansfield decided that he, himself, was too mature and corporeal for the part of the poet, Marchbanks, and for the second time abandoned the play. The best all round performance of "Candida" so far given in Chicago was that of two years ago in the Fine Arts theater by Miss Horniman's company, although as an organization it was deficient as to most of the plays in its ambitious repertoire. Miss Irene Rorke and Milton Rosmer were respectively the Candida and the Marchbanks of that performance.

James K. Hackett, heir to a million dollars, will tomorrow evening risk part of the sum on a play called "The Bannock Mystery." Brandon Tynan wrote it on a basis of the stories about Craig Kennedy, detective. Miss Katharine La Salle of Chicago and Norman Trevor, who was here in November with Miss Grace George in "The Truth," will be in the cast.

"Why?" is the title of the chief item of the program to be given in New York by the Lambs' club for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. "Why?" is an allegory in the style of "Everywoman." Hobart's "Experience" has been one of the financial successes of the season in New York. The new "morality" has to do with war and peace.

Miss Lena Ashwell, remembered here by a few theatergoers for 1907 performances in "The Shulamite" and "Mrs. Dane's Defense," is acting successfully in the London music halls in a one act play called "The Debt." She is, in this, an English spy who manages to unearth German secrets by pretending to be a woman of the streets.

T. Roy Barnes is to make his bid for stellar rights on May 31 in a new play called "I Want Money!" Miss Grace Valentine, Walter Wilson, John Daly Murphy, and John Floor are well known players in the cast.

Miss Billie Burke, according to report, will hereafter appear under the management of her husband, F. Ziegfeld Jr., whose opinion it is that she has "never yet had a decent play," although the general opinion was that "The Mind-the-Paint Girl" was pretty good. Moreover, Miss Burke's tour this season in "Jerry" has been prosperous far beyond the common.

The scope of the cut rate ticket scheme used in New York to give an appearance of prosperity to failures is indicated by the fact that one of the agencies of the reduced price turned in for a single week the sum of $4,200 for half rate seats for a play supposed to be a popular success.

Tomororw in Atlantic City a new war play will be produced. "Under Fire" is the name and Roi Cooper Megrue, who wrote "Under Cover," is its author. Another Atlantic City experiment is George Nash, starring, for the first time, in "The Three of Hearts," a dramatization by Martha Morton of Harold MacGrath's "Hearts and Masks."

Pavlowa's manager, Max Rabinoff, says that he is in negotiation with three stars of the Chicago Grand Opera company for next season—Tetrazini, Maggie Teyte, and Mary Garden. His scheme for the wonderful Russian dancer's next season has to do not only with ballet but with opera and pantomime also. It seems that Pavlowa's vogue in Russia is based no more upon her grace as a dancer than her skill as a dumb-show actor; and Mr. Rabinoff thinks that the next season is the right time to display her as such an actress. As to his singers, he says: "If I may have all three, I shall gladly take them—fixing the prices accordingly, but I have set my heart on getting Miss Teyte, who has not yet had a real chance in the United States. As to Miss Garden and Mme. Tetrazini, it is a matter of terms."

Douglas Fairbanks is quitting the cast of "The Show-Shop," a play by the author of "The Chorus Lady," which seems to be a hit in New York. It has to do with the secrets of "back stage."

As an example of what the competition of the movies means to producers of plays in "regular" theaters, it is stated that Holbrook Blinn has an offer of $1,500 weekly the year round to act for the camera. He figures in another aspect of the competition; he is acting in "Moloch," his name being "featured," while optitoriums in the neighborhood advertise him as the star of "The Boss," a photo play.

George Beban, the actor of sad Italians and comic Frenchmen, is to be the star of an entertainment combining the spoken drama with the movies.

Lyn Harding, who has been acting in the English music halls all season, is to join George Alexander for the London production of a play called "The Day Before the Day." It is by Chester Bailey Fernald, an American writer, author of "The Cat and the Cherub," a mild sensation of the late '90s.

The Frohman-Belasco revival of "A Celebrated Case," with N. C. Goodwin and Otis Skinner, is not to be brought to Chicago.

Granville Barker, replying to an offer for a week's Chicago engagement of his company in one of the several Greek tragedies he is reviving for performance in the eastern universities, wired to ask that he be guaranteed not less than $6,000 as his share of the week's receipts.

Miss Reine Davis (Mrs. George W. Lederer) is acting for the film the part played in 1904-05 by Miss Ethel Barrymore in "Sunday." Mr. Lederer is at the head of a picture-making corporation.

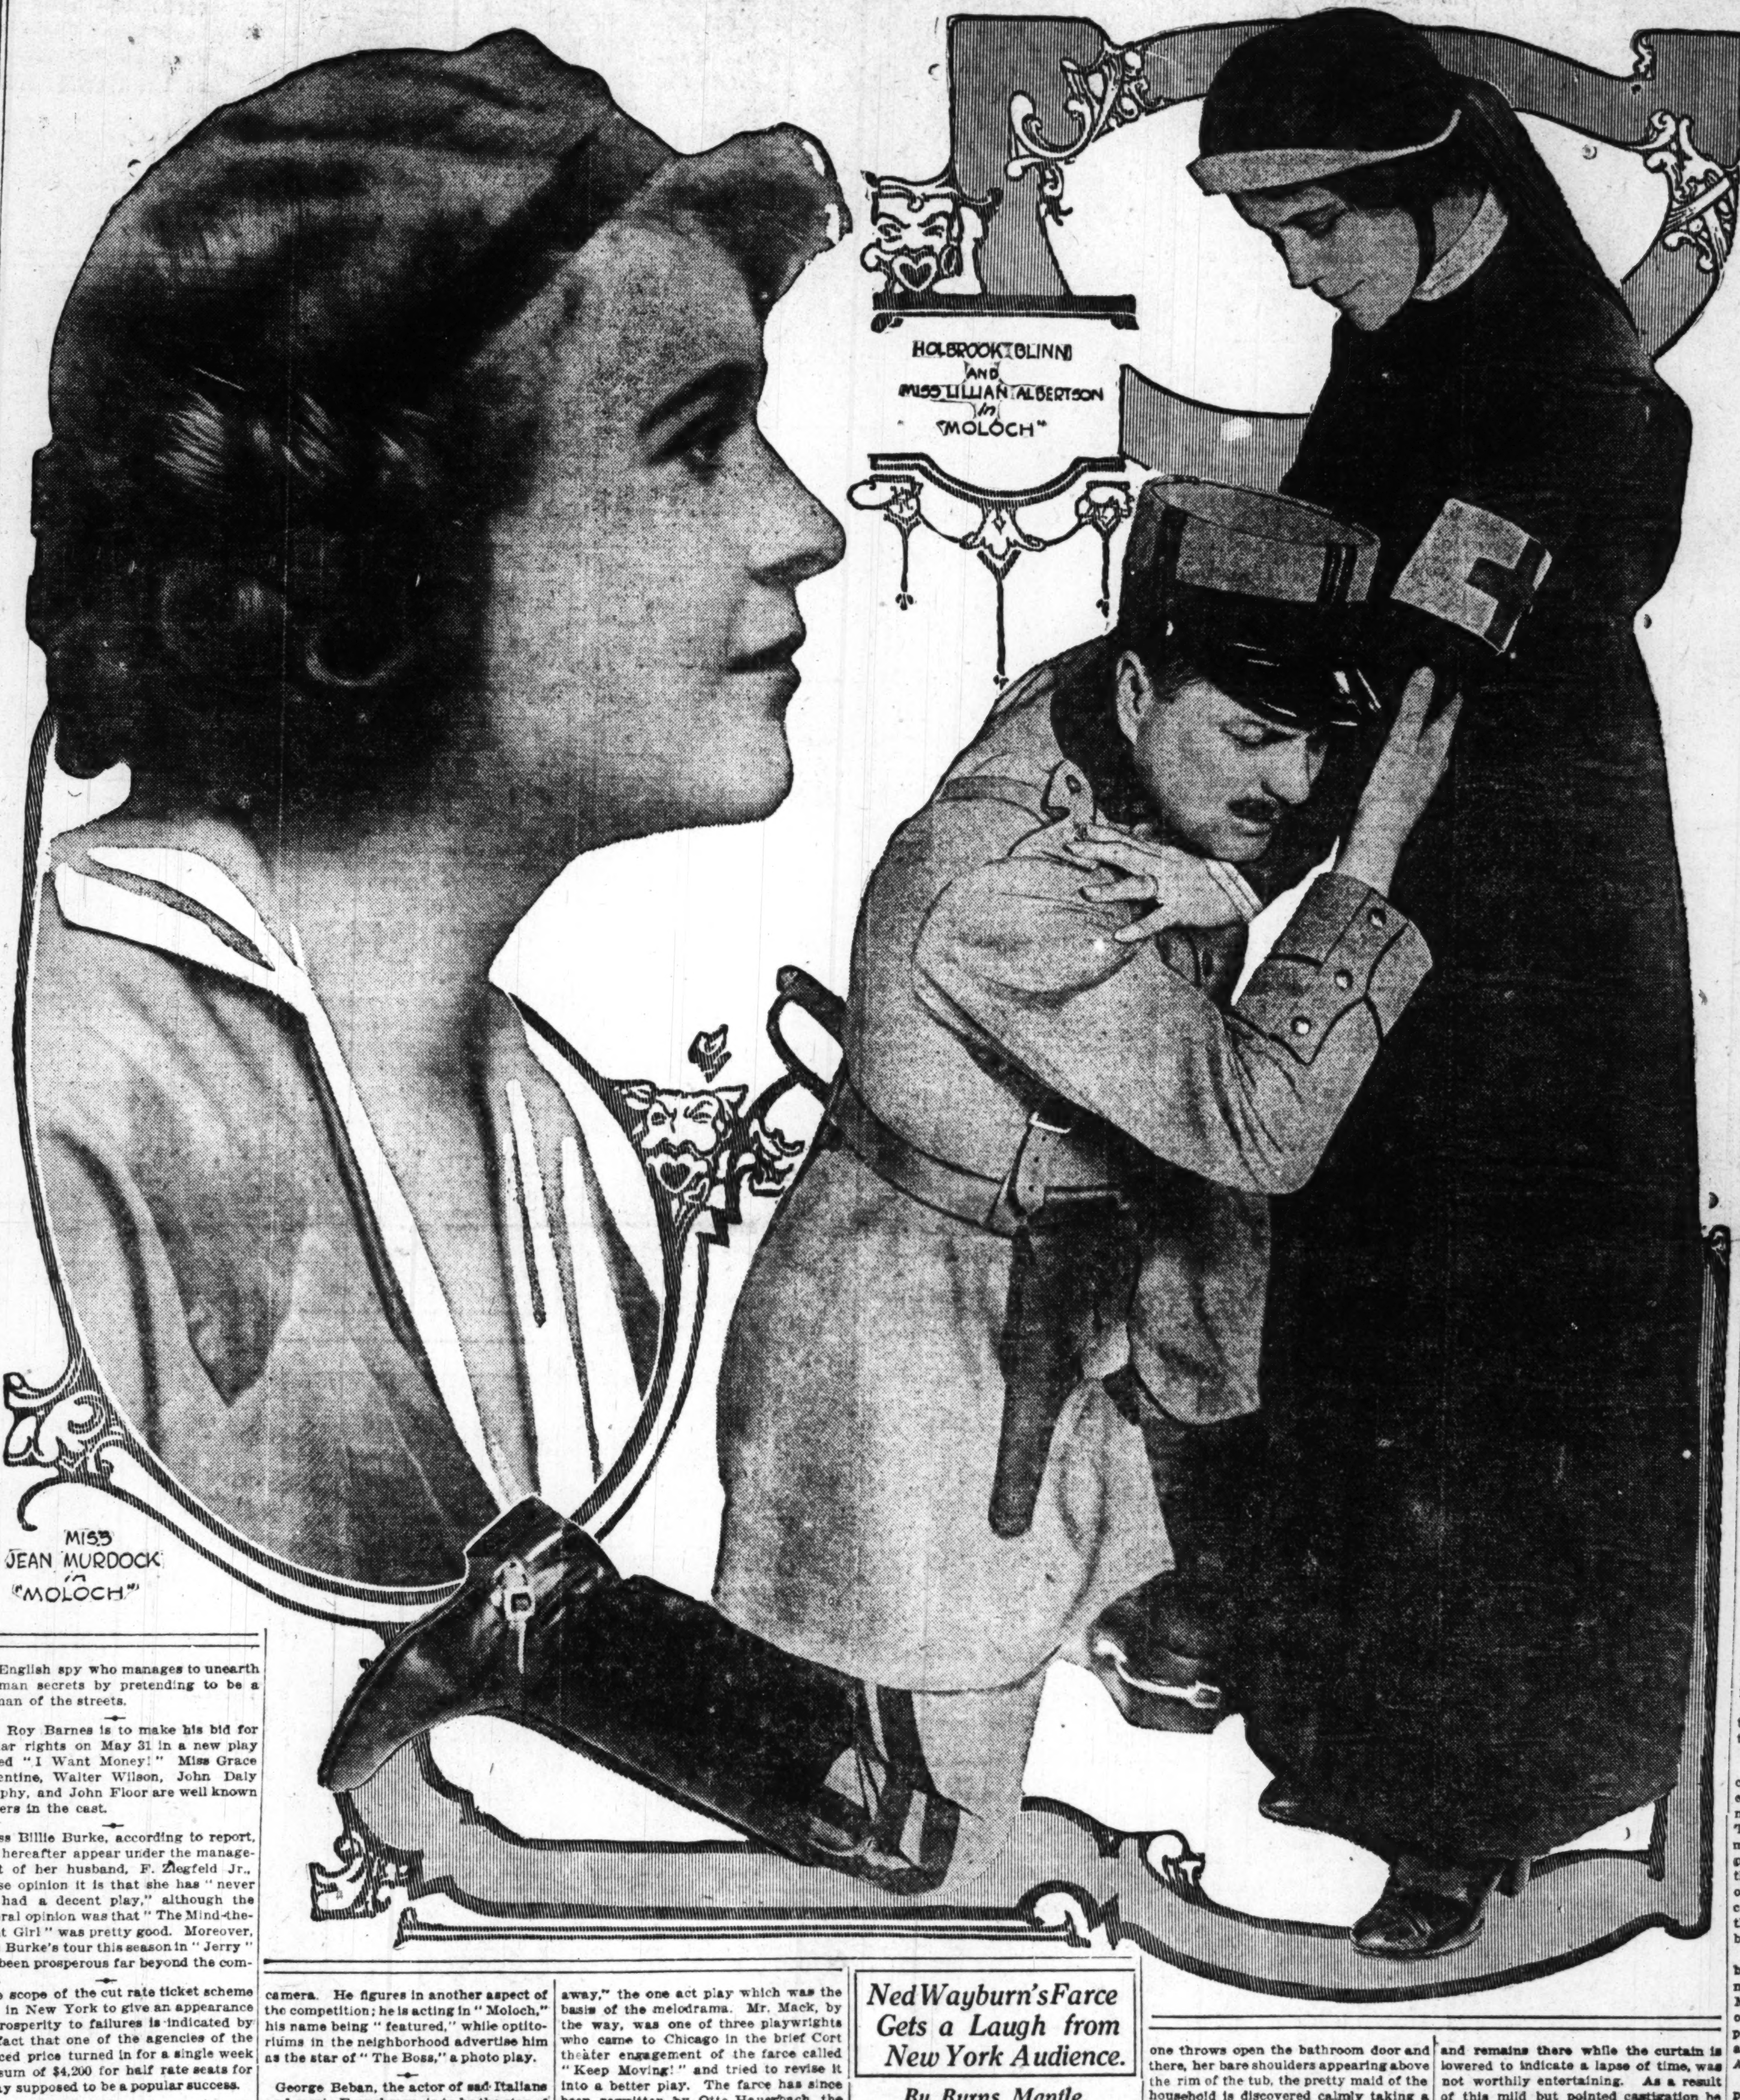
A New York firm of producers has found a use for chorus men out of work. They are paid $5 a week to sit in the theater and start applause at the performances of a musical play which is somewhat less than a hit.

Willard Mack has been compelled to turn over royalties on "Kick In" to a minor actor to whom, some years ago, Mrs. Mack sold the right of "Their Getaway," the one act play which was the basis of the melodrama. Mr. Mack, by the way, was one of three playwrights who came to Chicago in the brief Cort theater engagement of the farce called "Keep Moving!" and tried to revise it into a better play. The farce has since been rewritten by Otto Hauerbach, the librettist, and is being acted in New York as "The Full House." That title would have been cruelly ironic in the Chicago adventures of the play.

Miss Anglin's engagement in "Beverley's Balance," by Paul Kester, will begin next week at the Grand after the close of the run of "The Songbird."

Bickel and Watson, who won a measure of popularity in the early editions of "The Follies," are to take on as a co-star E. L. Wrothe, once an associate of theirs in the minor theaters.

George C. Tyler, then the executive of the Liebler company, tried three years ago to induce the Russian ballet troupe, headed by Nijinsky, to come to the United States. When he and the troupe's management got through figuring, they found that it would be necessary to take in $5,000 a performance to clear expenses. "Even my optimism as to the American theatergoer," says Mr. Tyler, who recently failed for $350,000, "was staggered by the sum. I mean by that, I couldn't guarantee such receipts, and, at the same time, keep up such productions as 'The Garden of Allah,' 'The Daughter of Heaven,' and 'Joseph and His Brethren.' But I believe that the Nijinsky ballet will set a new pace in expenditure on the part of American theatergoers. It is a wonderful troupe—and wonderful without in any way taking from the greatness of Pavlowa. She has no rival in the new company—not even in Karsavina." Mr. Tyler's observations are worth while in this case. He has been for sixteen years the chief importer of foreign talent for the American stage.



HOLBROOK BLINN AND MISS LILLIAN ALBERTSON IN "MOLOCH"

MISS JEAN MURDOCK IN "MOLOCH"

Ned Wayburn's Farce Gets a Laugh from New York Audience.

By Burns Mantle.

New York.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mr. Ned Wayburn, who began an active theatrical career ten years ago in Chicago by staging various amateur entertainments for the talent of Woodlawn and other suburbs, and who since has become an authority on the physical gyrations of the syncophated chorus girl, realized the ambitions of his recent years last Monday by becoming a producer of legitimate plays.

"Legitimate" we used in the broadest sense, for this particular venture of Mr. Wayburn's is concerned with one of those bald French farces that depend largely upon the use of a bedroom scene as a setting and various suits of pajamas as decorative comedy.

The scene causing the most hilarious laughter is that of the last act in which Miss Ada Lewis, returned to her familiar characterization of an ugly female on the trail of a likely juvenile, matrimony intended, is by mistake assigned the bedroom occupied by the young man she is pursuing. With the lights turned down she emerges from the dressing room clothed in a suit of blue pajamas much too large for her, glances hurriedly under the bed, and leaps in. Shortly the youth appears, also pajamaed, calmly brushes his hair in illustration of the vanity of heroes, and slips in beside the now thoroughly startled Ada.

Shrieks and consternation! The house is roused! Ada is comically perturbed! The ingénue but recently engaged to the juvenile becomes noisily concerned in a pink silk peignoir and two long braids of auburn hair! The comic family arrives in various states of undress! Some one throws open the bathroom door and there, her bare shoulders appearing above the rim of the tub, the pretty maid of the household is discovered calmly taking a bath. Hurried explanations, a readjustment of the sleeping arrangements, and the final curtain follow.

A much better farce, the best of the spring crop, in fact, is called "A Full House." The farcical formula here employed is quite as familiar as that used in the Wayburn farce, but the construction is much more skillful and the players more efficient. "A Full House" has Herbert Corthell as a fat burglar and May Vokes as a stupid maid to carry the fun. Corthell steals a necklace in Boston, loses it in a wreck on the New Haven, and traces it to George Parsons who had taken the burglar's grip out of the wreck thinking it was his own.

Parsons' wife opens the wrong grip, discovers the jewels, and accuses her husband of a double life. The maid hears stories of the reward offered for the necklace, sneaks it from her mistress' handbag, hides it in her stocking and telephones for the police.

The house is surrounded, no one is permitted to leave, and the farcical complications pile up. Finally Corthell coaxes the jewels from Miss Vokes, turns them over to the lady from whom he stole them, collects the reward, and escapes.

The Messrs. Shubert, as may or may not have been reported to you, decided some weeks ago that they were being unfairly treated in the columns of the Times in those reports of their plays written by Alexander Woollcott, who succeeded Adolph Klauber as the dramatic editor of that paper. Mr. Woollcott gave particular offense to the managers by intimating that "Taking Chances," a "snappy" farce in which Mr. Lou-Tellegen invades the bedroom of the heroine and remains there while the curtain is lowered to indicate a lapse of time, was not worthily entertaining. As a result of this mild but pointed castigation he was forthwith barred from all other Shubert theaters.

Reporting the situation to his editors, they promptly elected to protest formally and legally, and the next time they sent Mr. Woollcott to a Shubert theater they had him convoyed by an attorney for the Times and accompanied by a Supreme court injunction forbidding the managers either to molest or interfere with his seeing the performance.

Against this injunction the Messrs. Shubert took action, asking that it be vacated forthwith on the theory that the theater is a semi-private institution and its managers the sole judges of who shall and shall not make up its audiences. They cited in support of this claim that the Appellate division of the Supreme court had so decided in the case of James S. Metcalfe, dramatic critic of Life, when that veteran writer was similarly barred by the Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger. The judge favored their view of the case and vacated the injunction pending a later decision.

This week he handed down a second decision, intimating that while critics may or may not be useful as critics, they are entitled to some little consideration as citizens and taxpayers. Showing the judge has a sense of humor as well as of justice. Since the Metcalfe decision, his honor pointed out, the legislature has passed a civil rights bill which guarantees to every citizen equal rights in all places of amusement, public or semi-public, so long as he is a good citizen. The case, however, must go to the Court of Appeals before a final decision can be made of it, the original injunction holding pending appeal.

Three Festivals of May; Urban and Suburban.

By Ronald Webster.

Cook County is becoming addicted to celebrations of May. May festivals, spring festivals, musical, and simply entertaining, festivals for the benefit of the war sufferers—whom we thus aid by forgetting—and festivals for commercial purposes, or for advancing the fame of a municipality—all of these have been promoted or are being promoted within the limits of this densely populated county.

Three of these festivals are music festivals. All of them take place this week. There is the Evanston festival, five performances in four days, employing all the means which a wealthy community may command. It begins tomorrow evening. There is the spring festival of the Civic Music association, which will begin at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and finally there is a chorus of 1,000 young women from the Sunday schools in the county, assembled under the auspices of the Cook County Sunday School association. This will be given at the Auditorium theater on Friday evening.

Mr. Lutkin, a daring and resourceful gentleman of much musical wisdom, has invested his Evanston series with even more than its usual glamour. This is the seventh musical orgy of the north shore. He has, as usual, the Patten gymnasium for his auditorium. It is transformed from a field for ambitious youths, who may some day bat near the top of the American league, into an impressive temple. There will be present of course the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Mr. Stock and all, and divers opera singers, most of them from New York, recipients of fabulous stipends. This is not exactly a spontaneous outburst of the people or the community. I believe, in fact, that Mr. Lutkin heightens the effect by every known artifice at his command. The works he will offer represent an art as far away from fevered May time of history as the Russians are from Berlin.

This is also true of the two other festivals. The one, at the Carter Harrison High school, is the first attempt of the Civic Music association to show that Chicago, or parts of it, can sing.

Nine choral bodies (one of them the Bohemian domestic girls' chorus, which news stories assert, will fill the rearward parts of residence districts with pleasant sound), from seven parks, will perform. Two classes of students of Dalcroze eurythmics will caper and curvet. At this festival also Mr. Gunn's new American symphony orchestra will make its first public appearance.

The festival has interested men and women who believe in making their hobbies useful as well as entertaining. Some of them are Mrs. George B. Carpenter, Mrs. Frank Jerome, Mrs. Burton Benson, Mrs. E. E. Reininger, Mrs. Charles L. Allen, and William H. Rehm. The wife of the mayor has promised attendance.

It would be exciting to make deductions from such facts as these, the facts of studied and not traditional celebration of May. All one finds necessary to begin with is the assumption that these May festivals of all kinds, musical and otherwise, are a kind of modern Floralia, recrudescences of the pagan worship of Maia.

This kind of spring fever has broken out again in a milder and more civilized form. It is no long erotic in nature. That phase of it, indeed, is so far forgot that even Mr. Comstock (who would hale Maia into a night court) is probably not aware of the doubtful symbolism of a Maypole.

Our spring festivals are no longer merely urban, they are urbane. Inquiries among country bred folk indicate that with them the May festival is dead. Small cities may have them. Rural communities do not. Lack of information concerning the state of May day among the automobile owners of the rustic districts must be pardoned. These places boast no press agents.

May has moved from the spacious countryside and has taken an apartment in town.

The first communication other than a cablegram from Mr. Campanini and his entourage to reach Chicago since the maestro sailed in April, was received Thursday in the Auditorium. It was mailed at Milan, and told that the Campanini party was on its way to Paris, there to seek to round up the big singers of the French wing of next season's Chicago opera organization. The arrival of the party in Paris has since been verified by cable.

Mr. Campanini's especial purpose in being in Paris now is to make arrangements with Vanni Marcoux and Lucien Muratore, two of the world's greatest opera singers today, and both of immense popularity in Chicago as a result of their appearances in the 1913-14 season in the Auditorium.

"Ruffo," writes Mr. Dafber, Mr. Campanini's secretary, "remains the idol of Italian operagoers, and wherever we go we are asked as to how Chicago liked the great baritone. Milan is overrun with opera singers out of work, all eager for American contracts. Even the minor singers are of the belief that they can get any sum they ask for to sing in the United States, and seemed puzzled when told that the big money is paid only to singers of proved box office attractiveness."

Both Muratore and Marcoux, it will be remembered, were reported as killed in battle as long ago as September last, shortly following the announcement that the 1914-'15 season would not be given. Later the report was denied—first as to Muratore and then as to Marcoux. Crabbe also was listed among the fighting singers who fell when the war was new.

The expectation isc the Campanini party will, after leaving Paris, seek a German conductor of the first class for the Wagner operas which are to play so important a part in the new season's repertoire in the Auditorium. It is known that Mr. Campanini's preference in German conductors is Siegfried Wagner, who has never been in the United States. Nikisch is regarded as out of the question—not that he is not desired by the management, but because it is unlikely he could be induced to leave Europe. His position there now is authoritative and unique. He gets $1,000 a concert for conducting, and singers and instrumentalists value his praise more highly than that of any music critic on the continent. So, much as the Chicago Opera association would like to see Nikisch at the desk for the five Sunday afternoons of the Ring and "Parsifal," it is quite improbable that he will be tempted.

At the Evanston Festival.

MISS SOPHIE BRASLAU

Miss Braslau, a contralto of the Metropolitan opera, will be heard for the first time in the west at the North Shore Music Festival, beginning tomorrow evening at Evanston.

Music Notes.

The St. Louis Republic has recently attacked the Illinois Music Teachers' association, which held its annual convention at Centralia, recently because the Minneapolis orchestra, not the St. Louis orchestra was employed.

"St. Louis" reads the editorial "by sitting idly by while orchestral engagements are filled by the orchestras of Chicago, Minneapolis, and Cincinnati, in nearby towns, is ignoring one of the plain conditions of metropolitan prestige."

The St. Louis orchestra has announced eight of the fifteen soloists for next year. They are: Casals, Matzenauer, Riccardo Martin, Clarence Whitehill, Julia Culp, Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, Carl Friedberg and Arrigo Serato.

The song "Your King and Country Need You" has already made $25,000 for Queen Mary's war fund. Paul Rubens, the composer, agreed when the song was published to turn over the entire profits to the fund.

An opera has been written by Hubert Bath of England around Lady Gregory's play "Spreading the News." It was produced at the Shaftesbury theater recently with good effect.

The appointments of the Bechsteins as piano manufacturers to King George have been canceled. It is understood that the home office will not renew the license of the firm to trade in England.

Rudolph Ganz is about to add to his volume of musical composition a piano concerto, partly finished, variations on a theme by Brahms, and a programmatic orchestral suite dealing with life in California.

Gatti-Casazza has requested his German singers to remain in America during the summer because of the precarious transportation.

Among the new operas which he has promised to produce is "Goyescas," music by the Spaniard, Enriques Granados. It will be sung in Spanish. Borodin's "Prince Igor" is another. Other novelties or revivals projected are Bizet's "Les Pecheurs de Perles," Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah," Zandonai's "Francesca di Rimini," Fevrier's "Gismonde," and Kienzl's "Evangelimann."

Playbills of the Week.

Powers'—"Moloch," with Holbrook Blinn. An uncommon and highly effective play about war. One of the notable offerings of the season. Its popular appeal is as yet a matter to be determined, although the box office report has been of increasing attendance. Well acted by Mr. Blinn, Miss Lillian Albertson, Miss Haidee Wright, and a numerous company. Second week.

Princess—"The Lady in Red," with Miss Valli Valli. This is German operetta, provided with an English—that is, an American—libretto by Miss Anne Caldwell. Robert Winterberg's music is pretty, and is, besides, good in the accepted manner of the Vienna school of light opera. Glenn Hall, Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, and Will Phillips are of Miss Valli Valli's support. Second week.

Grand Opera House—"The Songbird," with Miss Jane Cowl. Fifth and final week of this play by the Hattons. "Beverly's Balance," with Miss Margaret Anglin, follows on the 31st inst.

Olympic—"Along Came Ruth," with James Bradbury and Miss Florence Shirley. Yankeetown comedy, made over by Holman Day from a French piece. The play and its performance are effective as a result of the use of sure-fire matter and manner. Fifth week.

Garrick—"Dancing Around," with Al Jolson. Sixth and final week of this Winter garden extravaganza. Joseph Santley's revue, "All Over Town," follows on the 30th inst.

Blackstone—"The Shadow," with Miss Ethel Barrymore. Her acting in this play proves that she is the best of American actresses, and regard for what is worth while in the playhouse of the day should serve to send every theatergoer to the Blackstone while Miss Barrymore is there. Fourth week.

Cort—"Peg o' My Heart," with Miss Peggy O'Neill in the Laurette Taylor part and Hassard Short as the young prig, Alerio. Second week of return engagement.

La Salle Opera House—Miscellaneous program of musical comedy, specialties, and movies. The bill changes Monday.

POPULAR PRICED VAUDEVILLE.

Great Northern—Jack Kennedy in "The Flareback," and Charles Prelles' dog circus headline the two bills. Other acts are Abou Hamid's Arabs; Kolb and Harland, dancers; Willie Hale, juggler, etc.

McVicker's—Belle Oliver in "Back to Buffalo"; Karl Emmy's cats and dogs; Wahlund-Tekla trio, gymnasts; Wurnelle, a roller skater; Roland Travers, an illusionist, and others.

Colonial—"Billy" West in imitations of Charles Chaplin and Clarice Vance, songstress, will remain throughout the week.

VAUDEVILLE.

Palace—Miss Blanche Ring in "The Papa," Charlotee Greenwood and Sidney Grant in song and conversation; Conroy and Le Maire in black face comedy; J. C. Nugent in "The Squarer"; McMahon, Diamond and Chaplow in "The Scarecrow"; the Oxford trio of bicycle polists, etc.

Majestic—"The Fashion Show," in which twenty young women will exhibit especially designed hats and dresses; Miss Beatrice Herford, monologist; Miss Ray Samuels in song and dance; Hugh Herbert in "The Sons of Abraham"; Robert Emmet Keane and Muriel Window in a duologue; Max Laube, whistler; the Helen Leach-Wallin trio of aerialists, and Scanlon and Press, dancers.

Charles II. of England born 1630; Patrick Henry born 1736; Joseph Fouche born 1763; Empress Josephine died 1814. "Joy may be a miser, but sorrow's purse is free."

"If you will observe, it doesn't take
A man of giant mould to make
A giant shadow on the wall."

The Song of Songs.

THE fledglings are in the nests, in the white oak and flowering maple, in the thorn thicket and hollow tree. When the elements attack these fragile houses and when the outdoors stands green but frigid with cold or dripping and swamped in the downpour the voices of the woods are hushed. When, then, these cruel discomforts have been set aside by a return of the southwest wind and of the sun in its friendliest fashion, no human rejoicing finds the expression that comes from the trees.

White throat and cardinal, thrush and catbird, oriole and bobolink, wood pewee and vireo, oven bird and tanager, phoebe and kinglet, fox sparrow and warblers—not all nesting, some migrating—put in song a lyric of thanksgiving that will teach the early morning all the world's in tune.

This is the song of songs—that of the cardinal, a spark of sunrise in the top of the tallest oak, that of the white throat in the flowering wild crab, that of the wood thrush in the tangle of wild grapes. It is not a song of mating, but one of domesticity; not one of wooing, but one at the edge of a created home, in which there are mouths to be fed and for which there is much work to do.

The song of songs, sung to the sun of a warm morning, is one of grateful and triumphant responsibility, and when the wood thrush gives the sunset a voice, he closes, for all except the whippoorwill and owl, a day of work, and gives the day and its work a benizon.

Felix Adler (imitating a ventriloquist and his dummy):

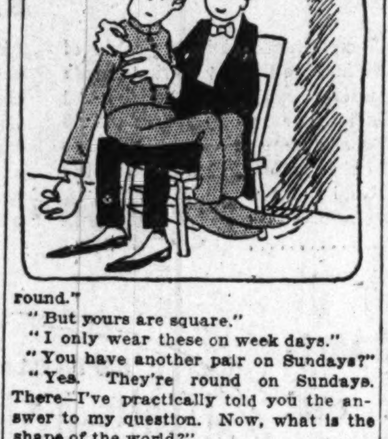
"Now, Charley, we'll have a lesson in geography."

"Yes, sir."

"What is the shape of the world? Think of the shape of cuff links usually are before you answer. Now, what is it?"

"Square."

"Nonsense. Cuff links are usually round."



"But yours are square."

"I only wear these on week days."

"You have another pair on Sundays?"

"Yes. They're round on Sundays. There—I've practically told you the answer to my question. Now, what is the shape of the world?"

"Square on week days, round on Sundays."

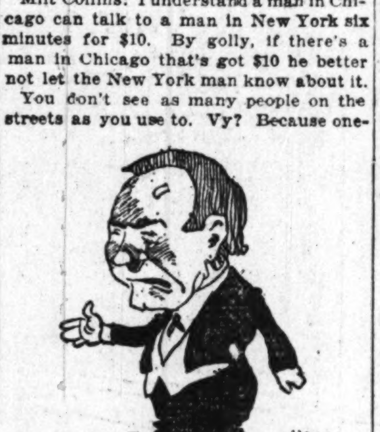
Milt Collins: I understand a man in Chicago can talk to a man in New York six minutes for $10. By golly, if there's a man in Chicago that's got $10 he better not let the New York man know about it.

You don't see as many people on the streets as you use to. Vy? Because one-half of 'em has been run over by automobiles and the other half is afraid to come out.



In the Roosevelt-Barnes libel trial Barnes says he don't care about getting the money. All he wants is to clear his name. He says he'll be satisfied with a judgment of 2 cents. Well, that's a lot of money when you consider how long Barnes has been in politics.

War has been hard on the women. Look what it did to Lille and Nancy.

BARA IN "LA GIACONDA."

CHARLES DANA GIBSON, who modeled Mlle. Theda Bara as "Sin," is quoted as saying: "Never have I had a model who impressed me as deeply as Miss Bara. In her dark eyes lurks the lure of the vampire; in her every sinuous movement there is a pantherish suggestion that is wonderfully evil and made her a perfect model for the subject I desired. This in no way reflects on Mlle. Bara, who is one of the most charming women I have ever met, and who indignantly denies—although there is no need for her to do so to those who know her—that there is any of the vampire in her nature." Miss Bara will soon be seen as the ruthless siren in the William Fox picturization of Gabriel d'Annunzio's "La Giaconda."

Henry Otto, the well known director of American productions and the man who has done much to make Winifred Greenwood and Ed Coxen famous, called the other day. He's terribly good looking and one of the most interesting "chatters" I've ever met. No wonder he's a success, for he possesses the happy faculty of making you his friend for life the minute you meet him.

Irritated by the statement of his physicians that he would be subjected to a thirty day layoff because of injuries sustained in an automobile smash some days ago, Thomas H. Ince, the director of the New York Motion Picture company, had a telephone rigged up at his bedside and by this method continues to direct the staging of productions at the studio, some distance away. A screen has also been erected in the sick room, by means of which Mr. Ince superintends the cutting of the films before they are ultimately released throughout the country.

During her recent jump from the Essanay company to the United Photoplays company Gerda Holmes stole a week's vacation, during which she toured Michigan, Illinois, and Indiana in her touring car with her husband, Rapley Holmes, who also has joined the new company.

The Majestic company of children is already at work upon the third release of the series intended for children. No member of the company is over 10 years old. Francis Carpenter, leading "man" of the juvenile troupe, is only 8 years old. Violet Radcliffe, who plays the heavies, is 7. She has been upon the stage ever since she was 2 months old. The release upon which the children are at present working is "Little Dick's First Case." It deals with the ambition of little Dick (whose father is a real detective) to become a detective.

In the present war moving pictures have for the first time officially entered the service of the official chronicler. There are the officers who keep the diaries of the bodies of troops under their command, and there are the war correspondents and the war artists, and now by their side stands the "film reporter," who with the aid of his moving picture camera faithfully depicts the war in all its fleeting details, says the Berliner Tageblatt.

Pathe has added Lionel Barrymore to the cast of the new "Exploits of Elaine." He is the brother of John and Ethel Barrymore and nephew of John Drew.

Bryant Washburn spent several hours behind the bars of the Cook country prison last week to get real atmosphere for playing the part of a prisoner in the Essanay photoplay, "The Greater Courage."

Ethel Barrymore will soon be seen in a screen version of her latest and greatest triumph, "The Shadow," to be produced by the Metro Pictures corporation.

Word comes from England that Marie Lloyd, the variety artiste, has successfully claimed £250 damages from a moving picture exhibitor through a bill poster's carelessness. The Charing Cross Cinema recently exhibited on the same program a film featuring Marie Lloyd and also another dealing with the white slave traffic. The two posters overlapped each other so that the words "white slave traffic" extended over and under the portrait of the artiste. Seeing which, the temperamental Miss Lloyd lost no time in "sicing" her attorneys.

Victor Moore is now working in "Chimmie Fadden" at the Lasky plant.

W. J. Tedmarsh, playing Quabba, the Italian, in "The Diamond from the Sky," was formerly a member of the royal northwestern mounted police and also served the Cape Colony mounted rifles in the Boer war.

Reports that Arthur Johnson of the Lubin company is seriously ill are denied by Mr. Johnson himself. He says: "Please tell my friends that I have only had a nervous breakdown—not a serious one. I have been working hard for the last few years and have needed a vacation. The doctors told me this sometime ago, but it's hard for me to keep away from the studio. Now I'm going to take a vacation and follow the line of least resistance. Then I shall return to the Lubin studio and resume directing again. I expect to write a number of photodramas while I am taking life easy at the seashore."

A $300,000 insurance policy has been written to cover the cast of "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American's big continued photoplay for which Roy L. McCardell was paid $10,000. In a picture of any length, and especially where the members of the cast are called upon to do dare devil stunts, it is a matter of good business judgment to protect them through insurance.

The entire Lubin studio is to produce "Fifty Miles from Boston" in Philadelphia for the benefit of the Lubin Annual Beneficial association. Every leading man and leading woman among the Lubin players has volunteered for the occasion, and in order that the public may have an opportunity to see all their favorite players, a different cast will appear in each of the three acts. Practically every player in the studio who hasn't a part will appear in specialties and in the chorus. Percy Winter will be the stage director.

Feature Films of the Week.

"IN THE DARK"—Three reel Lubin, featuring Ethel Clayton and Joseph Kaufman. A problem play in which an artist, his wife, his model, and a bad, bad man are all parts of the problem.

"IN THE PURPLE HILLS"—Two reel American, featuring Vivian Rich. It will thrill you and bring the tears to your eyes.

"ELEVEN-THIRTY P. M."—Two reel Majestic, featuring Loretta Blake, Sam De Grass, and Eric von Ritzau. A detective drama that keeps you guessing.

"THE BOSS"—Picturization by William A. Brady of the play of that name by Edward Sheldon, featuring Holbrook Blinn and Alice Brady. The beautiful society girl marries the political boss, though he is grossly repulsive to her. How he overcomes her aversion furnishes the interest.

"THE WITCH OF SALEM TOWN"—Two reel Victor-Universal, featuring Mary Fuller. A beautiful waif is suspected by the residents of a Puritan village of being a witch. An unusual and awe inspiring picture.

"COURT MARTIALED"—Four reel Imp-Universal. If you've ever loved a wayward boy you'll be held spellbound by the one here depicted.

"STOLEN GOODS"—Five reel Lasky, feature based on the emotional drama of the same name by Margaret Trumbull, featuring Blanche Sweet. Wonderfully cast and played.

"JIM THE PENMAN"—Famous Players picturization of thrilling melodrama. Warranted to make your heart beat faster.

"THE QUARRY"—Three reel Selig. It gives you a vivid idea of just what "third degree" methods consist of.

"CAPTAIN FRACASSE"—Two reel biograph picturization of novel by Theophile Gautier. The always interesting plot scheme of the noble lover and the poor girl.

"THE WRONG WOMAN"—Three reel Edison, featuring Mabel Trunelle and all star cast. From a question of identity springs a gripping story of intrigue, love, and emotion.

"SALLY CASTLETON, SOUTHERNER"—Three reel Edison, featuring Miriam Nesbitt, Marc MacDermott, and all star cast. A civil war story without a battle.

MAJESTIC.

James Hussey and Jack Boyle:

"I don't go that far."

"But I must get off at Forty-fourth street."

"Best I can do is let you out at Twenty-second street twice."

"Yes—a 15 cent drink."

"No, no! A hunter is one that follows the hounds."

"I see—dog catcher."

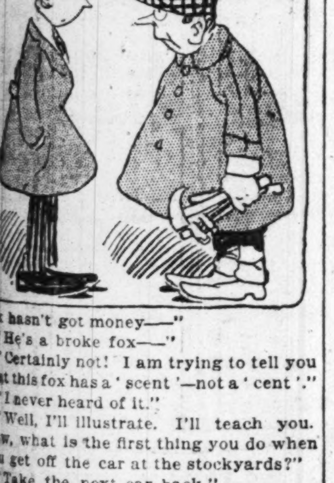
"You are hopeless. Don't you understand that the man follows the dogs which first chase up the game? Why, some of these dogs are so clever that they can tell a fox without seeing him."

"No!"

"Yes. They tell him by his scent."

"This fox got money?"

"No, no; can't you understand! This fox hasn't got money——"



"He's a broke fox——"

"Certainly not! I am trying to tell you that this fox has a 'scent'—not a 'cent'."

"I never heard of it."

"Well, I'll illustrate. I'll teach you. Now, what is the first thing you do when you get off the car at the stockyards?"

"Take the next car back."

"I guess it's hopeless for you to understand what a scent is, but all the quadrupeds have a scent, separate and distinct."

"What's a quadruped?"

"Why, something with four legs."

"O, then I sleep on a quadruped every night."

"Have you been a chauffeur all your life?"

"Not yet. I'm going to quit and go into a circus. I'll be a giant."

"Why, you can't be a giant. You're only 5 feet 4 inches tall."

"That's it!"

"That's what?"

"I'm going to be the smallest giant in the world!"

Best Sellers in Music.

Among the Edison records the three following have been most in demand during the last week:

"Tennessee, I Hear You Calling Me," Premier quartet, and "Doodle-oodle Dee," Collins and Harlan.

"When I Dream of Old Erin" and "That's an Irish Lullaby," Manuel Romain.

"O Sole Mio," Di Capua; "Of Thee I Am Thinking," Strelezki, C. W. Harrison.

Victor records, according to the report of one of the large distributors, have made the greatest showing in the following:

"We Take Our Hats Off to You, Mr. Wilson," Nora Bayes.

"It It Thou?" (Masked Ball), Pasquale Amato.

"National Eemblem" march and "German Fidelity" march, U. S. marine band.

The following songs were sung most frequently during the last week:

"My Bird of Paradise," Irying Berlin.

"There's a Little Spark of Love Still Burning," Fred Fischer.

"Chinese Blues," Oscar Gardner.

We were wrong:
—we ought to have built twice as many SIXES

Yes, sir! We made a big mistake.

We knew this SIX was the fastest selling SIX on the market — had been since it came out three years ago—the FIRST of the SIXES below $2,000.

But our experience told us we ought to sell only so and so many cars. And so we arranged to manufacture only that many Sixes. It was a whole lot more, to be sure, than we sold the year before. Yet now, months before the season closes, we KNOW that we made a mistake — that we ought to have built twice as many, for there's going to be a BIG shortage of Studebaker Sixes.

Popularity of this SIX just surprised us —that's all there is to it. We expected BIG sales—but not such sales as we have made. And it has gotten to a stage now where if a man wants a Studebaker SIX, he has to get his order in his dealer's hands at once.

Men who are buying a SIX for the first time are buying this car, because they know it's the Six that has MADE GOOD.

They know it was the FIRST of the Sixes below $2,000—that it's been on the roads for THREE YEARS—longer than any of the other Sixes that slashed prices and followed this Six down from the $2,000 mark.

They know that it takes time to perfect a car—and that Studebaker has had time and experience with 20,000 owners of Sixes on the road that the other manufacturers won't have had for a year or two to come.

And it is as handsome a car as a man can wish for, too—not radical in design, but refined and in good taste and one of the most attractive cars ever built. A long, roomy car that's inviting to the eye —massive but graceful in every line and with a satiny lustre that stays NEW.

Indeed, when you see the SIX yourself, you'll not wonder at its popularity. BUT if you want one—well, it's enough to say that they're selling so fast that some other Sixes are starting to cut prices to keep up.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

ERVINE'S NEW NOVEL.

IF you liked "Mrs. Martin's Man" (Macmillan) you have a happy evening awaiting you when you take up St. John Ervine's new novel, "Alice and a Family." There's something awfully readable about his work. The tales aren't epics. Perhaps that's why one thinks of a big fireplace, an easy chair, and uninterrupted hours as a proper setting for an evening with him. The Alice of this story is a little girl of executive possibilities far beyond her age. She takes over the management of a family as a deathbed inheritance from the father of the family. She manages them all exceedingly well, and before you've finished with the book you wish that she could have a hand in managing lots of your friends. There's something jolly and youthful about Mr. Ervine's work that startles you when you realize that you'd been knowing him for a long time as a playwright. His plays were made familiar to us by the Abbey Theater company (better known perhaps as the Irish Players), and none of us realized that he was really a young man whose work was just begun.

I like this story about Richard Harding Davis: One day a train boy was plodding through a coach, bawling his wares as lustily as train boys can (may their tribe decrease). His trade wasn't particularly good, so he undertook to recommend to each passenger a book that he thought would be especially well liked. Stopping by the side of one prosperous looking young man he held out a book, saying "Richard Harding Davis' latest, sir?" The man couldn't help smiling a little, though he was plainly annoyed. "No," he said emphatically. "I am Richard Harding Davis himself." The boy put the book back on his pile and offered another. "Then buy a copy of 'Three Weeks.' You ain't Elinor Glyn, too, are you?"

The Paris correspondent of the Publisher's Weekly regrets that the war will make inaccessible the cheap and handy Tauchnitz edition of British and American books. He explains that the statement in each volume, "the copyright of this collection is purchased for continental circulation only, the volumes may, therefore, not be introduced into Great Britain and her colonies," shows that the British publisher had not been consulted in the matter of copyright. "It was the custom of Baron Tauchnitz, when he wished to add a new book to the four thousand odd he had already 'conveyed,'" says the correspondent, "to send to the author a check, usually for 10 pounds, along with an intimation that the book was about to be published in Germany. If the author were young and inexperienced he returned the check with a sarcastic letter. If he were an old and wary novelist he shrugged his shoulders and paid the check into his banking account, knowing full well that the book would be printed in any case and wisely considering that a 'tenner' was better than nothing." We are familiar with the convenient and well printed little volumes. Often I have heard it wished that the edition were more accessible.

Francis Perry Elliott, author of "Pals First" (Harper's), does all of his writing at night. "I love to see the blue dawn stealing over the earth," he says, "and everything I have ever finished I finished just as the day was dawning." Perhaps that accounts for the number of important nocturnal events in his novel.

Honore Willsie, whose "Still Jim" (Stokes) is gaining many friends for its author, says: "To accomplish anything in this life you must form systematic work habits. When I first began the writing game I thought that everything depended on inspiration; that I must write like mad when that came, but could do nothing without it. When my husband came home at night he used to ask me about my writing, and I used to think that I had worked a great deal when really I hadn't at all. He urged me to keep a diary. I said I wouldn't do anything so temperamental, but he explained that what he meant was just a record of the work done each day. So I began. The record showed so many days of one or two hours of work lost in orgies of sewing or shopping that I had to reform. This keeping account of the amount of work done each day was the most helpful thing possible, it has given me such a real work habit. In fact I got the work habit too hard, so finally my husband begged me to stop it."

Oliver Onions of "Mushroom Town" (Doran) fame recently remarked: "A cynical friend told me the other day that the secret of success was to get a name for incorruptibility and then go ahead and corrupt it for much gold. I'm sure there's a weak spot in this somewhere, but judging from a good many both of writers and politicians, perhaps there's something in it. Only unfortunately I can't apply the recipe to my own work, because I have too much fun writing to think about corruption one way or the other."

"The Beloved" (Huebsch), James Oppenheim's latest romance, is the cause of all sorts of comment. Louis Untermeyer says it's "a large and freely written narrative poem, revealing itself in a series of high dramatic moments." Some other folks don't feel so enthusiastic about it. You'll have to read it yourself to decide what you think of it. Then you'll take up cudgels for or against. It's that sort of book.

Any one whose library has been made more complete by the addition of classics in the Everyman edition has a sincere regard for the compact, inexpensive, little volumes. You will be glad to know that there are twenty-one new volumes fresh from the Dutton presses, among them an Erckmann-Chatrian novel in two volumes, "The Story of a Peasant" and Ibsen's "Brand." Edward Dowden has contributed a Life of Robert Browning. There are travel books, essays, and histories which are things that you have hoped would come out in the uniform edition. It seems unnecessary to recommend these books. An Everymanite feels that every other man must know that for 35 cents he may get almost any of the classics in a good and pleasant edition.

The news that the manuscript of Amelia E. Barr's sixty-seventh book, "The Measure of a Man" (Appleton), has just been received by her publishers recalls her double birthday party at which there was a cake with 145 candles, each of them representing a full year of life. Eighty-five were for Mrs. Barr and sixty for Col. William E. Libby, professor of physical geography at Princeton. He was one of Mrs. Barr's pupils in Ridgewood, N. J., where she taught in her early life. Together they cut the huge cake, which measured three yards and nine inches around. Some one has said that Mrs. Barr has found the secret of perpetual youth. It doesn't seem at all impossible when one realizes what she is doing at an age when most women don lace caps and sit by the fireside.

When you write a book in the form of letters you have to spend time with your dates, attests William Farquhar Payson, author of "The Love Letters of a Divorced Couple" (Doubleday-Page). "I believe I had every timetable, railway and steamship guide, Baedeker, and tour booklet that ever was published spread out on the floor of my study the night I was checking up the dates and the places of the letters, because in every case I wanted to be sure that the dates of letters and answers would jibe. I knew perfectly well that if I had Kenneth write to Sybil from one side of the world and receive a reply before it was possible for the regular mail routes to bring one in real life I would have any number of mail clerks about my ears proving to me the falsity of my book."

"Across Central Africa" (Appleton) is the record of a trip taken in 1913 by its author, James Barnes, and Cherry Kearton, who will be remembered as one of the Roosevelt party to the dark continent. Mr. Kearton's photographs illustrate the interesting book. Many of them are remarkable, especially those of the seldom seen wild life.

If you're a girl and going camping this summer you'll want to read "On the Trail" (Scribners), by Lina Beard and Adelia Beard. It tells of woodcraft camping outfits, the food you can get on the trail, how to make friends with nature, how to use your camera—all sorts of things that you'll need to know if you're going to be a real camper and not an unenvied "tenderfoot."

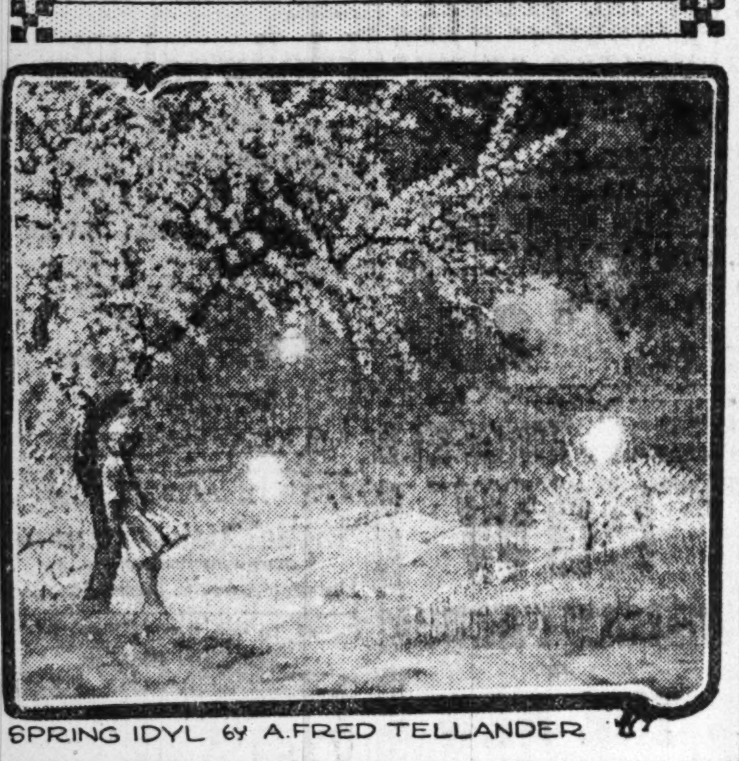
ART



SPRING IDYL by A. FRED TELLANDER

"Spring Idyl," by A. Fred Tellander, is one of the interesting water color exhibits at the Art institute.

Anne Ellis.

THE water color exhibit and the exhibit of nine Chicago artists continue to draw crowds at the Art institute. Perhaps the greatest crowds that have attended any exhibition this year. The nine artists who have the exclusive exhibitions are: Lawton Parker, Frederick Bartlett, Oliver De Grover, Louis Betts, Karl Buehr, William P. Henderson, Ralph Clarkson, Wilson Irvine, and Charles Francis Brown.

Most of the pictures in this exhibit have never been out of the studios before and are therefore doubly interesting.

The last week has been one of importance for Chicago because two Chicago artists, Mr. Lorado Taft and Mr. Ralph Clarkson, were appointed to the international jury of awards at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

While Europe, on account of the fray, has withheld many of the intended exhibits in other lines, every country will be represented by some work of art at the exposition. In fact, the ship Jason on its return trip was commissioned to carry many pictures and statues that were not expected after the declaration of war. So prolific is the display in spite of difficulties that a supplementary gallery has been added to the Palace of Fine Arts. It was scheduled for completion the 9th of this month, but probably will not be finished before the last week in the month.

One of the interesting displays at the Palace of Fine Arts will be the works of the futurist of Italy which have caused much comment in the art centers of Europe in the past two years and have never been exhibited in this country before.

The Conceit of the Successful.

BY HERBERT KAUFMAN.

[Copyright: 1915: By Herbert Kaufman.]

Most competent men are streaked with narrow mindedness.

There are professions and businesses which necessitate concentrated attention in restricted and specialized fields—which do not call for breadth so much as depth of view.

Such persons are like miners and well diggers—they lose themselves in the shafts they sink and after a while see nothing beyond their close environments.

But the very intensive quality of mind which has rendered them so capable in the management of their own affairs generally unfits them for the competent measurement of values in which they are not experienced.

So don't be thwarted of your enthusiasm and optimism by the discouragement of successful ignoramuses. The self-assurance that comes with prosperity invariably brings with it a degree of conceit and arrogance.

None is so intolerant of undemonstrated ability as those who have recorded their own.

Habituated to unquestioned decision in their own organizations, they are prone to determine arbitrarily the means and methods of procedure for everybody else.

A certain degree of egotism being essential to success, the last man in the world who is likely to acknowledge that he is not qualified to form a sound opinion on any matter is the man who no longer has to fight for the recognition of his views, and mistakes the lick-spittling and flattery of self-seekers and subordinates for an extraordinary gift of judgment.

Therefore, discount the ridicule and superficial estimates with which the average "big man" is liable to weigh an innovation.

The farther removed he is from his own struggles, the more intolerant and conservative grows his attitude toward new strikes.

Believe in yourself and follow your hunch—that's how the very fellows who are now jeering at you got on.

Victory changed their makeup. Napoleon the royalist eventually imposed upon France the very abuses of power and privilege for the eradication of which Bonaparte the republican risked his life.

We all look at outsiders differently when we're "inside."

Every man who fought his way to the throne lost the outlook and convictions that placed him there after he had gained supremacy.

PALACE.

Melville and Higgins:

"Say, what's the idea of rubber boots over your patent leather shoes?"

"You're all the time pickin' on me."

"Answer me. What's the idea?"

"You're all the time pickin'—"

"Shut up. I know what the idea is. You're afraid the patient will run out."

"Say, if we're going to this musical we'd better get something to eat. Let's go and get some chop suey."

"Chop suey! Say, you couldn't get into a chop suey place with a letter from a Chinese ambassador."

"Well, let's go some place and split a cup of coffee."

"How'd you like to have that for a husband, you women in the audience."

"Now, quit makin' fun of me."

"I tell you, girls, it's easy to get a regular husband, but it's hard to get a novelty like mine. (To Higgins): Say, don't hold your hat that way."

"Why?"

"You won't get a cent in this town."

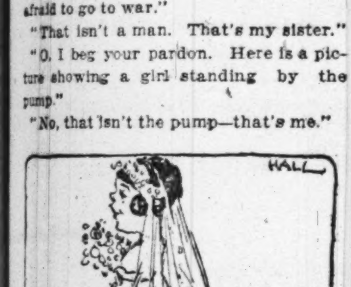
Clara Merton and Joseph Sheen:

"O, you have an album here. I love to look at pictures. Here is a good, strong face. I venture this man wouldn't be afraid to go to war."

"That isn't a man. That's my sister."

"O, I beg your pardon. Here is a picture showing a girl standing by the pump."

"No, that isn't the pump—that's me."



"And this is another relative?"

"Yes, that is aunty. She had seven husbands, and when they died she had them cremated."

"She must have been very attractive?"

"O, no, but although she was a plain woman she had husbands to burn. But tell me, do you ever meet young men when you are looking for jobs on the stage?"

"O, yes, I met one once after the theater and he asked me if I didn't care to eat something and I told him I wanted something a la carte."

"Yes—"

"He took me to a lunch wagon."

M'VICKERS.

Billy West: John J. McGraw of the New York National league ball team is known as one of the best baseball managers in the country. He is, moreover, a man who is not afraid to stand up for his rights. After a close game, in which his team lost, McGraw walked up to the umpire and said: "What would happen to me if I should call the umpire an incompetent robber?" "You would be fined and suspended," was the reply. "What would happen to me if I merely thought the umpire was an incompetent robber?" "Why, nothing could be done to you then." "Well, let it go at that," said McGraw.

COLONIAL.

George Rockwell and Al Wood:

"I've had enough trouble to make any one peevish. You know that big building of mine down on Main street? Well, I can't rent the top floor."

"I thought you were acting as if your upper story was vacant."

"And another thing, I've got an awful pain."

"Perhaps it is appendicitis."

"What side do you get appendicitis on?"

"The inside. Say, have you got any other troubles?"

"Why, yes. I just had a letter from my brother in which he states that he is completely bald."

"Tell him the next time I go hunting I'll shoot him some hares."

"You're full of spirits, ain't you?"

"I wonder if you can smell them. If I've been drinking it's only because I've also had lots of trouble myself lately."

"Is that a fact?"

"Yes, indeed. The other day my clock stopped and when I opened it I found a bug inside."

"What kind of a bug did you find in the clock?"

"A tick. And that isn't the worst."

"Worse and more of it, eh?"

"I've got a load of coal and I don't know what to do with it."

"Shall I find you a buyer?"

"No; find me a cellar."

"By the way, do you think it's proper for a girl to sit on a man's lap?"

"That depends. If it's my girl and my lap—yes. If it's some other fellow's girl and my lap—yes. But it it's my girl and some other fellow's lap—no."

ROUTE MAP AND LOG TO AND FROM INDIANAPOLIS RACES

By L. M. Steffens.

FOR good roads the state of Indiana surpasses all other states in the middle west. The state is continually building and promoting good roads, which it can accomplish with little difficulty, especially from a financial standpoint.

The northwestern portion of Indiana has built and improved many of its roads with concrete, macadam, and gravel, but as a matter of fact the citizens of Indiana have shown a general good roads attitude throughout the state and have boosted motoring and promoted many good roads organizations.

Naturally the greatest feature for the state of Indiana this month is the Indianapolis races, which will take place at the Indianapolis speedway next Saturday.

Due to the numerous inquiries for the best route to and from the speedway the writer accompanied S. J. King, publisher of King's Official Route Guides, on a trip to Indianapolis for the purpose of logging the way from Chicago to the speedway with a return trip. The good roads advocate advised the route which appears on this page to be the best and most direct way to go. The route leaves Chicago via a new southern automobile exit and goes through the following towns: Hammond, Ind., Crown Point, Shelby, Thayer, Rensselaer, Remington, Lafayette, Mulberry, Frankfort, Lebanon, and Indianapolis. The total mileage is 198.6 miles. This route is being marked as the Dixie Air line trail for the purpose of connecting Chicago with Chattanooga, Tenn., by a marked trail.

The writer, in traversing this road, wishes to say that the promoters have fulfilled their purpose of making the trail a popular route. When touring the motorist generally follows the best route with good accommodations, and this route to Indianapolis via Lafayette comes in contact with the prominent cities in the state and also provides for good accommodations.

The return trip from Indianapolis goes through Westfield, Kokomo, Logansport, Winamac, Knox, Laporte, Valparaiso, Hobart, and Chicago. The object in routing from Winamac to Knox and then to Chicago is that the road from Bass lake to Valparaiso is now being built and it will not be completed in time for the races.

The map which appears on this page will give you an optic view of the automobile roads leading to Indianapolis from your respective city. The black heavy lines indicate the best routes through the different cities.

This Double-Cable-Base Gives Federal Tires "Extra Service"

THE heavy double steel cables imbedded, close down to the base, in a soft bead filler, eliminate the four costly troubles that are common to tires made with the hard sharp-pointed bead-filler. Federal Tires are free from rim-cutting, side wall blowouts just above the rim, tube pinching and the danger of a tire blowing from the rim.

Why England, After Ten Months of War, Is Still Fighting on the Defensive

A BITTER LESSON IN UNPREPAREDNESS

Henry J. Reilly, TRIBUNE war correspondent, has just spent several weeks in England. He has written a series of seven articles on war conditions in England and concerning the British troops now in action and in preparation. Mr. Reilly was formerly an officer in the United States army and is a thorough technician in the game of war.

The English series, which begins next Tuesday morning in THE TRIBUNE, goes into minute and extremely comprehensive detail of England's past, present and future connection with this, the greatest of all wars.

Mr. Reilly shows that as a result of the English volunteer system and the English people's hesitancy to respond to it because of absolute refusal to believe a great war possible, the country was found at the outset of this war the least prepared of any nation now engaged in the conflict in so far as military resources are concerned.

England at the outset of the war, while boasting the greatest navy, had the smallest army of any of the powers.

Now, in the tenth month of fighting, with all its heroic methods, it is still fighting on the defensive.

Mr. Reilly shows that to such straits is England driven now to provide military forces up to necessary quota, it has carried on, and is still carrying on in an effort to obtain recruits, the most remarkable campaign that any country ever engaged in.

Everywhere there are colored posters advertising for men.

On every taxicab in England there are advertisements for men.

On most of the big buildings there are recruiting signs appealing to the patriotism of the people.

Even the Trafalgar monument is placarded with Nelson's famous signal to his fleet, "England expects that every man this day will do his duty."

Members of parliament and leaders of the people make popular speeches appealing to the people to enlist.

Special campaigns and bands parade the streets. Newspapers are full of advertising for men.

The government is making efforts to coerce the people in certain trades to enlist.

Special banners with special names such as sportsmen, etc., have been hoisted with the expectation that they would appeal to that particular class.

Many of the advertisements and posters calling for men are direct appeals to women to put themselves aside and consider their country first.

And yet, in spite of all these means, the campaign has not furnished and is not yet furnishing enough men.

Mr. Reilly shows in these articles the necessity for any country to be, in times of peace, prepared for war. His lesson is exemplified in the following quotation from one of the articles:

> "It is not surprising that here and there, in France, is heard criticism of the small effort made by Great Britain. They cannot be blamed for asking why at least Kitchener's army is not sent over.
> "The answer is simple for those who know. It is not sent because it is not ready, as a whole, to take part in a vigorous campaign. It is not ready because Great Britain, like the United States, always refused to get ready for war in time of peace.
> "She preferred to wait until war commenced to take the great risk of being beaten before really ready to start; to suffer unnecessary casualties because of the inevitable prolongation of the war, and to run up a large debt for future generations to pay."

These remarkable stories are peculiarly timely to the people of the United States just now when the American nation is trembling upon the brink of most terrible uncertainty. They should be read by every man, woman and child of thinking age in this country—by every man and woman because of the present, and by every thinking child because of the future.

The series will continue daily until all have been published.

Next TUESDAY'S TRIBUNE

Stage Set for Speedway s Greatest Racing Event.

By Reed L. Parker.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—[Special Correspondence.]—Four wealthy business men, seated around a camp fire at the Indiana state fair grounds, smoked their cigars and watched a twenty-four hour race on the dirt horse track. This was only a few years ago, but when measured by achievements and not time, the dream dreamed that night, then considered a joking matter, today stands in concrete form—a monument to their courage and ability. It is the Indianapolis motor speedway, five miles out of Indianapolis, a city dedicated to speed, where once peaceful corn fields existed.

Carl G. Fisher, a millionaire sportsman of international reputation, is president of the Speedway company. Associated with him are J. H. Allison, F. H. Wheeler, and A. C. Newby.

More than $250,000 in prizes, more than the human brain can comprehend in effort, and more than 2,000 miles of racing will pass down into history at the end of the fifth annual international 500 mile race next Saturday. This two and one-half mile paved race course was once an isolated farm.

What caused the transformation is a story that rivals any of Jules Verne's imaginative flights. Although it was only a few years ago that four Indianapolis men caused their friends to laugh at them because of their audacity to spend thousands and thousands of dollars to spoil perfectly good corn fields, yet so rapid has been the development of this astonishingly virile motor industry that each year takes to itself the significance of a decade of ordinary history.

Hardly a nationality but has been represented upon this race course, either by individual drivers or by their cars. Twice has the championship gone to Europe. At the end of every race where speed has staggered the wildest dreams of the layman it has been said that the limit of human daring and mechanical swiftness had been reached, but if the spectators at the speedway any day now were to suggest such a thing to the intrepid men who are tuning their mounts they would cause them to smile as if they were saying, "We will make last year's race look like a Sunday afternoon stroll." And, to judge by their preparations and their bursts of speed in practice, they are going to make good their boast.

To know that racing side by side at 100 miles an hour, or more, are men brought from the four corners of the world, many of them who cannot even talk to one or another, being strangers to the other's language; to know that many has been the time that these men have looked death in the face, have flirted with the specter and bear the scars; to know that the slightest incident of carelessness, the lessening of the hold on the wheel, the taking of the eye off the track might precipitate a disastrous accident—to know this is sufficient to make the most torpid spectator sit almost breathlessly for hours watching the soldiers of adventure.

That this year's race will be the largest from the standpoint of attendance is safely predicted, and the crowds alone form a sight seen no place else on earth. All night long on the night before the race motoring parties from every direction, dust covered and gasoline scented, pay tribute to the god of speed by their constant influx to the speedway town.

The night before the race in Indianapolis rivals a Mardi Gras celebration. Streets are thronged with cosmopolitan crowds, notables democratically rub elbows with less distinguished citizens; cafés are overflowing with merrymaking parties, and on every one's lips is the one question, "Who will win?"

To predict the winenr this year is harder than ever before. The most dyed in the wool devotee of motor speed throws up his hands helplessly when asked to pick the winner. It is safe to predict that there will be several races within the one race this year. Lifelong rivalries will be fought out on the track, heart breaking defeats will be endeavored to be redeemed, and victorious drivers will be straining to the utmost to vindicate their past. For the speedway has now been in existence long enough to achieve the dignity of a history and traditions.

The first race was won by Ray Harroun and the Marmon Wasp in 1911 by an average of 74.62 miles per hour; both driver and car were Indianapolis products, Harroun driving without a mechanician. The following year Joe Dawson in a National car smashed the 1911 record with an average of 78.72 miles per hour. There is at least one man who has never forgotten Joe's victory, and that man will be at the wheel this year—Ralph De Palma. For in 1912 it was De Palma, in his old Mercedes who seemed to have victory clinched, but fate intervened.

It was then that the foreign car makers began to sit up and take notice. They determined that they were entitled to hold this international championship, and the following year, 1913, sent many of their best cars and drivers to America; and Jules Goux and his French car, the Peugeot, won the 1912 race. Goux's average was 76.59 miles per hour.

By this time the foreign manufacturers were completely aroused, and in 1914 they came "armed to the teeth." Last year Rene Thomas in his Delage won the record that now stands—82.47 miles per hour.

When it is remembered that to go a distance of 500 miles the driver must encircle the track 200 times it is easy to see why brains play an important part in this contest. Along the track on the inside near the starting line are cement boxes, called pits. In these pits are not only spare parts, extra tires, and fuel, but also the team managers. It is their job to signal by secret codes instructions to their drivers as they go whirling past.

It is impossible for a driver to know his position in the race, as cars are constantly passing him, and he has lost all track of his relative place. He has other things to do—to steer safely through the intricate crowds of cars that surge with their snorting, fire spitting roar on both sides of him. Many are the tales that have been handed down of heroic deeds by drivers and their mechanicians.

The multitudinous duties and responsibilities of arranging for this colossal event require an army of workmen. Down to the most minute point the speedway management has achieved marvelous efficiency. Ample grandstand, parking space, shady groves, and conveniences to care for the largest paid admission the world has ever made to a sporting event are all provided with clockwork precision. The soldiers and ambulance corps and every member of the mammoth organization work as one man.

There are forty-one entries for this year's race, as follows:

No.	Car and Nation.	Driver.
1.	Maxwell, America	Carlson
2.	Maxwell, America	Rickenbacher

40.	Shambaugh America	Shambaugh
41.	Bals Special, America	Hill

To scan this list of names and see those of Oldfield, De Palma, Burman, Rosta, Grant, Wilcox, and many others, is to realize that seldom has such a group of formidable opponents been brought together. Add to this the uncertainty of the numerous dark horses of foreign invaders who have never raced in this country before, and one begins to realize that "the limit of speed" has only a few more days to live. A new record and a new hero, perhaps now unknown, will mount the throne of speed wearing the crown of glory and knighted with a fortune of prize money.

Directory of the Leading Summer Resorts.

RESORTS AND HOTELS MICHIGAN.

$13.50 VACATION COMPLETE FRUITVALE MICHIGAN

We have our own cows. You can have all the fresh milk and cream you want. We raise our own vegetables—you can eat to your heart's content. We have our own Pigs and kill our own Cattle. We have 7,000 Chickens and you can eat all the fried chicken and have all the eggs you want. Home cooking.

We have spring beds and hair mattresses and they are new and clean. The blankets are new and everything is sanitary. Although we are up in the Big Woods, we have hot water baths and toilet facilities, just like in your own. No other Summer Resort has such comforts.

We have canoes and row boats and power boats. We own a trout stream eleven miles long—we have seven miles of river in front of our Hotel. We have nine lakes on our property. You can fish all day and night if you want. You can catch Bass, Trout and Perch.

You people who are tired and want to rest, come up here. The air is pure—it is laden with the scent of the woods. A week in this wild land will make you into a new person.

It is only a night's ride from Chicago and you can telephone from the Hotel to your family—yet you are in the midst of as wild woods as you have ever seen or heard of.

Mothers and Children can spend the Summer up here— Fathers and big Brothers can leave Saturday night and spend Sunday with the family and return to Chicago in time for 7 o'clock work on Monday morning.

Accommodations for only 200. You sleep in new sanitary bungalows. No big firetrap of a hotel, with all its dangers, no little stuffy, badly ventilated room to sleep in.

The air is fresh and pure at Fruitvale and you get plenty of it there, day or night. No liquor is sold on the premises; no veranda parades; no style shows by people who go to Summer resorts merely to put it over their neighbors.

You go to Fruitvale for rest and recreation. You wear your old clothes. You spend your days in the woods picking wild flowers, listening to the song birds, canoeing, rowing, hunting and fishing. At night you can join the throng around the campfire and sing or dance in the big dining room, or you can go to bed and sleep.

If you want to make this trip it is essential that you make your reservations now, today. You can make a deposit of $1.00 now and then if you don't go your dollar will be given back to you.

Remember, there are no ifs and ands about it. $13.50 includes everything. You can buy a ticket in Chicago for $13.50, which includes everything. You can go to Fruitvale, spend your vacation and get back to Chicago without spending another red cent. For further information and photographs, call or write Executives and Managers.

I AM LOOKING FOR HARD WORK.

I am seeking a broader opportunity, where my well founded education, hard working business training, and sales work as a traveler and a manager will permit me to grow with a progressive organization in building a bigger, broader, better sales department. Over 12 years of wide merchandizing experience has given me an insight to many lines—and an opportunity to study many distribution plans. I have had the technical experience in manufacturing iron and steel and a complete business education through most of the departments of one of the largest food manufacturers, leaving them as sales manager of a department distributing nationally in large volumes. I have also managed the sales of furniture specialties, real estate, and farm lands.

My ambition is to grip on to this bigger opportunity, where I may put originality into my work, vim and vigor into the execution of my ideas, and assume responsibility. If you can offer me the opportunity I am willing to sacrifice an immediate salary to prove my worth. All replies confidential. Address B P 41, Tribune.

Can make myself a most voluable acquistion in any merchandising house. Carry the best good will of my late employers. Address H 301, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—PRIVATE SECRETARY; young man, ten years' experience as stenographer, private secretary, and sales executive, open for position; prefer an association with some big manufacturing executive needing a man to assume part of his responsibility; at present occupying executive position in the South; good reason for changing; 32 years of age; college graduate; American; would come North for interview if necessary. Address B S 37, Tribune.

ADVERTISING MAN.

Do you need a real, live advertising man who can write the kind of mail order advertising that brings orders—one who has proved his ability to sell goods by mail? I seek an opportunity to build up a bigger business for some concern making an article of true merit; moderate salary until ability is proved; age 30; college educated. Phone Edge. 7832 or address A X 502, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—OUR SALES CORRESPONDENT is leaving, and as he carries our very best good will we want him to make a satisfactory connection. He has 7 years' experience as correspondent, the past 3 years charge of our department; he also has a working knowledge of advertising, printing, form letters, circulars, and credits; this splendid experience backed by initiative, sound sense, resourcefulness, coupled with character, loyalty, and personality, make him a valued asset of any organization; age 28, single; will go anywhere in any capacity; salary second consideration. GUNDERSON TWO FAMILY HOMES

Challenge Comparison with All Others.
Ask your friends to come out with you and inspect our 5 and 6 and 6 and 6 room homes on Jackson-blvd. and Congress-st., between 47th and 48th-avs.

Experts never fail to praise them, for construction is our strong point.

Note our stone foundations, our steel girders, and our steel post supports, set in concrete bases. Note, also, those wide porches of brick and cement, with stone steps, a separate porch to each floor.

No upkeep expense when they are built like that.

Every Home is complete—and then some. Hardwood finish and hardwood floors; beam ceiling in dining room; curtain rods and window shades; rear icing door refrigerator; cabinet gas range and combination boiler and gas water heater in kitchen.

Strictly guaranteed heating plants for each apartment, entire hot water or combination furnace. 30 foot lots.

ROGERS PARK WESTERN AVENUE

BUSINESS LOTS,
BET. GREENLEAF & KENILWORTH-AV.

With the extension this year of the Western-av. car line past this property values should double.

Bear in mind that the only business district at present for all the central part of Rogers Park is No. Clark-st., nearly a mile from Western-av., and 2 miles from the western limits.

Western-av. is the longest street in Chicago and the next business thoroughfare. Remember what a car line means to business property. Go out and see the vast number of new homes and 2 flat buildings that have been erected adjoining this property, which is in need of stores. Clark-st. frontage, which sold for $50 a ft. 5 years ago is now worth $200 and over.

See our Local Agent at Kenilworth and Western-avs.

FOR SALE—OUR OPENING SALE WAS A seller in our new subdivision of HUBBARD WOODS VILLAS.

Opening prices still prevail.

We will show you a beautiful, rolling, partly wooded property with lots for all kinds of preferences.

Some lots are deeper than others.

There are north, east, south, and west frontages.

Some have particularly good landscape effects and have more trees than others.

Each group of lots has a particular advantage, but all will be offered at one uniform low price per front foot.

They are 32 minutes' ride from Chicago.

They all lie from 3 to 7 blocks from the Hubbard Woods Northwestern railroad station and from 1 to 3 blocks from the Milwaukee Electric station.

This gives some choice, owing to variety.

We will furnish plats and prices, and will show you the property. Prefer to sell in 100, 150, and 200 foot frontages, but 50 foot lots will be sold.

All information furnished promptly on application.

Salesmen on property Saturday and Sunday.

Peace or War

[Special Excursion Tuesday, June 1.]

WAR SCARES turn investments from other channels into lands because of greater safety. During peace immigration enhances land values. Even with the control European nations have over their peoples, in March this year the number arriving here was 19,263, against 13,873 in February and 15,481 in January, and when peace comes we can look for a greater number of arrivals on our shores by far than ever before.

BE THERE PEACE OR WAR, there was never a better time to invest in lands in the Swigart Tract in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford Counties, Michigan. The number of business failures for April this year was the largest ever reported, and it is said there are two million men out of employment, yet farming was never more profitable than now with food products at record prices, which have been sustained for several years and may never recede.

INDECISION won't help you. Now is the time to act. If the U. S. should become involved, it would paralyze our industries still further and increase living cost still more. To secure a sure living, put your family on the good, productive land in our Tract. Don't wait for better times, as they can only come slowly. Get some Swigart land now. You can buy on very easy monthly payments or for cash; in fact, almost in any way to suit your purse. We have farm experts to direct you and a number of other special advantages in this fast growing district that you can get nowhere else. I have not space here to explain these advantages, but would be pleased to have you call or I will gladly answer any letters.

GET MY BIG BOOK ON MICHIGAN. Crops in the Swigart Tract are fully described in a large 72 page book which shows 115 views of the lands, fields, inland lakes, streams, roads, public institutions, towns, etc. Get this book and learn of our settlers' success in growing clover, corn, oats, rye, vetch, wheat, alfalfa, beans, cow peas, potatoes, and especially fruits and vegetables. They are building silos to increase stock raising. Dairying is getting a strong hold here, and pigs and poultry are being raised more and more. Ten acres of a 40 acre farm developed into a commercial orchard of apples, cherries, peaches, pears, or plums, if properly attended to, will give a family a permanent income.

MY NEXT SPECIAL EXCURSION will be Tuesday, June 1st, leaving my Chicago offices at 11:30 a. m. Round trip from Chicago to Wellston [my Michigan headquarters] is $8.30, which will be rebated on your purchase. Good accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles and guides are furnished free. Join me on this excursion and verify my statements. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoons. AN AGENT WANTED IN EVERY TOWN.

FOR SALE — VALUABLE IMPROVED SOUTHERN PLANTATIONS.

"Mr. John H. Minge, Birmingham, Ala.—Dear Sir: I am sending you today by parcel post sample ear corn, of my best producers, improved Mexican June corn; same can be planted as late as July and will mature before frost, yielding from 40 to 60 bushels per acre. Jones' Prolific is another good yielder with me, making from 50 to 75 bushels per acre. I have been planting in the Yazoo, Miss., delta for past 32 years and I have never seen any one in immediate vicinity purchase or use $1 worth commercial fertilizer. Several of my neighbors showed yields of 72 bushels of oats per acre last year on several hundreds of acres. Cost of laying by corn $4.50 per acre. Preparing oats land, seeding, and harvesting, $3.50 per acre. Yours and etc., I. L."

Oats mature in June. Mexican June corn is planted after cutting the oats. As this corn receives last working cow peas are planted and will mature before frost, giving three valuable crops each year per acre; other crops can be raised in like manner.

I am offering at $35 to $50 per acre several improved southern farms. In addition to producing large annual returns the increase in value of the land should be 10 per cent per year. Can accept portion of purchase price in other property. Expenses in making personal examination of properties I represent will be refunded if not found as represented. Direct inquiries from bona fide purchasers invited.
JOHN H. MINGE, care B O 30, Tribune.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

Insist on a Factory Refinished Woods Electric

Before buying a refinished electric make certain that it has been properly overhauled by competent FACTORY EXPERTS. Then you'll have a car you can depend upon—for it must mean REFINISHED IN THE WOODS FACTORY—BECAUSE THE WOODS FACTORY IS THE ONLY ONE IN CHICAGO.

Get your refinished electric at the only electric car factory in Chicago and you run no chances of buying a car that has been in the hands of careless or incompetent mechanics. Our refinishing is done by thoroughly reliable and experienced men with long factory training. We use NEW—not junk—parts in replacing those which are worn.

Low prices are not as important to you as is GOOD VALUE FOR THE PRICE. That is what you can depend upon getting if you buy a refinished Woods at the Woods factory. We have Woods Electrics, all models, all prices, all good values. Also other makes of Electrics.

Come and see what we have before you buy any car. We can assure you satisfaction and save you from disappointment at the price you want to pay. We gladly demonstrate and give prompt attention to inquiries from city or country.

PARTNERS WANTED.

PARTNER WANTED—YOU HAVE A FEW hundred dollars, possibly a thousand or two and are looking for an investment, aren't you? Well, why not put your money into something big, not some little dinky affair with a partner you know absolutely nothing about, but something that if it amounts to anything at all will make you an independent income for life? That's what you would really like, isn't it? Of course it is; that's what we are all working for, but it is only once in a lifetime, as the saying goes, that we have a chance to get in on the ground floor of a really good proposition. You are face to face with that kind of an opportunity right now. A proposition that has already interested some of the biggest men in Chicago. You have a chance to become associated with these men—millionaires, some of them—in a company owning the patents on a machine designed to revolutionize certain methods now used by every business house in the world—a device that has already been tried out in actual service by the biggest mail order houses in Chicago, indorsed by the biggest national concerns in the country—banks, railroads, telephone and mercantile companies of all kinds—and described in practically all of the leading technical magazines, including Popular Mechanics for March, World's Work, Literary Digest, etc. Does that sound pretty good so far? Well, that's all we are going to say right now, as the proposition is too big to explain in an ad, but if you are interested an interview can be arranged and the proposition gone into in detail provided you mean business and are prepared to act at once. Also state how much you have available for investment if the proposition appeals to you—otherwise no attention will be paid to your reply, as we have no time to spend with a lot of people merely looking for information. CALUMET REGION BECOMES MECCA OF FACTORY MEN District's Advantages Start a Boom That Destines It to Be Great Industry Center.

The entire Calumet district, from South Chicago way beyond the Indiana state line, is destined to become the greatest industrial community in this country in the opinion of students of economic conditions familiar with the natural advantages of that section. Its paramount advantage lies in its unequaled facilities for gathering raw material and distributing the manufactured product and to a realization of these advantage sis due the building of the city of Gary by the United States Steel corporation.

The building of this industrial city has been supplemented by the building of many other great manufacturing plants, but they are only a beginning in the movement which is certain to make a veritable industrial hive of this region. Commercial Chicago to the north and this great industrial community to the south are steadily drawing together and ere many years the vast stretches of vacant prairie that separate them will have been absorbed by this great development movement.

High Class Residences, Too.

Roughly speaking, Seventy-ninth street may possibly be considered the dividing line between what may be termed the residential and manufacturing districts in this part of the city. There are many really choice residence districts south of this line, several high class subdivisions having recently been opened in that territory, but the district is more a manufacturing than a residential one. This distinction is likely to be emphasized with continued development and upbuilding. There will of necessity be extensive sections given over to residences, but they will be for the greater part such as are to be found in manufacturing districts.

The district north of Seventy-ninth street, particularly that part east of Stony Island avenue, seems marked for an essentially high class residence district. Reference was made last Sunday to the district just south of and also to the west of Jackson park, where there has been rapid development and of a high character as concerns the improvements.

The district bordering the lake from what is now Seventy-first street south almost to the Illinois Steel company's plant also presents many interesting features. It was all known as South Shore thirty-five years ago at which time there were but six houses between the Hyde Park waterworks and South Chicago. The lake could only be reached by climbing over the huge sand dunes which bordered it.

The extension of the Illinois Central road to South Chicago in 1883 gave this district its first boom, but even then it was slow in settling up. For many years the Jeffery avenue station, now Bryn Mawr, and the South Shore station were not worth the trains' stopping time. Cheltenham was the main stop and an attempt was made to start a pleasure park there, but it failed. Cheltenham and Windsor Park were the first to attract residents but slowly.

Boomed by World's Fair.

The world's fair was a great factor in filling this section, and despite the disastrous effect of the collapse of the real estate boom at that time it may be said that this section dated its start from that period. Hyde Park, of which this section was a part, had been annexed to the city. Properties were subdivided, streets cut through, the sand dunes removed, giving access to the lake.

The beach here, one of the best in the city limits, has been made use of by private bathing houses. These are to go, however, and a strip averaging 200 feet wide from Seventy-fifth to Seventy-ninth streets has been taken over by the city for a free bathing beach. The nucleus is Rock Ledge park, a free beach at Seventy-ninth street owned by the city. On this strip will be erected bathing houses, recreation and rest houses.

Nominally Lake Park avenue exists here and about twenty-five houses have been built on the west side facing the lake, but this is to be condemned for the city's use.

Bond Avenue Principal Street.

The principal residence street of Windsor Park is Bond avenue, which about two years ago was taken over by the south park commissioners and made into one of the finest boulevards in the city. So little had this section been known previously, owing to poor streets and similar handicaps, that until the boulevard came there was little demand for property. The unregulated bathing beaches were also a deterrent to purchasers. This, however, has disappeared, and land values steadily have climbed to figures never known before except in the fictitious valuatioon of world's fair days. Less than two years ago property at Seventy-third street and Bond boulevard sold for $70 a front foot, while for the corner across the street $225 a foot is now asked.

All the streets from Bryn Mawr to South Chicago are now paved, and all the improvements in. The transportation furnished by the Illinoois Central is supplemented by street car service, and an "L" extension from Stony Island and Sixty-third street to South Chicago is thought to be a probability.

Crosstown Streets Promising.

Two crosstown streets show evidence of becoming great arteries of trade like Sixty-third and Fifty-fifth streets to the north. These are Seventy-fifth and Seventy-ninth streets. From mere country roads these streets have taken on the appearance of thriving thoroughfares and they are thought to have an excellent future as business streets. They both are well paved and lighted and each has a crosstown line of cars.

Substantial store and theater buildings are found here and land values have been marching upwards at a rapid rate. The extent to which values have been advanced may be gathered from the fact that property at the southwest corner of Stony Island avenue and Seventy-fifth street was leased about a year ago for ninety-nine years at the rate of $800 a foot, on a 5 per cent capitalized basis. The ground at the northeast corner of Seventy-fifth street and South Shore avenue was leased on the basis of $400 a front foot.

Many corners on Seventy-fifth street are held around $150 a foot, which five years ago would not have brought one-third of this sum. The southeast corner of Stony Seventy-second street was to A. Hollander, Swiss foot. Eight years ago it was a foot.

A recent transaction on street at the northwest avenue furnishes a particular illustration of the remarkable in values. The property, frontage of 187 feet on street and 128 feet on Yates sold by Peter Foote for Quinn to Miss Mary C. Scully cated consideration of about two weeks before Quinn the property from William H. $12,000. The property comprises half of the frontage between Oglesby avenues. The entire was acquired less than by Mr. Poole for $8,000.

District Booms in Building

It is said that in the twenty 1912 there were but three on Stony Island avenue from enth to Seventy-ninth streets there have been hundreds. In the tory between Stony Island Jeffery avenue and Seventy- Seventy-ninth street there three buildings. There are now 800.

There are many attractive streets where values are low. Thus along Merrill ton avenue, Luella avenue, enty-fifth street, property can be about $40 a front foot. Not all are paved, but water, gas, are in.

The Windsor Park district established reputation for its homes and lawns, its fine and other trees, and the the lake, the larger part Illinois Central tracks.

Cheltenham is an active munity, having more business sor Park or the settlements There is much civic activity merchants to which is improvements in that section.

Apartments so far may not to exist south of Seventy North of there, particularly Shore and Bryn Mawr, built at an amazingly rapid they are of the best type, rent from the architect's

TURKISH IMPERIAL SIGNET

"THE TERRIBLE TURK"

In Enver Bey Pasha, the Turkish minister of war, is a curious mingling of modernism and the dark traits that have given Turkey an age-old spell of terror.

He is a polished, suave, pleasant person of the most charming manner—until something scratches the veneer. He is very young for his position of responsibility, only 34 years, and a national leader.

Enver Bey is a recognized leader of the Young Turks who gained a parliament for Turkey and accomplished what little of civil reform has been gained in that backward nation. Yet on the other side one recalls the tragic fate of his sister, wife of Abdul Hamid's principal spy at Saloniki, Nazim Bey. Sister and brother plotted Nazim's death in the overthrow of Abdul Hamid. Enver Bey coldly employed his sister in this deed of calm murder. Nazim, by the way, escaped and killed his wife later.

It was Enver Bey and his aspirations who threw Turkey into the war on Germany's side. He entertains fantastic hopes for the restoration of the ancient glory of the Osmanlis; he wants to force Greeks, Armenians, Bulgarians, and Catholic or Orthodox Albanians all alike into unity as Ottomans. And he cares nothing for cost, or pain, or violence.

Enver Bey Pasha is a descendant of Arabs; a wild, fierce strain of desert blood is in his veins. He still hopes for the triumph of Islam over the world.

The North Sea

The great European conflict has made an empty waste of the North sea, which for centuries has been one of the world's most productive food producing areas. Literally millions have depended on the fisheries of the North sea. Cities have grown up and boundaries have been controlled by the course of the herring.

Now the blockades, the mines, and naval operations have driven the sturdy fisherfolk off the banks, and thousands are idle and robbed of a living. The braver of the trawler captains have turned from the peaceful pursuit of the schooling fish to the quest of mines in the government service.

The control of the North sea might well mean the actual starvation of a foe nation, between the grip on commerce and the fisheries. The most picturesque life of Europe is in the fishery towns on the North sea coasts, the homes of hardy, simple men of the sea.

Now the smacks and trawlers are tied up nestling in the shelter of the docks, while the big reaches of the tossing sea over the fishing grounds are disturbed only by the spying periscope or the occasional flying wake of the speeding torpedo craft.

This was successfully accomplished notwithstanding the fact that the cruiser was subjected to a terrific fire from both sides, to which she replied, using all her guns. The Dynamo of Business

By Hugh Chalmers

DISTRIBUTION is the greatest problem of business. It is a problem that directly affects all the people. If an article, needed by the public, can be put on the market, and because of wide distribution be sold at a low price, the public is benefited.

The manufacture of an article is a definite thing. The manufacturer first must have money. With money he can put up buildings; he can equip the buildings with machinery; he can buy raw materials and can make the article that he wants to market. If he can make one article right, he can make ten thousand just like it, because in the making of an article he is dealing with things that he can control, that is, money, materials, machinery and men. The thing that he finds the hardest to control is the market.

It is here that the human element enters into the problem.

If you can sell one thing it does not necessarily follow that you can sell ten thousand just like it. In the making of an article you are dealing with something definite. In the selling of it you are dealing with something that you cannot control. The number of things you can sell depends wholly upon your marketing ability.

It is because marketing an article is so important, not only to the manufacturer but to the public, that advertising has come to be of such tremendous interest to all the people. Advertising is one of the chief factors in the distribution or marketing of any product. The public is beginning to appreciate that advertising is a help in distribution, because the consumer is buying articles at a less cost than would be possible if the same articles were not nationally advertised. Advertising stimulates sales. It helps build businesses more rapidly than they could be built without it.

How the Public Profits

THE public furthermore benefits by national advertising because the day has gone by when articles of doubtful value can be nationally advertised with any great success. No manufacturer today can in his advertising exaggerate the merits of his goods and mislead the public. The public would try his goods once, find them not up to their advertised value and would not reorder. The manufacturer would not get his money back, hence his advertising would be a loss.

So the only manufacturer who can afford to spend large sums in advertising is the manufacturer who is making honest goods and selling them at a fair profit. It is being made more plain every day that advertising is not a burden on the purchasing public. The manufacturer who does not advertise is not able to produce a better article for a lower selling price than one who does. On the contrary.

An advertisement is really a contract between the advertiser and the purchaser. The medium which carries the advertising is also a party to this contract.

The manufacturer says to the public, "Here are my goods. I show my faith in them by spending money in this space to tell you about them. The publisher shows his faith in my goods because he takes my advertising. He would not take my advertising if he did not know that I had a good article that would give satisfaction. He cannot afford to antagonize his readers by presenting to them in his advertising pages commodities that are not up to what the manufacturer says about them."

THE publisher practically says to his readers, "Buy the goods advertised in this issue. I know that they are good goods or I would not allow them to be advertised in the pages of my publication."

Some publishers go so far as to guarantee all the advertising that appears in their columns. If the purchaser is dissatisfied with an article which he buys as a result of the advertising in these publications, he can write to the manufacturer, and if the manufacturer will not give him the proper redress the publisher will. It is this sort of co-operation between the manufacturer and the publisher that is making advertising such a great force.

The public has come to have confidence in advertised goods, and confidence is the cornerstone upon which all great businesses are built.

Supports Literature

ADVERTISING has come to be such a tremendous power that many of our best publications could not exist without the continued advertising patronage of the manufacturer. Because of this advertising patronage they are able to give the public better publications at a less price than they could possibly do without advertising.

Another big thing that advertising is doing for the public is putting people in out-of-the-way places in touch with the latest and best comforts and conveniences. Things that are invented and manufactured for lightening household labor, business saving devices, things of interest to sick people and thousands of other things are, through advertising, brought to the attention of people all over the country in remarkably short time. If a man in New York invents some new way for lightening the labor of the housewife, the woman in the farthest corner of Texas finds out about it and is able to buy it and benefit by its use in a few days after it is put on the market. Without advertising it might be a year or longer before she would even hear about it.

I have touched above on just a few of the ways in which advertising directly affects all the people. In the next few years the public will come to have a better understanding of what advertising is accomplishing for the country.

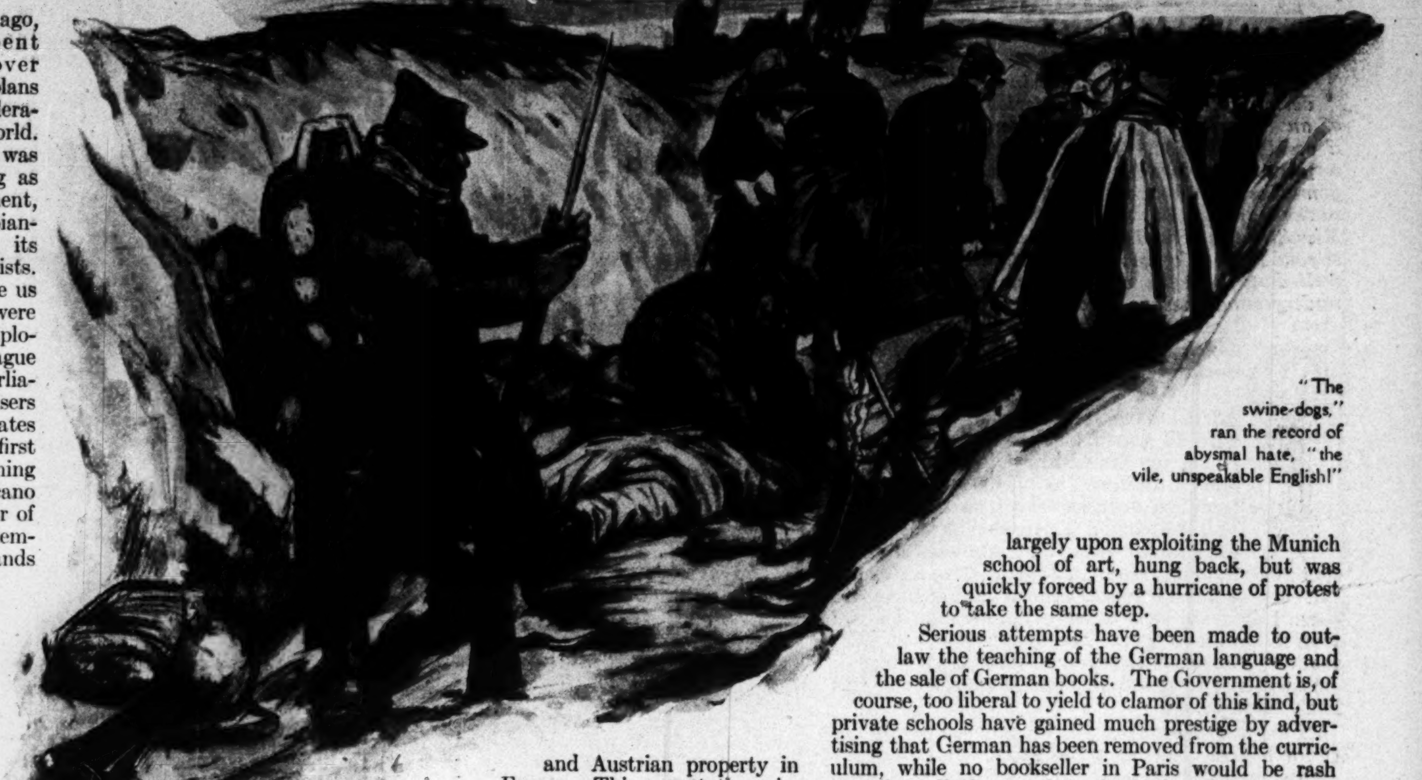
THE WAR'S LEGACY OF HATE

BY WALTER ADOLPHE ROBERTS

Drawing by Adrien Machefert



"The swine-dogs," ran the record of abysmal hate, "the vile, unspeakable English!"

A FEW months ago, idealists bent hopefully over their paper plans for the federation of the world. There really was such a thing as an international movement, apart from Socialist utopianism. Every nation had its pacifists, its anti-militarists. The men who tried to give us arbitration in place of war were encouraged by cynical diplomats to think that The Hague might some day house a Parliament superior to Czars, Kaisers and Kings. The United States of Europe was to be the first step. It is the obvious thing to point out that the volcano that we call the Great War of 1914 has shattered their temple, so that not one stone stands upon another. But afterward, can they rebuild?

It will be generations before they can mark a step of progress. For whereas, up to last year the common people of Europe were more or less in sympathy with the ideas of peace and brotherhood, they are now fiercely nationalistic. The present struggle is only the first step in a warfare that they intend to wage to the hilt of the knife. Trade boycotts have been planned and are already being put into force as far as possible. The very "intellectuals" are campaigning against the language, the literature, the art and music of their political enemies.

In short, racial hatreds have been revived with an intensity unparalleled in civilized times.

PERSONS living in neutral countries will only begin to realize the extent of this spiritual disaster when the war is over. But those who, like myself, have been in Europe before and since the outbreak of hostilities are oppressed by it now, today. It is a phenomenon that by no means follows closely the lines drawn by the war. Russia and Turkey have no part in it. They and their opponents are battling in a normal, impersonal way. Japan is geographically so far removed that although recriminations are plentiful, no deep feeling is possible by or against her. But Frenchmen and Belgians hate the Germans as mailed bullies who have outraged them beyond forgiveness. Austro-Hungarians regard the Slavs of the Balkans with the shuddering loathing that a man might bestow upon a snake. And, over and above all, the entire German nation is delirious with a foaming, Berseker fury against England. Observe that I have not said that Germans hate Frenchmen or that Englishmen hate Germans. They do not. In both cases, there is an arrogant presumption of superiority that precludes the sentiment. But since they are both objects of detestation, when the cannons are silenced, they will perforce accept the new gage thrown down.

At the time of the declaration of war, Parisians relieved their feelings by smashing shops bearing German names and mobbing Germans foolhardy enough to appear in the streets. There was no real hatred behind these manifestations, which would have occurred in any Latin community on which a crisis had been forced overnight. But all at once, the preparedness of the enemy took on the aspect of a grim treachery toward France. It became known that many of the German reservists who had returned home had been spies. Stories of atrocities drifted in. The utterances of poets, journalists and orators suddenly acquired an almost mystical significance, and the great hate was born. One records such facts. One cannot explain them. The Napoleonic Wars, devastating as they were, lit no such flame of passion as every subsequent event in this conflict has nurtured in France and Belgium. The following are some of its results:

After the victory of the Marne, but while President Poincaré and his cabinet were still at Bordeaux, the Government ordered the sequestration of all German and Austrian property in France. This meant the seizing not only of real estate, but of every business establishment and residence owned by an alien enemy, of effects left in rented premises and of goods paid for and awaiting delivery. It was confiscation, for although the sequestered property is still intact under the Government's seal, it is not denied that the intention is to sell it after the war for the benefit of France.

Germany, of course, has replied in kind; and both sides have passed laws forever prohibiting their enemies in this war from becoming citizens, and empowering the respective Governments to revoke naturalization papers already issued.

The undermining of the business relations of the future is being diligently pushed forward. If it were being done by act of Parliament, it would not be so bad; for laws can be repealed. But it is being made an issue of patriotism, and sentiment thus aroused will not easily die out. Newspapers throughout France have adopted a standing headline: "Down with German Commerce!" In the daily column devoted to the crusade, they work upon the emotions of their readers, in preference to emphasizing cold facts and figures.

"SHALL our little ones play with dolls made by the hands that have shed the blood of French children?" asked one writer. He was answered instantly by two young girls, Mlle. Brunet, a school teacher, and Mlle. Gournay, a stenographer, who collected one thousand francs among their friends and opened a workshop for the manufacture of French dolls. Had it not been for the passionate phrase coined by a nameless journalist, which they quoted with telling effect, they might have had hard sledding. As it was, they won success at a stroke and blazed the way for scores of imitators. It is a good thing that cheap German toys should be replaced by the far more artistic home product; but that the playthings of children should become symbols of hate is not so good.

In the world of art and science, the anti-German feeling is at white heat. The directors of the National Opera in Paris have voted never again to produce a work composed by a Teuton. In approving this decision, M. Alfred Capus, Academician, dramatist and co-editor of the Figaro, wrote that while the war did not blind him to the fact that Wagner was the greatest operatic genius that had ever lived, his detestation of the dead composer's nationality was relatively much more profound than the enjoyment he might get from his music.

The Société des Artistes Francais and the Société des Beaux Arts, which hold the big Spring Salons, announced formally last October that thereafter they would decline to show pictures by Germans and Austrians. The Autumn Salon, which has made it a point to encourage foreign exhibitors and has depended largely upon exploiting the Munich school of art, hung back, but was quickly forced by a hurricane of protest to take the same step.

Serious attempts have been made to outlaw the teaching of the German language and the sale of German books. The Government is, of course, too liberal to yield to clamor of this kind, but private schools have gained much prestige by advertising that German has been removed from the curriculum, while no bookseller in Paris would be rash enough to display a volume in the hated tongue.

Lest the impression should obtain that the Latin hatred of Germany is confined to the ignorant and the unthinking, consider the utterances of three of the most brilliant men in French and Belgian literature —Anatole France, Gustave Hervé and Maurice Maeterlinck—all of them sincere anti-militarists and believers in human brotherhood, before the war:

"As for the 'appeal of the German intellectuals to the civilized world,' I regard it as a monstrous farce," cried Anatole France, in Le Petit Parisien, referring to the well-known document signed, among others, by the novelists Hauptmann and Sudermann, the philosopher Rudolf Eucken and the zoologist Ernst Haeckel. "It digs a great gulf, which can never be bridged, between Germany and the rest of Europe. It is almost incredible that men of standing in science, art and letters should have defended and glorified Prussian militarism. By doing so they have proved themselves to be more odious than the brutes they set out to justify."

COMMENTING on a sentence in the same German 'appeal'—"Without our militarism, our civilization would have been destroyed long ago."—Gustave Hervé, aflame, beside himself, wrote in his own paper, La Guerre Sociale: "After that, fire into the thick of them, without scruples!"

And the Belgian, Maeterlinck, the gentle Maeterlinck of The Life of the Bee and Treasure of the Humble, had this to say in an article that he gave last September to the press of Europe:

"When the hour shall have come for settling accounts, we shall have forgotten much of what we have suffered, and a blameworthy pity will creep over us and cloud our eyes. We shall be told that the unfortunate German people were merely the victims of their monarch and their feudal castles; that no blame attaches to the Germany we know, that is so sympathetic and cordial, the Germany of quaint old houses and openhearted greeting, the Germany that sits under its lime trees beneath the clear light of the moon—but only to Prussia, hateful, arrogant Prussia; that the homely, peace-loving Bavarian, the genial, hospitable dwellers on the banks of the Rhine, the Silesian and Saxon and I know not who besides—for all these will suddenly have become whiter than snow and more inoffensive than the sheep in an English fold—that they all have merely obeyed, been compelled to obey, orders that they detested but were unable to resist.

"We are face to face with reality now; let us look at it well, and pronounce our sentence; for this is the moment when we hold the proofs in our hands, when the elements of crime are hot before us, and shout out the truth that soon will fade from our memory (he had presented evidence of atrocities perpetrated in Belgium). Let us tell our- (Continued on page 451)

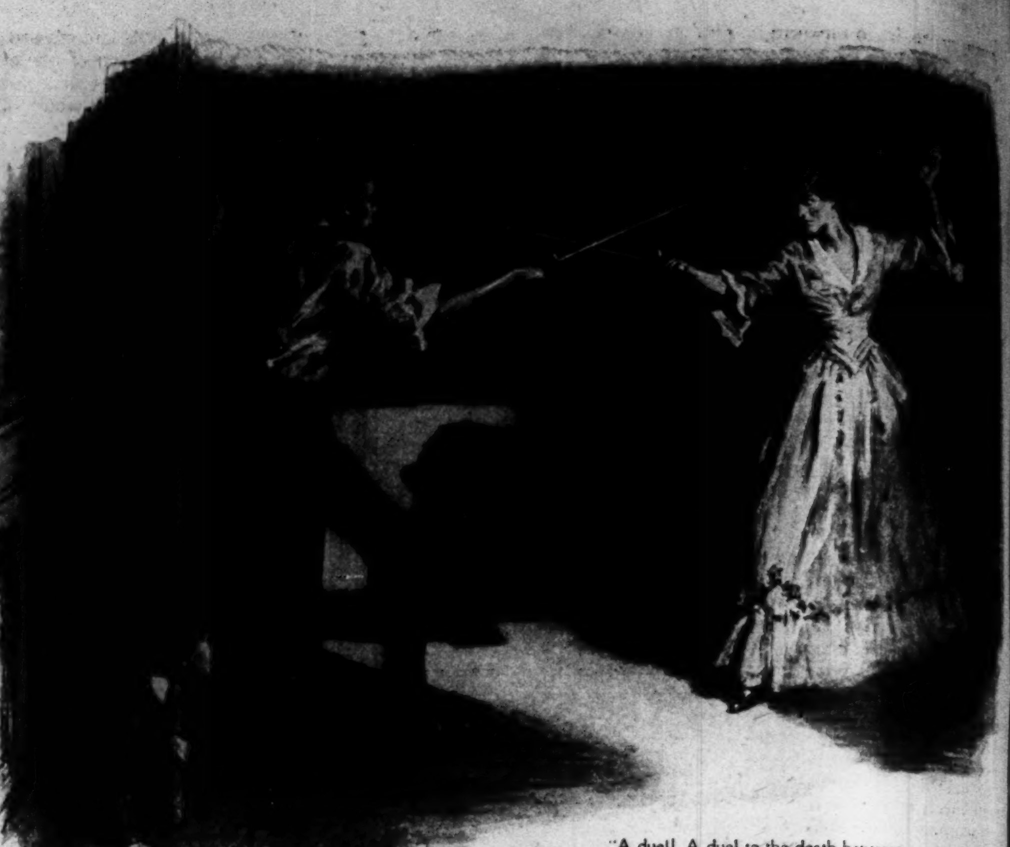
VIOLET STRANGE is called in at midnight, as a detective, to explain the mysterious disappearance of an important page of manuscript in the Van Broecklyn mansion. It is necessary that the mystery be solved before daybreak, suspicion resting upon young Cornell, fiance of Miss Digby, heiress and guest at the mansion. The facts in the case are set before Miss Strange. She decides that the manuscript has slipped through a narrow crack at the bottom of a walled-up doorway, and determines to explore an underground passage in order to recover it. She makes a frightful discovery, as a result of which Mr. Van Broecklyn resolves to uncloset the family skeletons.



"A duel! A duel to the death between this husband and wife, within sight and hearing cf their child!"

"I SHALL have to begin" said he, when they were all seated and ready to listen, "by giving you some idea, not so much of the family tradition, as of the effect of this tradition, upon all who bore the name of Van Broecklyn. This is not the only house, even in America, which contains a room shut away from intrusion. In England there are many. But there is this difference between most of them and ours. No bars or locks forcibly held shut the door we were forbidden to open. The command was enough; that and the superstitious fear which such a command, attended by a long and unquestioning obedience, was likely to engender.

"I know no more than you do why some early ancestor laid his ban upon this room. But from my earliest years I was given to understand that there was one latch in the house which was never to be lifted; that any fault would be forgiven sooner than that; that the honor of the whole family stood in the way of disobedience, and that I was to preserve that honor to my dying day. You will say that all this is fantastic, and wonder that sane people in these times should subject themselves to such a ridiculous restriction, especially when no good reason was alleged, and the very source of the tradition from which it sprung forgotten. You are right; but if you look long into human nature, you will see that the bonds which hold the firmest are not material ones—that an idea will make a man and mould a character—that it lies at the source of all heroisms and is to be courted or feared as the case may be.

"For me it possessed a power proportionate to my loneliness. I don't think there was ever a more lonely child. My father and mother were so unhappy in each other's companionship that one or the other of them was almost always away. But I saw little of either even when they were at home. The constraint in their attitude toward each other, affected their conduct toward me. I have asked myself more than once if either of them had any real affection for me. To my father I spoke of her; to her of him; and never pleasurably. This I am forced to say, or you cannot understand my story. Would to God I could tell another tale! Would that I had such memories as other men have of a father's clasp, a mother's kiss—but no! my grief, already profound, might have become abysmal. Perhaps it is best as it is; only, I might have been a different child, and made for myself a different fate—who knows.

"AS IT was, I was thrown almost entirely upon my own resources for any amusement. This led me to a discovery I made one day. In a far part of the cellar behind some heavy casks, I found a little door. It was so low—so exactly fitted to my small body, that I had the greatest desire to enter it. But I could not get around the casks. At last an expedient occured to me. We had an old servant who came nearer loving me than anyone else. One day when I chanced to be alone in the cellar, I took out my ball and began throwing it about. Finally it landed behind the casks, and I ran to Michael with a beseeching cry, to move them.

"It was a task requiring no little strength and address, but he managed, after a time to shift them aside and I saw with delight my way opened to that mysterious little door. But I did not approach it then, some instinct deterred me. But when the opportunity came for me to venture there alone, I did so, in the most adventurous spirit, and began my operations by sliding behind the casks and testing the handle of the little door. It turned, and after a pull or two, yielded. With my heart in my mouth, I stooped and peered in. I could see nothing—a black hole and nothing more. This caused me to hesitate. I was afraid of the dark—had always been. But curiosity and the spirit of adventure triumphed. Saying to myself that I was Robinson Crusoe exploring the cave, I crawled in, only to find that I had gained nothing. It was as dark inside as it had looked to be from without.

"THERE was no fun in this, so I crawled back, and when I tried the experiment again, it was with a bit of candle in my hand, and a surreptitious match or two. What I saw, when with a very trembling little hand I had lighted one of the matches, would have been disappointing to most boys, but not to me. The litter and old boards lying in odd corners about me, was full of possibilities, while in the dimness beyond I seemed to perceive a sort of staircase which might lead——? I do not think I made any attempt to answer that question even in my own mind; but when, with some trepidation and a sense of great daring, I finally crept up those steps, I remember very well my sensation at finding myself in front of a narrow closed door. It suggested too vividly the one in grandfather's little room—the door in the wainscot which we were never to open. I had my first real trembling fit here, and at once fascinated and repelled by this obstruction, I stumbled and lost my candle, which going out in the fall, left me in total darkness and a very frightened state of mind. For my imagination which had been greatly stirred by my own vague thoughts of the forbidden room, immediately began to people the space about me with ghoulish shapes. How should I escape them; how ever reach my own little room again undetected and in safety?

"But these feelings, deep as they were, were nothing to the real fright which seized me when, the darkness finally braved, and the way found back into the bright, wide-open halls of the house, I became conscious of having dropped something besides the candle. My match-box was gone—not my match-box, but my grandfather's which I had found lying on his table and carried off on this adventure, in all the confidence of irresponsible youth. To make use of it for a little while, trusting to his not missing it in the confusion I had noticed about the house that morning, was one thing; to lose it was another. It was no common box. Made of gold and cherished for some special reason well known to himself, I had often heard him say that some day I would appreciate its value and be glad to own it. And I had left it in that hole and at any minute he might miss it,—possibly ask for it! The day was one of torment. My mother was away or shut up in her room. My father—I don't know just what thoughts I had about him. He was not to be seen either, and the servants cast strange looks at me when I spoke his name. But I little realized the blow which had just fallen upon the house in his definite departure, and only thought of my own trouble, and of how I should meet my grandfather's eye when the hour came for him to draw me to his knee for his usual goodnight.

"That I was spared this ordeal for the first time this very night, first comforted me, then added to my distress. He had discovered his loss and was angry. On the morrow he would ask me for the box and I would have to lie, for never could I find the courage to tell him where I had been. Such an act of presumption he would never forgive, or so I thought as I lay and shivered in my little bed. That his coldness, his neglect, sprang from the discovery just made that my mother as well as my father had just fled the house forever, was as little known to me as the morning calamity. I had been given my usual tendence and was tucked safely into bed; but the gloom, the silence which presently settled upon the house had a very different explanation in my mind from the real one. My sin (for such it loomed large in my mind by this time) colored the whole situation and accounted for every event.

"At what hour I slipped from my bed on to the cold floor, I shall never know. To me it seemed to be in the dead of night; but I doubt if it was more than ten—so slowly creep away the moments to a wakeful child. I had made a great resolve. Awful as the prospect seemed to me,—frightened as I was by the very thought,—I had determined in my small mind to go down into the cellar, and into that midnight hole again, in search of the lost box. I would take a candle and matches, this time from my own mantel-shelf, and if everyone was asleep, as appeared from the deathly quiet of the house, I would be able to go and come without anybody ever being the wiser.

"DRESSING in the dark, I found my matches and candle and, putting them in one of my pockets, softly opened my door and looked out. Nobody was stirring; every light extinguished except a solitary one in the lower hall. That this still burned conveyed no meaning to my mind. How could I know that the house was so still and the rooms so dark because everyone was out searching for some clue to my mother's flight? If I had looked at the clock—but I did not; I was too intent upon my errand, too filled with the fever of my desperate undertaking, to be affected by anything that did not bear directly upon it.

"Of the terror caused by my own shadow on the wall as I made the turn in the hall below, I have as keen a recollection as though it happened yesterday. But that did not deter me, nothing deterred me, till safe in the cellar, I crouched down behind the casks to get my breath again before entering the hole beyond.

"I had made some noise in feeling my way around these casks, and I trembled for fear these sounds had been heard upstairs! But the sounds I then heard myself, choked this fear by a far greater one. Rats! rats in the wall! rats on the cellar bottom. How I ever stirred from the spot I do not know, but when I did stir, it was to go forward, and enter the uncanny hole.

"I had intended to light my candle when I got inside; but for some reason I went stumbling along in the dark, following the wall till I got to the steps where I had dropped the box. Here a light was necessary, but my hand did not go to my pocket. I thought it better to climb the steps first, and softly one foot found the tread and then another. I had only three more to climb and then my right hand, now feeling its way along the wall, would be free to strike a match. I climbed the three steps and was steadying myself against the wall for a final plunge, when something happened—something so unexpected and incredible that I wonder I did not shriek aloud in terror. The door was moving under my hand. It was slowly opening inward. I could feel the chill made by the widening crack. Moment by moment this chill increased; the gap was growing—a presence was there—a presence before which I sank a small heap upon the landing. Would it advance? Had it feet—hands? Was it a presence which could be felt?

"Whatever it was, it made no attempt to pass, and presently I lifted my head only to quake anew at the sound of a voice—a human voice—my mother's voice—so near me that by putting out my arms I might have touched her.

"She was speaking to my father. I knew it from the tone. She was saying words which, little understood as they were, made such a havoc in my youthful mind that I have never forgotten them.

"'I HAVE come,' she said. 'They think I have fled the house and are looking far and wide for me. We shall not be disturbed. Who would think of looking here for either you or me.'

"Here! The word sank like a plummet in my breast. I had known for some few minutes that I was on the threshold of the forbidden room; but they were in it. I can scarcely make you understand the tumult which this awoke in my brain. Somehow, I had never thought that any such braving of the house's law would be possible.

"I heard my father's answer, but it conveyed no meaning to me. I also realized that he spoke from a distance,—that he was at one end of the room while we were at the other. I was presently to have this idea confirmed, for while I was striving with all my might and main to subdue my very heart-throbs so that she would not hear me or suspect my presence, the darkness yielded to a flash of lightning—heat lightning, all glare and no sound—and I caught an instantaneous vision of my father standing with gleaming things about him which affected me at the moment as supernatural, but which, in later years, I decided to have been weapons hanging on a wall.

"She saw him too, for she gave a quick laugh and said they would not need any candles; and then, and then, there was another flash and I saw something in his hand and something in hers, and though I did not yet understand, I felt myself turning deathly sick and gave a choking gasp which was lost in the rush she made into the center of the room, and the keenness of her swift low cry.

"'Garde-toi! for only one of us will ever leave this room alive!'

"A duel! a duel to the death between this husband and wife—this father and mother—in this hole of dead tragedies and within the sight and hearing of their child! Has Satan ever devised a scheme more hideous for ruining the life of an eleven year old boy!

"Not that I took it all in at once. I was too innocent and much too dazed to comprehend such hatred, much less the passions which engendered it. I only knew that something horrible—something beyond the conception of my childish mind, was going to take place in the darkness before me; and the terror of it made me speechless; would to God it had struck me dead!

"She had dashed from her corner and he had slid away from his, as was shown by the next fantastic gleam which lit up the room. It also showed the weapons in their hands, and for a moment I felt reassured when I saw that these were swords, for I had seen them before with foils in their hands, practicing for exercise, as they said, in the great garret. But the swords had buttons on them, and this time the tips were sharp and shone in the keen light.

"An exclamation from her and a growl of rage from him were followed by movements I could scarcely hear, but which were terrifying from their very stealthiness. Then the sound of a clash. The swords had crossed.

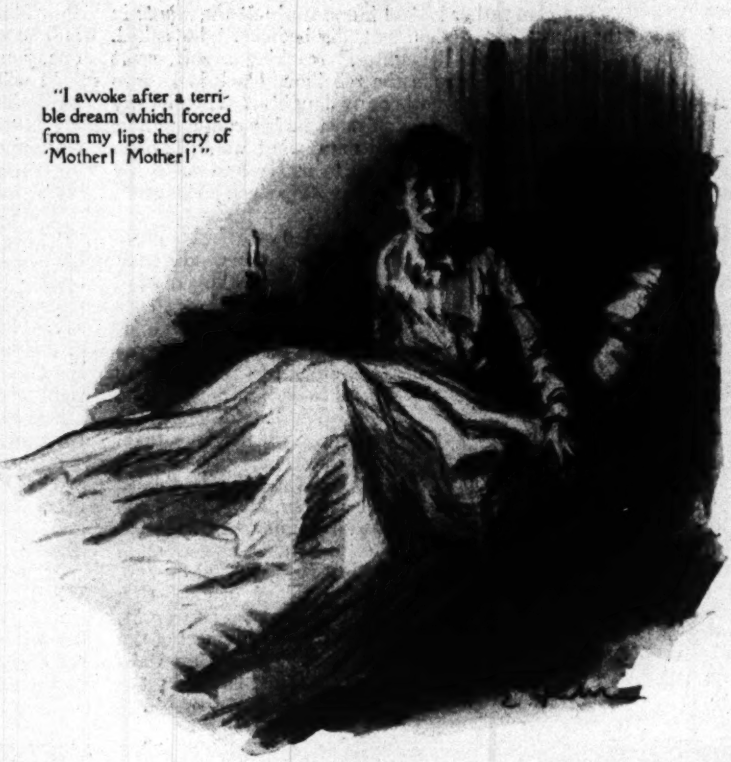
"Had the lightning flashed then, the end of one of them might have occured. But the darkness remained undisturbed and when the glare relit the great room again, they were already far apart. This induced a word from him—the only time he spoke—I can never forget it.

"'Rhoda, there is blood on your sleeve; I have wounded you. Shall we call it off and fly, as the poor creatures in there think we have, to the opposite ends of the earth?'

"I almost spoke; I almost added my childish plea to his for them to stop—to remember me and stop. But not a muscle in my throat responded to my agonized effort. Her cold, clear 'No!' fell before my tongue was loosed or my heart freed from the ponderous weight crushing it.

"'I have vowed and I keep my promises,' she went on in a tone quite strange to me. 'What would either's life be worth with the other alive and happy in this world.'

"He made no answer; and those subtle movements—shadows of movements I might almost call them, recommenced. Then there came a sudden cry, shrill and poignant—(had grandfather been in his room he would surely have heard it)—and the flash coming almost simultaneously with its utterance, I saw what has haunted my sleep from that day to this, my father pinned against the wall, sword still in hand, and before him my mother, triumphant, her staring eyes fixed on his and——



"I awoke after a terrible dream which forced from my lips the cry of 'Mother! Mother!'"

"Nature could bear no more; the band loosened from my throat; the oppression lifted from my breast long enough for me to give one wild wail and she turned, saw, (heaven sent its flashes quickly at this moment) and recognizing my childish form, all the horror of her deed (or so I have fondly hoped) rose within her, and she gave a start and fell full upon the point upturned to receive her. A groan; then a gasping sigh from him, and silence settled upon the room and upon my senses. * * * * * * * * * * *

"That is my story, friends. Do you wonder that I have never been or lived like other men?"

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"I don't think I ever had a moment's doubt that my parents both lay dead on the floor of that great room. When I came to myself—which may have been soon, and may not have been for a long while—the lightning had ceased to flash, leaving the darkness stretching like a blank pall between me and that spot in which were concentrated all the terrors of which my imagination was capable. I dared not enter it. I dared not take one step that way. My instinct was to fly and hide my trembling body again in my own bed. And associated with this, in fact dominating it and making me old before my time, was another instinct—never to tell, never to let anyone, least of all my grandfather, know what that forbidden room now contained. I felt in an indefinable sort of way that the honor of my parents was at stake. Besides terror held me back; I felt that I should die if I spoke. Childhood has such terrors and such heroisms. Silence often covers such, abysses of thought and feeling which astonish us in later years. There is no suffering like that of a child terrified by a secret which it dare not for some reason disclose.

"Events aided me. When, in desperation to see once more the light and all the things which linked me to life—my little bed—the toys on the window-sill—my squirrel in its cage—I forced myself to retraverse the empty house, expecting at every turn to hear my father's voice or to come upon the image of my mother. Yes, such was the confusion of my mind, though I knew well enough even then that they were dead and that I should never again hear the one or see the other——. I was so benumbed with the cold in my half-dressed condition, that I awoke in a fever next morning after a terrible dream which forced from my lips the cry of 'Mother! Mother!'—only that.

"You see I was cautious even in delirium. This delirium and my flushed cheeks and shining eyes led them to be very careful of me. I was told that my mother was away from home, and when after two days of search they were quite sure that all efforts to find either her or my father were likely to prove fruitless, I was informed that she had gone to Europe where we would follow her on my recovery. This promise, offering as it did a prospect of immediate release from the terrors which were consuming me, had an extraordinary effect upon my mind. I got up out of bed saying that I was well now and ready to start. The doctor, finding my pulse normal, and my whole condition wonderfully improved, and attributing it, as was natural, to my hope of soon joining my mother, advised that my whim be humored and this hope kept active, till travel and intercourse with children should give me strength and prepare me for the bitter truth ultimately awaiting me. His advice was heeded, and in twenty-four hours our preparations were made. We saw the house closed—with what emotions surging in one small breast, I leave you to imagine—and then started on our long tour. For five years we wandered over the Continent, my grandfather finding distraction, as well as myself, in foreign scenes and fresh associations.

"BUT return was inevitable. And what I suffered on reentering this house! Had any discovery been made in our absence; or would it be made now that renovation and repairs were necessary? Time finally answered in the negative. My secret was safe and likely to continue so, and this fact once settled, life became endurable, if not cheerful. Since then I have spent only two nights out of this house, and they were unavoidable. When my grandfather died I had the wainscot door cemented in. It was done from this side and the cement painted to match the wood. No one opened the door nor have I ever crossed its threshold. Sometimes I think I have been foolish; and sometimes I know that I have been very wise. My reason has stood firm; how do I know that it would have done so if I had subjected myself to the possible discovery that one or both of them might have been saved if I had disclosed instead of concealing my adventure."

A pause during which expressions of horror had focused on every face; then with a final glance at Violet, and in a voice half hesitant, half filled with appeal, he said:

"What sequel do you see to this story, Miss Strange? I can tell the past, I leave you to picture the future."

Rising, she let her eye travel from face to face till it rested on the one awaiting it, when she answered

"If some morning in the news column there should appear an account of the ancient and historic home of the Van Broecklyns having burned to the ground, the whole country would mourn, and the city feel defrauded of one of its treasures. But there are five persons who would see in it the sequel which you ask for."

When this happened, as it did happen, some few weeks later, the astonishing discovery was made that no insurance had been put upon the great gray mansion or upon the treasures with which it was filled. Why was it that after such a loss Mr. Van Broecklyn seemed to renew his youth? It was a constant source of comment among his friends.

MOONGWE the SON-DAUGHTER

THE SUN BEAT DOWN on the mesa. A procession of old women with ollas climbed the steep trail toward its rim. The blind basketmaker was one of these, and she found her way up the winding stone stair with marvelous deftness, carrying both her water-jug and a great squash in the bight of her shawl, with the band drawn tight across the forehead, the head patiently bent like that of a draft-horse.

Moongwe came running down the slope in the sun, running to the field where the clan father sat in a shelter made of wilting green boughs and watched that no marauding donkeys strayed into the crops. The old man was wasted and brown, naked save for his breech clout; but the small boy had a square apron of cloth depending from his shoulders, hanging down his back, such as the girls among his people wear. Upon this the elder's glance rested as the small boy pulled up beside him and announced an intention of assisting in the crop-watching.

"How shouldst thou watch crops?" inquired the clan father. "It is a man's work—or a boy's. Thou art the daughter of thy mother. Get back to the house and grind the meal; make ready the beans!"

The boy pulled sullenly at the little cloth across his shoulders, badge of his servitude, sign and symbol of his evil destiny, as a fated man-woman.

"I hate it," he burst out at last, tearing off the small manta with sudden resolution, flinging it down and setting a foot on it. "Why do they make a woman of me?"

The old man smoked silently and stared out across the desert where the dust devils gyrated above the trail. The boy regarded him hopefully. This was the clan father, very old and wise, and when the ceremonials were held he was Master of the Kiva—its priest. Surely he could explain wherefore a son is sometimes made a female slave!

"Who was the first man-woman?" the insurgent asked of this source of all knowledge.

He stood now naked, and very much happier, while the old man smoked out his corn-husk cigaret, and bent and rolled another of the sweet native tobacco. Without seeming to note the boy at all, the ancient began to speak in that odd, introverted half voice which belongs to the Hopi:

"The first man-woman was child of the sun and the laughing water. The Colorado swelled great with the snows, laughed and leaped; the sun took her in his arms, and their child was a mighty hero. In our next kachina dance you may see him. He comes again to earth in the dances."

By this time seven-year-old Moongwe was squatted down listening, his eyes like stars, shaking the thick black locks back, forgetful of the hated square of cloth crumpled in the dust before him. Here was a marvel — a man-woman who was child of the gods, and a hero! In the village, such boys as elected to don female dress and grow up into men-women were made drudges of; the hardest work was put on them.

"Ahi—Aho! Little Moongwe, the owl, is that something brave to hear? Thou hast eyes now to match thy name," jested the old man. "Listen, then; this hero fought a great fight once and went home with the Hopi people to feast; but he became so noisy he was so quarrelsome, that the rulers caught him and put women's clothes on him to tame his spirit. That was the first man-woman, little son."

Moongwe returned to his own grievance.

"I have not been noisy. I am never quarrelsome," he asserted with dignity. "I am a good man. They should not make a woman of me."

The clan father looked humorously at the manta in the dust. "Art thou not disobedient?" he asked. "Peace, thou small splinter," reaching a soft, swift brown hand to stroke the rebellious black locks into place. "Has your mother any daughter? Has she any child but Moongwe? You must be her son-daughter; for were you to grow up a man, what would happen when the time came for you to marry and go to the home of your wife and be your mother's son no longer?"

MOONGWE choked and struggled with the big proposition. A Hopi boy loves his mother. He may love his father; but he is liable to know nothing of him. Descent is counted through the maternal side. To the woman belongs house, fields, flocks, and her children; but when her sons marry they go to the clan of the wife, and are lost to her, the daughters remaining to hold such limited ownership as their clan life permits. Before this boy's birth, his father had deserted the mother, because of the blindness which came upon her, as it does upon many desert dwellers. The child was her one hope. She prayed that it might be a daughter who would never leave her, and when a son was born she vowed him from infancy to the bleak, self-abnegating life of the takawukti, or man-woman, that anomalous creature who, twenty-five years ago, lived in every Indian pueblo—village drudge, clan support and strength when the young men go from it, wearing a woman's dress, doing the heavier part of the woman's work, building, plastering, laying up walls and fireplaces, unhindered in communal labors by the woman's shackle and crown of motherhood. He had seen these pitiful beings dressed for the grave in the attire of men, laid dead on the sheepskin, in the garb that life denied them, their painted faces strangely at peace. Moongwe thought of these things, and said:

"I have done what my mother told me to do—even to wearing this cloth over my shoulders—till today. But Naiuchee's mana laughed at me. I could not bear that."

"Naiuchee's mana need not laugh," rejoined the old priest, rising and looking down at the small man on the sand. "The brother of her mother was a man-woman until he died; and right good service he did for the village and the clan. He was a good man-woman, and he was honored in the councils. If you are a good one, you will be honored."

"I will not be honored," Moongwe announced with resolution, getting also to his little bare feet and standing as straight as he could. "I do not like to wear this cloth upon my back now. When the day of my choosing comes I will tell them that I shall kill myself if they try to make a man-woman of me."

The priest frowned.

"The kachinas will whip you, if you talk like that. Go, see how your mother toils up the stairs with her olla." He pointed to where the blind basketmaker paused at the bluff's edge, her empty gaze upon the sky. "She has need of a daughter; your clan has need of children that will not marry and leave it. When the time comes for you to choose, you will make the right choice. You will know that those who love others better than themselves are willing to give up their own happiness. You will be a man-woman."

Silently, Moongwe bent and picked up his square of cloth; it was as though he knelt to the old priest in so doing. With trembling fingers, he adjusted it; and, still in silence, he climbed the trail and led the blind mother home.

All day about a girl's tasks he carried a heavy heart. When evening came, he stole to the threshold, the manta still on his back, pushed the door open and looked out, a shamed thing. Sunset burned, a low, red line, in the west, against which the captive eagles on the flat roofs humped, black and desolate; the high houses made deeper twilight in the streets and in them Game of the Terror was going on. Out of a doorway leaped a naked, painted man, masked, a great knife in his hand. This he swung about his head with uncouth yammerings, running and bounding down the way. Children fled before him, squealing with delight, aware that the defense against this rude playmate was, if he came too close, to sit down instantly, when he, according to the rules of the sport, could not touch them.

Naiuchee's mana, little Tereva, ran past laughing, her three-cornered, kitten face all alight, her big eyes looking from side to side for a playmate; Moongwe drew back with a sobbing breath; he could endure the jeering of the boys, but Tereva's scorn would bite deeper.

Back at the hearthside his mother was singing to herself as she spread the leaden-blue batter of the piki bread on its stone; crooning houses made deeper twilight in the streets and in them Game of the Terror was going on. Out of a doorway leaped a naked, painted man, masked, a great knife in his hand. This he swung about his head with uncouth yammerings, running and bounding down the way. Children fled before him, squealing with delight, aware that the defense against this rude playmate was, if he came too close, to sit down instantly, when he, according to the rules of the sport, could not touch them.

Naiuchee's mana, little Tereva, ran past laughing, her three-cornered, kitten face all alight, her big eyes looking from side to side for a playmate; Moongwe drew back with a sobbing breath; he could endure the jeering of the boys, but Tereva's scorn would bite deeper.

Back at the hearthside his mother was singing to herself as she spread the leaden-blue batter of the piki bread on its stone; crooning the foolish little songs of his babyhood, about paqua, the frog, and Moongwe, the big owl.

"Go and play with them, my mana, my daughter," said the blind woman, speaking on that strange, indrawn breath in which a Hopi woman utters unwelcome words. "They call you."

But Moongwe, the son-daughter that was to be, shut the door suddenly and sat down behind its shelter.

II.
FOURTEEN

IT WAS the year of Moongwe's choosing. He had called himself a man at seven; at fourteen his people rated him so; and in this year he had the choice of whether or no he would live a man's life, take him a wife in another clan and leave the blind mother in her empty home, childless, helpless, to the scant charity of a people who worship youth, strength, hardiness, and give, as nature does, the husks of bare toleration to age.

He was a beautiful boy, straight of limb, slender as a young poplar by some stream's edge, with thick, shining, black hair rippling to his waist, and long-fringed dark eyes that had begun to glow with soft fires. The men of the pueblo, seeing how goodly he was, jeered at the thought of his being made into a female slave. They plucked at the cloth on his back as he went past, and sometimes twitched it off and flung it on the housetop to see if Moongwe would bewail his lot like a girl or fight like a boy. When he had done his young best at punishing the aggressor, and taken punishment himself with a shut mouth, the circle about him would cry out:

"Well done, Moongwe! Thou art a man and not a woman. Why dost thou wear the manta?"

And there was Naiuchee's mana, Tereva; she was a tall girl now, slim, starry-eyed, with quick dimples playing in the bronze bloom of her round cheeks; she might have put her hair up in the shining whorls of the squash blossom and sought a husband, but that she waited for Moongwe. His hated position as a fore-doomed man-woman brought him closer to her; not only their play, but their tasks were the same. Laboring at these they talked of a time when he should have cast off his yoke, when he should be a man, and they could be married and live in Tereva's house. The carelessness of childhood forgot what would become of the blind mother; the blood of youth counseled only of his own future with Tereva; the avidness of adolescence bade haste the day of his freedom.

The old women are the mighty, silent power behind every movement of his people. These feared to have the burden of the blind basketmaker upon their hands when Moongwe should be wedded and gone. A daughter must be made of the son. Gentle creatures, soft spoken, deep bosomed, deep eyed, mothers every one, loving and lovely in spite of the savage toil which had marred their grace; they did not fail to mark these conferences with the mana, and to value rightly their hold upon the boy.

Kept outside the mysteries, made only hand-maidens of the temple, they know where to go for strength in time of need; they planned that Moongwe be sent to the Kiva for a lesson, and urged his clan father to deal strongly with him.

"Leave this child to me," said the old man, whose wrinkles now almost hid the glint of his eyes. "Let him fast while the sun goes three times across the heavens, and when it sets the third time bring him to me at the ladder poles of the Kiva."

They fetched him to the priest at evening, three old women hovering about him in that blind-man's-holiday when phantoms are real, and real things become phantasmal. Tereva watching him go, knowing what his word was to be, made haste to fill a small bowl with the offering of meal which the Hopi girl carries to the doorsteps of the woman whose son she would wed.

At first, down in the Kiva, Moongwe listened to everything sullenly, his blanket drawn over his face till but a gleam bespoke that he saw what was about him. He had fasted for three days, and in that time sleep had visited him sparingly. He was dizzy, sick, confused. The underground temple was lighted by a fire of cedar sticks built at the ladder's foot, its smoke going off through the square opening at the top. Through this, also, the boy could see the night sky, high and black, spangled with many stars, and by and by there rode into it a bit of moon like a broken coin.

They were all gathered there to his undoing—elders of the clan, loving friends who had carried Moongwe on their backs many a time, and who had fashioned for him gaily-painted bows with daintily feathered darts and swinging plumes, to carry a prayer for true aim.

They smoked and smoked, the long straight-stemmed pipe of the Kiva; they talked and talked till it seemed to the wretched boy that his living heart was being pulled out of his body. He thought of the spring runnings at the great festivals when the youths are initiated into their clans. The initiates are sent to circle the blue buttes thirty miles away, humped dim, and shadowy on the horizon like celestial priests at some ceremonial. There came memory of the kick-ball races where one runs joyously naked, and the teams contend for the little oval stone which they kick before them for ten, for fifteen or twenty miles. These teams come up to the mesa laughing, intoxicated, mad, with the long race in the thin air. The women and children meet them at the heads of the rude stone stairs with melons and fruits with freshly roasted ears of corn. Would he be standing among the women when the victors came in? He broke forth with the loud rebellion of the weak.

"You can do this thing to me, because you are stronger than I, because I am one and you are many," he said thickly; "but when it is done I will kill myself. What will it profit my mother and the clan then? She will have neither son nor daughter."

But the old men had seen the insurgence of youth before. They knew how the streams come down the washes in spring—and how they trickle from pool to pool when summer has reduced their heady strength. They let the boy rage, and when he had exhausted his piteous defiance, age and wisdom spoke to him.

Heart-sick, he lay on the Kiva floor. The brown, wrinkled faces circled the fire. After a time, the uprushing smoke began to take to his eyes the form of beings glad to escape from the Kiva, fleeing from the sound of the old men's voices.

They chanted the song of the first man-woman. It is a very old song; many of the words have dropped out of the language of today; but when the Kiva drum added its throbbing under-note like a heartbeat, when the plectrums of deer bone began to snarl on the notched sticks, the deep voices of the old men baying out the words of the story, enough belonged to the common vernacular to enable Moongwe to understand the tale.

The blaze flared, died down, and was replenished. The song had come to that place where the first man-woman, who was a god and hero, speaks. Moongwe was listening, his blanket dropped from before his face, when far away in the night somewhere, a great voice hailed, and the circle about the fire hushed itself to hearken.

Silence.

Then once more that long, heart-shaking call came down the wind, sucked through the smoke, and filled the Kiva. This was the voice of no living man. It was as though a mountain took speech to itself, or a hill shouted.

"Ah-ho-yo! Who calls outside?" intoned the Master of the Kiva.

The reply was nearer. The big voice rang and rolled with mighty reverberations; it uttered in metrical phrase and tuneful cadence; it responded to the men's song.

The boy's heart quivered within him; he could scarcely see or hear, yet he stared up. Against the square of night sky above the fire he had a vision of a great head, black-masked, feather-crowned, of snowy cloud-billows which were the shoulders; the big voice sounded hollow, vast, filling the underground chamber, crying his name.

"Is Moongwe there? I have a word for him."

Drum and notched stick burst into clamor. The Master of the Kiva leaped to his feet fumbling at his buckskin pouch of sacred meal.

"Ah-ho-yah! Ho-yah!" roared the chorus about the fire. "Enter, son of Tawa. Come to us, first-born of fire and water."

Moongwe groveled on his face. When he looked up again a wonderful being was coming down the ladder. Ten feet tall was the apparition to Moongwe's eyes, the buckskin moccasins had no apparent contact with the rungs as it came down, bounding like a cloud, facing outward, not touching anything with its hands. The figure delayed a moment at the ladder's foot, where broken shadow and shine from

It Might Have Been Prevented
It Might Happen to You!

It happened because he didn't keep a tight grip with both hands on the steering wheel of his car.

But being obliged to grip the wheel with both hands all the time robs motoring of its pleasure. He wanted to enjoy the drive with them, he relaxed and then like a flash of lightning from a clear sky came the nerve-racking, bone-breaking, car-smashing tumble into the ditch.

He paid the penalty for failing to equip his car with an Ideal Safety Steering Device to prevent lost motion in the steering gear.

How about your steering gear? Even if you have no serious accidents the slack in your steering gear causes sufficient disalignment of the front wheels to make excessive, expensive wear on your front tires.

Why nurse anxiety, coax calamity or pile up unnecessary tire expense when it can all be avoided by equipping your Ford, Electric or any other car at a very small expense with an

IDEAL
Safety Steering Device

The King of Safety
For All Auto Drivers

The time to prevent accidents is before they happen.

When this positive steering guide is installed it braces your steering rod 17 inches across the center and therefore acts as a new steering rod. If either end of the steering rod should break the Ideal Safety Steering Device would still hold the car to the road.

This device is extremely simple, inconspicuous on the car and can be installed by anyone in 15 minutes, yet it prevents accidents by holding your machine true to course, takes all the shake out of front of car, acts as a shock absorber and saves many times its cost in front tire expense alone.

Thousands of owners of Fords, Electrics and other cars have proven absolutely that the improvement in steering, the safety, comfort, peace of mind afforded by the installation of an Ideal Safety Steering Device is worth many times the expense involved.

A Self-Examination

By Marguerite Wilkinson

FOR WOMEN

Can I run four blocks or walk four miles without being unduly tired?

Can I take a cold plunge without hesitation?

Do I start when a pan falls from a kitchen shelf?

Could I earn my own living if it were necessary?

Do I really deserve the living I get—that is, morally speaking, do I earn it?

Do I keep my personality in my husband's purse?

Is my spiritual life dependent on his social position?

Can I truly say that I have women friends who love me, without envy, jealousy, or the hope that I will be helpful to them in some worldly way?

Have I women friends whom I truly love in this same disinterested manner?

Do I spend any part of my time in an endeavor to learn something?

Do I repeat to other women things I would not care to hear about myself?

Do I offer my friends criticism when I should give sympathy, and advice where I should know enough to give love?

Does my husband know that I am his strong-hearted mate, able to share all fortunes with him?

Do my children trust me with their love affairs?

Do I keep my religion in church or at home?

FOR MEN

Are my hands and eyes steady in an emergency?

Can I sleep on a hard bed and wake in the morning feeling cheerful?

Am I master of the physical house which my soul inhabits, or is it by inclination or weakness, master of me?

Do I really deserve the living which I get, that is, am I worth to society as much as I am paid?

If I were to lose my job and everything else that I have could I begin work again with courage and energy?

Have I the respect of my business associates and the friendship of men to whom I am of no assistance?

Do I ever indulge myself in the pleasure of doing kindnesses for which I have no reason to expect a return?

Do I tell stories and use language that I would not like my wife to hear?

Do I regard it as part of "the game" to hurt other men's business and standing?

Does my wife know that she can trust me and count on me to understand her problems and difficulties?

Are my children afraid of me, or do they feel that they can "work" me, or do they feel proud of me?

Have I any religious convictions of my own, or do I let my wife attend to those things?

FOR BOTH

Do we vote honestly?

Do we give a part of our time to the service of the community?

Are we willing to share good fortune with others, if it comes?

Are we unwilling to let anyone suffer for our ill fortune, if that should come?

Do we respect workers more than idlers?

Are we tolerant in matters which we do not understand?

In Joplin, Missouri

JOHN W. GATES, on one of his southern trips, was stopping at a hotel in Joplin, Missouri, where he was attended by a very dignified negro waiter. The noted plunger became much attached to the negro, who was very attentive and could always be depended upon, or at least Gates thought he could.

One day the negro was so attentive that Gates gave him a $5 bill as a tip.

Next morning at breakfast a dapper, young, and rather yellow negro approached the table. Gates looked him over, then growled:

"Who are you and what are you doing here?"

"Why, boss," replied the stranger, "I'se yoh waiter."

"The devil you are," said Gates, "my waiter is twice as old and black as you."

"Yas sah, I knows he was yoh waiter, sah," said the interloper, "but he done lose you to me in a crap game las' night."

For a Healthy, Happy, Big Baby

YOUR baby's business is to eat and sleep. And he can't sleep if his food is not just right. So follow these rules—

For the first six months give your own breast milk, if you can, and if it begins to fail, add one or two feedings of Nestlé's Food, because that is so close to mother's milk the baby won't feel the difference, a little cool water between feedings.

After six months if you are nursing your baby, wean him gradually on Nestlé's. Give him a spoonful of orange juice once a day, an hour before feeding; a spoonful of fresh beef juice after eight months, and when his teeth come, a bit of hard cracker to exercise them on after his feeding.

Don't give him anything more. Don't give him cow's milk. If you could milk the cow yourself and cover the milk up and carry it to your baby, and you could know that the cow was healthy, it might be safe to give your baby cow's milk. Even then, it would be hard to digest, and you would have to modify it. Don't experiment. Be safe—take the best modification known to science,

Nestles Food

Five times as many mothers use it today as seven years ago. Nestlé's, as it comes to you in its air-tight can, needs only water to make it ready for your baby. Made from the clean milk of healthy cows in sanitary dairies—modified by a cereal that makes the curds as soft and fleecy as in mother's milk, and the things your baby needs, added. Nestlé's is safe for the most delicate baby.

Moongwe the Son-Daughter

the dying fire played upon its pearl-white blanket, its tall kachina mask. Smoke swirled around the snowy moccasins, smoke that got in Moongwe's eyes and half blinded him.

And now, standing in their midst the being sang the song of self-abnegation, of those who so love parents and clan that they make of themselves female slaves so as never to leave their dear ones, to stay always and to serve them—the song of the man-woman, the son-daughter. The drums throbbed under his utterance like the beating of a mighty heart; the notched sticks spoke in it with their guttural snarl. * * * * * *

Is it strange that the fourteen-year-old boy made his promise to this supernatural visitant before it left the Kiva? Dawn was chill and white over the roofs when he crawled up the ladder, clinging like a drowned thing, remembering Tereva as a man in hell remembers the blessed, to find the blind basket-maker standing beside the poles waiting for him.

She caught him in her arms, supported him, and led him toward their home, finding the way by that strange sense of her whereabouts which seemed to come up to her through the soles of her bare feet. His head was on her shoulder; he did not raise it when hurrying steps came down the way, and Tereva stopped beside them with the bowl of sacred meal cherished in her two hands, the offering that was to be the first step to their betrothal.

The basket-maker turned on the threshold, clasping Moongwe close, divining almost before her outstretched hands encountered it, what the girl carried.

"Pass on, daughter of Naiuchee," she said to Tereva; her voice low, but with a swell of triumph in it. "There is no son in this house. Carry your bowl of meal to another doorstep."

The girl shuddered back from the pair, the bowl slipping from her fingers, shattering on the stones at their feet.

"Blind woman," she cried, "what have you done to my man? Oh, Moongwe, is it thus you keep your promise?"

A little way the boy raised his head from his mother's shoulder. With a sick effort, he looked at his love. When he spoke, it was in a voice dragged with difficulty from the pit of despair:

"She has told you the truth. There is no man here. From today, Moongwe is a woman, and his mother's daughter."

III.

TWENTY-ONE

THE BLIND mother was dead; the old clan father long gone to his rest. Moongwe, the man-woman, stood high among his people, holding a position of authority rare for such as he had become. He was silent, grim, contradicting with his free stride and the deep tones of his voice the feminine garments he was forced to wear.

On the day when he denied his manhood and her, Tereva had fled across the desert to her father's clan at Walpi. What matter after that how he learned, when the elders held their disillusioning ceremonies, and boys and girls were flogged in the Kiva, that his supernatural counselor was but a trained singer and dancer from a neighboring pueblo? Tereva was gone. His fate was sealed.

Annual vows in the Kiva had renewed his bondage. No white man knows the tangling filaments that enmeshed his will, turn where he would. Only in one direction did there seem promise of strength to break through; when Naiuchee's mana came back to Oraibi unwed, a great heat seemed to pour into Moongwe's heart; he felt that for her he might dare.

An Indian comes slowly to action. Her clan was urgent that she wed. She was "grinding the meal" for Hanu's mother before Moongwe had fully made up his mind what to do. He offered, as the custom is, to "grind for the bride," and being rated a woman was allowed to kneel at the bin beside her. Much meal had been demanded by the bride-groom's mother, and the clan of Naiuchee meant to add to the amount for pride's sake. Despite his dress—it even seemed more insistently because of it—Moongwe was all male. In his twenty-one years he had grown very tall and strong; his head was carried like that of an antlered buck, in spite of the woman's burdens he had borne. He stole sidelong glances at his companion, and whispered to her as they labored; for the long room was full of women, sitting on the floor, gossiping of the wedding.

"And you are going to marry Hanu?" he demanded, coming at the subject obliquely, Hopi fashion.

His hungry eyes took in all the soft, womanly beauty of her, the length of her jetty lashes where the great, doe-like eyes were cast down, the slim, warm roundness of her brown arm and shoulder that the manta left free, the trembling of her full red lips when she made effort to answer him.

"You and I are grinding the meal for his mother."

"Is he the husband you would have chosen?"

The question seemed cruel enough, and the girl flung out in sudden passion as she answered it:

"You know he is not. Who knows better than you?" she breathed. Then in despairing sullenness: "But it is done."

THE boy's face flashed into triumph. Unmindful of those about the room, he stayed her hand on the stone and bent close to murmur swiftly:

"It is not done. Listen, Tereva! in three days is your wedding feast. On that night while the young men dance in the Kiva the gods will send you—the husband of your choice. Do you understand? Will you wait for him? Will you answer when the owl comes tapping at your window?"

"My daughter," said Naiuchee, "you have ground enough for today; you are weary. Moongwe, may I bid you to my mana's wedding feast?"

Moongwe, the owl, rose up from the mealing bin. He looked at the old woman with a lustrous glance.

"I shall surely be at the wedding of Naiuchee's mana," he said, with that decision which had always been his. "I thank you, mother, for the invitation."

"He called me mother," laughed Naiuchee wonderingly, as the tall figure stepped from her doorway.

The other old women, sitting on the sheepskins, laughed too. "Well, he is motherless, and the child of your neighbor," one said. "Were he a man, any mother of manas might welcome him as a son indeed. Since he is a woman, you should not be angry at such a liberty. The poor owl."

It was February, mind you, Valentine weather, mating time, in spite of the cold. Hanu and all of Moongwe's mates would dance in the Kiva crowned with lilies, brave with paint and barbaric jewelry, footing it to drum and chorus, giving the Bean Dance, which is the ancient play of courtship.

Alone in his house he listened till the sound of the drum told him the men were in the Kiva. His breath came swifter as he crept to the corner of the room, opened a low door that just admitted of his going through on all fours, dived into his storing place and brought out the clothes secretly accumulated since Tereva had returned to the pueblo.

There were corduroy trousers flaring from the knee like a Spanish bullfighter's, and trimmed at the slashings with silver. There was a black velveteen shirt, its turned-down collar silver bordered too, a belt of massive silver plates, weighing several pounds and worth seventy-five dollars. The trader from whom he had got these—who had bought what he had to sell, and had provided, also, a good pony that would carry double—had made a writing to a friend far away from Oraibi, out of the Hopi country. Across the desert there was work for Moongwe, and a man's portion.

Night had come on the wings of a storm, shrieking with flails of sleet in her hands. Stepping from his door into the tempest, he saw the light in Tereva's window. From his Kiva came up the deep-mouthed baying of the chorus, the throbbing of the drum, the thud and lisp of moccasined feet on the stone-paved floor. There danced Hanu, who thought to wed the owl's chosen. Moongwe laughed far down in his throat.

He crossed the street, and, looking through beside the lamp set in the tiny

New Vigor for Overworked Nerves—

WHEN after weeks of overwork, intensified by the endless worries of business, the weakening nerves fly signals of distress, no help is more welcome than the restorative aid that Sanatogen gives.

For Sanatogen brings in concentrated form nutrients that are eagerly, easily taken up by the famished cells, there to revitalize and endue them with new and energetic health. And as helps rebuild the system's wasted energies, enriching the blood and recalling appetite and restful slumber, it gathers up a new store of vigor and instills a new vibrancy into the jaded system. But what this restoring, replenishing of the bodily forces means to you can best be judged from what Sanatogen has done for so many others.

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

For example, Col. Henry Watterson, the famous Editor writes:

"I feel I owe it to truth to state that I have made a thorough trial of Sanatogen and that I have found it most efficacious and beneficent. I do not think I could have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers."

Read, too, what Madame Olive Schreiner, the gifted writer, writes:

"Nothing that I have taken for years has given me such a sense of vigor as Sanatogen."

And think of the 21,000 physicians who have written enthusiastic letters endorsing Sanatogen—and then judge if you can longer deny your nerves the new vigor that Sanatogen will give.

Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere in three sizes, from $1.00 up.

Baby's Future and Mother's Welfare Assured

"Just before baby comes" is the time when a woman needs "poise" and "balance." And there is a double reason for exercising extreme care at this time. Not only is the welfare of the mother to be given every consideration—but she wishes baby to be born lusty and vigorous.

A Perfect Physical Condition Brings Mental Poise

Two things contribute to a perfectly organized body. They are Plenty of Fresh Air and Plenty of Sound Sleep. When these are obtained it is a certainty that every function harmonizes with every other function. Frequently the sound sleep is not possible. Usually this is the result of an impaired digestion—nervous debility may be a contributing cause. Something is needed that will surely tone and, at the same time, satisfy the bodily demands that its tonic properties set up. It is safe to say that such an ideal combination is malt and hops as found in Pabst Extract, The "Best" Tonic.

A direct nerve food is found in choice, fully-matured hops. It is the lupulin. This acts directly upon the frayed nerve centers, while the tonic properties of the hops also set up a healthy stomachic action with a demand for nutriment. And this is immediate'y supplied by the extract of rich barley malt, which supports the bodily wants and in its predigested form is acceptable to the weakest stomach.

A Boon to Nursing Mothers

At no time does this combined tonic and nutriment demonstrate its merits so strikingly as when employed by the nursing mother. It has those extraordinary properties that, at once, stimulate the lacteal glands and support them. Its beneficient action is soon apparent on the cheeks of the little one.

Pabst Extract is the Ideal Form of Malt and Hops

Such a combination provides the necessary elements required by nature to restore and maintain perfect health. It is a concentrated liquid food.

Beware of Imitations

loophole window to guide wayfarers, he beheld the bride in her snowy blanket sitting on a bench near the fireplace. On the floor was a great bowl of steaming food. About the room on skins or blankets drowsed the women of her clan, waiting for the men to come from the Kiva and to feast with them. Moongwe caught a handful of earth and cast it through the opening.

It fell with a little soft spatter of sound at the bride's feet. He thought he heard her breath drawn in quickly as she sprang up. Then, slowly she stole a look around the room, and advanced toward the door.

"Whither goest thou, mana of mine?" Naiuchee roused herself to ask sleepily.

"I go to see if the moon is risen so that my bridegroom may come," Tereva answered unsteadily.

"Ahi!" cried one of the old women sitting up. "She can not wait; she goes to her bridegroom. Was ever so eager a bride?"

The others wakened enough to laugh. Tereva, taking the door in her hand, opened it tremblingly. She pulled it shut behind her and groped forward.

"Is it thou?" she breathed. "I am so frightened. The mother of Hanu is in there. Hanu's people are in the Kiva. Even now, they come for me. This is an ancient law which we break. I will not go."

As she spoke his arm was round her, the little feet in the white bridal moccasins were hurrying to his pace. They crossed the bar of light from the window. "Oh, Moongwe, how strong and brave and wise you are! And how beautiful you look in your man's dress!" she whispered. "What should I fear in your arms? Take me where you will. I am all yours."

THEY were gone. Down the steep they swept with the scurry of the storm. Out into the desert and the dark they voyaged, even as Hanu and his mates came shouting up from the Kiva, and marched with flitting lights to the bride's door.

Still stands Oraibi, reared aloft upon its cliffs, the sands of the desert sucking with dry lips at the foot of its stone steps. And in all the seven streets of the pueblo you will look in vain for the house of Moongwe. It has been laboriously razed to the stones from which it was builded; the beams of it given to the fire. Far away, in the country of the Lagunas there is living today an old man and his faithful mate—a famous teller of tales, this Moongwe, and none do his hearers love so well as the story of his own rebellion and escape. He has the litheness of a once famous runner, the bright eye of a great marksman, the lasting beauty of a lover who is beloved. And in no Hopi village today is there a man-woman to be found. The custom dies hard. The Zunis hold to it; you will hear of a few among the Lagunas; but of his own people, Moongwe, the owl, was the last.

The War's Legacy of Hate

selves now, therefore, now, that all we shall be told hereafter will be false; and let us unflinchingly adhere to what we decide at this moment, when the glare of the horror is on us."

I have said that the Austrian's hatred of his enemies to the South is a venomous thing. It is returned with interest. Every Balkan Slav that I have met has said that he would kill like a mad dog the Austrian civilian who attempted to settle on Serbian or Montenegrin soil after this war is over. In illumination of the Austrian viewpoint, I have space to quote only the following statement made in Paris by one of their diplomats in the stormy days of last July:

"Austria was perfectly right in precipitating the crisis with Serbia. The Serbians are a despicable race. They have studiously insulted all Germanic people with whom they have come in contact. Societies exist for that one purpose For years these insect pests have crawled over the wall from Serbia into Austria to sting our national pride in one way or another. The assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand was the crowning affront. The time had come for Austria to put down her foot and exterminate these vermin."

To turn to the German's rage against England, it is due less to the long-standing commercial rivalry between the two countries than to the feeling, admitted by many honest Germans, that because of England, and England alone, the Allies will probably win the war. He chooses to hold that England treacherously concealed until the last moment her intention of fighting, and that Sir Edward Grey's pretended solicitude for Belgian neutrality was one of the blackest cynicisms of history. But whatever his excuse, he does hate England to a degree that can best be measured by his favorite Teutonic adjective: "Kolossal."

North of Paris, after the Marne, a French corporal translated for me certain entries in the diary of a Prussian officer, sprawled dead in a trench, his contorted face still grinning toward the positions from which the English had charged in the battle that smashed the plans of the German General Staff.

"The swine-dogs," ran the record of abysmal hate, according to my notes, "the vile, unspeakable English! We captured them in droves at Mons, but treated them altogether too well. Would that I could have ordered my men to bayonet every one of the long-legged horde that gave themselves up that day. It is due to these wretches that Germany must pay so heavy a price for victory. But when we get to England—Ah, then, we shall make them pay! Belgium will be nothing to it. We shall level their cities, and kill, kill, kill!"

The war correspondent of a New York paper told me that he found in Germany that every street and building with an English name had been rechristened, that the British flag was nailed to the floor as a foot mat before bars and tobacco counters, that even an American was insulted if he dared to speak English.

In August, an Englishwoman, heartbroken as a result of her experiences in getting out of Germany, said to me:

"The enthusiasm for the war against the Allies is unbounded, but the hatred is all for us. I have lived in Leipsig for ten years and thought I had friends there, but from the moment that England declared war I was treated as a pariah. Little presents I had given to German intimates were returned to me with notes worded thus: 'Because you, as an Englishwoman, cannot or will not see that the bloodguiltiness of this war rests with your people, it is better that we should not meet again!'"

German fury has probably found its most poisonous expression in Ernst Lissauer's "Hymn of Hate Against England," which first appeared in the weekly Jugend and immediately became a second national anthem.

During the lifetime of those who have fought, it will be impossible for an Englishman to live in Germany or a German in France. No one can predict how long it will be before the business and social relations of one short year ago are restored. Hate like that of which I have tried to reflect the feeling is not lived down in a day. It will be the war's most fearful legacy.

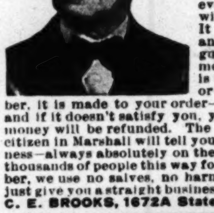
Don't Wear a Truss!



Brooks' Appliance is a new scientific discovery with automatic air cushions that draw the broken parts together and bind them as you would a broken limb. It absolutely holds firmly and comfortably and never slips, always light and cool and conforms to every movement of the body without chafing or hurting. It is made to your measure and sent to you on a strict guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. The price is so low that anybody, rich or poor, can buy it. Remember, it is made to your order—sent to you—you wear it—and if it doesn't satisfy you, you send it back and your money will be refunded. The banks or any responsible citizen in Marshall will tell you that is the way we do business—always absolutely on the square and we have sold to thousands of people this way for the past 30 years. Remember, we use no salves, no harness, no lies, no fakes. We just give you a straight business deal at a reasonable price.

Skid

No need to pay an average of $4.25 for tires when $2.48 buys the famous Goodyear-Akron, single tube—guaranteed. For here is a quality tire through and through. No better tire is built.

The price is so low because of enormous output and modern equipment. Here up to 10,000 pneumatic tires are produced daily. And we are content with small profit.

Goodyear-Akron Bicycle tires are made by the same experts that make Goodyear Automobile and Motorcycle tires, which hold top place in their fields. Tires made of lesser quality sell for less—but poor tires are not worth while. For only $2.48 you can get the world's best—a guaranteed tire of beauty, durability and service.

How to Get Them

The Smooth Tread, size 28 by 1½, costs you $2.48 per tire. The Non-Skid, sizes 28 by 1⅜, 1½ or 1⅝, at $2.75. Ask your dealer for them. If he hasn't them, and you insist, he will get them from our nearest branch. Remember this when you go to buy tires.
